THIS VOLUME IS DEDICATED TO OUR BELOVED CHILDREN, THEIR DESCENDANTS AND KINDRED.

May it be the means of increasing the love of family, of stimulating a pride in remote ancestry and of awakening an appreciation of the value of perpetuating family history through years to come. Remembering that "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," and "How much better it is to get wisdom than gold;" may it strengthen within them the desire to leave upon the pages of history an esteemed and honored name, is the prayer of its

AUTHORS.

EXPLANATION.

The full-size figures preceding a name indicate the number of the generation; the small figures indicate the number in the family. This plan could not be followed out uniformly for lack of data, but its value will be apparent to those interested in family history.

INTRODUCTION.

In the preparation of this work the authors have had the assistance of so many friends who take a general interest in genealogy that they could not undertake in the space allotted to them to mention the names of a tithe of them. Conspicuous among those, however, to whom their sincere thanks are due, are Mr. Thomas M. Green, of Danville, Kentucky, the late Henry Howell Lewis, of Baltimore, Dr. Edmond J. Lee of Philadelphia, Dr. James A. Dibrell, of Little Rock, Arkansas, Mr. Robert S. Hatcher, Lafayette, Indiana, the late Mrs. Mary Starling Payne, of Hopkinsville, Kentucky, and Mrs. Sarah T. L. Anderson of Ivy Depot, Virginia, also her brother R. L. Scott of Texas.

In making up the genealogies of the different families whose names appear in this volume, completeness has been the main object in view. It has not, of course, been possible to entirely accomplish this object, but enough has been given to enable any one interested to supply the missing links and thus connect the different parts which may become apparent in any broken chain. At the outset it was the design of the authors to prepare a history exclusively for their children, but as usual in such cases the work has far outgrown the original design. While it is true that no name has been included in this volume, the bearers of which are not related in some degree of consanguinity to the children of the authors, it has been found necessary to include even the very remote, in order to even approximate the completeness which was desired in the general scope of the work. While it may be charged that in this the writers were actuated by selfish motives, it may also be replied that it was a selfishness prompted not by pecuniary gain, but a pardonable pride, in which every descendant of every name contained in the book is entitled to a full share.

This is strictly a work of genealogy, and is in no sense intended to trench on the field properly belonging to the biographer. Where sketches of individuals appear, the author's aim has been to connect the person alluded to with contemporaneous history. In a few instances more extended notices have been given of individuals whose lives have been intimately associated with the upbuilding of the country and whose deeds have contributed to her greatness.

It is not to be supposed that in the preparation of a family history embracing many names, extending through several hundred years and covering from seven to eleven generations, the writers claim to set forth an unbroken line of heroes, statesmen, saints and sages, superior to any families that have existed in this or any other country. On the contrary, all that is claimed for this volume is that some of those whom it mentions have left their impress upon the times in which they lived. Others, disregarding tradition, and failing to avail themselves of ancestral advantages, have illustrated the irrevocable law of cause and effect and passed out of view.

Every source has been exhausted to obtain all available information. Libraries have been ransacked, records have been overhauled; deeds, marriage certificates, church registers and tombstones, grown gray with centuries of age, all have been brought into requisition.

It may be proper to add that this has been a labor of love, both for the work itself and for those who will be benefited by it. Having spent years of labor and much money, and having traveled hundreds of miles in search of information, we bequeath our work, incomplete as it is, to posterity with a hope that some other lover of genealogy may take it up where we have left off, remedy our errors and complete what we have left undone.

The American people have neglected nothing so much as family history, and it is only after one hundred years of national existence that we have waked up to a realization of a failure to retain our identity. With the close of the Revolution which resulted in our independence, this great boon having been obtained at the cost of every conceivable sacrifice, we were naturally carried away with the idea of freedom. The victory to our arms had not been achieved by any one class, nor had questions of ancestral precedence played any part in the struggle. All classes and conditions in whose veins coursed patriotic blood had stood shoulder to shoulder against a common foe, and these old heroes, seeking no distinction the one over the other, allowed their family histories to be swallowed up for the time in the national glory. This feeling, very natural and proper under the circumstances which gave rise to it, would not, however, have predominated had not other causes arisen which conspired to cast odium upon American heraldry. A very considerable Tory element remained in the country after the war was over, while there were others who did not rise to the standard of the Tories, having taken no part in the politics of the country or exposed themselves to the dangers and hardships of war. Still another and lower class, who had neither ancestral nor individual standing, had prospered and become prominent under the liberal opportunities afforded by the new government. These three classes made up a large proportion of the population and had no sentiments in common with the patriot element, and by the time the second generation had come upon the stage of action, the term "first families" had become one of reproach instead of distinction, and any attempt to trace an ancestry or erect a family tree was held up to derision and laughed to scorn.

The fact that one family chooses, for reasons satisfactory to itself, not to write its history, or that another family has no history to write, is no reason why family history should not be written. Families make up nations and a history is as important to one as the other. A nation of families who have no histories is without material for a national history. It is not national history that makes great names. But names who have performed great deeds and thus established historic families make a nation great and give it a history. The names which go to make up this history are so closely interwoven with the history of the country that it is impossible to trace their genealogy without interspersing many historical events of national interest.

Several of the families date back to a very early period in English history, and some were quite well established in France before coming to England, but only such reference will be made to these families prior to their coming to America as will be necessary to trace their line of descent.

The Rev. Mr. Hayden, in his "Virginia Genealogies," argues in his article on descent that the most prominent Virginia families are not able to trace their descent beyond the fifteenth century, and asserts that neither George Washington nor General Robert E. Lee knew anything, save by tradition, of the immediate line of their English descent.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

It is known that the name of Lee was interwoven with the history of England since the days of William the Conqueror, 1066, although Dr. Edmond J. Lee, in his "Lee of Virginia," ignoring current and authentic history and recognizing nothing but the public records, does not bring the name down from that period. It is well known that the first Richard Lee of American history brought his lineage with him when he came to America. That many lost sight of the lineage in the lapse of generations is not denied, but the history was preserved nevertheless.

While there are very few families who can trace their descent with equal certainty from so remote a period as that of Lee, yet there are others who have no trouble in tracing their lineage much further back than that of the fifteenth century. The Bruce family of Virginia, and other American names descending from and connected with them, trace their Scotch descent from the eleventh century, and the same may be said of some of the families of this volume.

Trusting to the charity of indulgent friends and the magnanimity of the reading public, this volume is given to the numerous descendants of the names of which it treats, with a full knowledge of its imperfections but in the confident belief that the original information, heretofore unpublished, will compensate to a large extent for its shortcomings.

THE AUTHORS.

LEWIS FAMILIES.

This is one of the oldest names in English history and one of the most numerous and distinguished in American history. It is claimed by many reputable genealogists that the name was originally spelled "Louis," and was known in France as early as the eighth century, when that country was an integral part of the Roman Empire. Louis I, born 778, came to the throne upon the death of his father, Charlemagne, in the year 814, and his son, Louis, upon the dismemberment of the empire, A. D. 817, became king of Bavaria and other German provinces. These facts show that the surname was well known at this early period of European history, and a ta later period genealogy proves that it became one of the most numerous and distinguished of family names in France and England. It is a favorite past time with many genealogists to attempt to prove that all of the Lewis name in America descended from one common stock of Huguenot refugees who fled from France on the revocation of the "Edict of Nantes" in 1685, that three brothers fled to England, and that from these the American supply was furnished; but the records show that in many of the counties of England there were any number of the name to be found several centuries before this event, and, indeed, there were numbers of them in Virginia previous to this time.

There is ample proof, however, that Louis of France and Lewis of England are identical. It is equally true that many of the former name fled from France to England upon the revocation of the "Edict of Nantes." It is also well known that the Huguenot refugees who spelled the name "Louis" in France, adopted the English spelling as soon as they crossed the channel; and as the name was known in France centuries before it appeared in England, it is an accepted proposition that the family name, regardless of its spelling, was originally French.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

It is not claimed that the Lewis families of America, or any one of them, are of royal descent. The fact that Charlemagne named his son Louis, and that several centuries afterwards some of the name crossed to England and called themselves Lewis, does not prove that they were descended directly or collaterally from Charlemagne, nor does the fact that an exuberant author with a vivid imagination runs through twenty generations and about six hundred years of English history from Alfred the Great to Robert Reade without a single specific record reference or historical citation, prove that the descendants of Robert Reade were of royal descent; but these and kindred incidents do show that wherever found, whether on the banks of the Tiber or Seine, the Thames, the Shannon or the James, they were the peers of royalty and the leaders of men, and the sequel shows that when they were transferred to a free soil and were permitted to breathe a free atmosphere, they became the foremost champions of human liberty. Mr. Hayden copies from the pen of Mr. John Lewis of Llangollen, Spotsylvania county, Virginia, the early history of the Lewis family. Of the three brothers, heads of the respective Lewis lines in Virginia, he brings Zachary to Virginia as a pioneer of the family in 1692, and adds that his brother, from whom the nephews of Washington descended, having favorable accounts from him, came to Virginia also, and settled on the Rappahannock, when in fact General Robert Lewis from whom Washington's nephews descended, came to Virginia in 1635 more than forty years before Zachary came, and indeed, before Zachary was born. In the attempt of Mr. William Terrell Lewis to account for the early history of the Lewis family, Mr. Lewis is more extravagant than most genealogists. He provides us with four brothers, but disposes of one of them by sending him to Portugal, thus leaving three as founders of the Virginia family. On the ninth page of his book, quoting from "Washington and his Generals," by Lippincott, he says: "Andrew Lewis, son of a gentleman who came to Virginia from Ireland, whither a Huguenot ancestor had fled from France upon the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, settled in Augusta county, Virginia," etc.; when in fact General Robert Lewis, one of the alleged brothers of this Huguenot ancestor, who he says fled at the same time, was in Virginia fifty years prior to the event referred to.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

The name of Louis in continental Europe and Lewis in England is too old and too numerous to be traced to a common origin. The name doubtless had a common origin, but it would be folly to undertake to trace it. Indeed, the name Lewis is too numerous in America, too widely diffused and traceable to too many different sources to admit of the "three-brothers" theory.

It is not known how many distinct branches of the Lewis family there are in America. For several centuries previous to the settlement of this country, the name of Lewis was as numerous by comparison in Wales as that of Smith in America to-day, and in every portion of the country are to be found distinct branches that run back to a period so remote as to render reliable trace impossible. Francis Lewis, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, was from New York, while Ellis Lewis, an eminent jurist, was of Pennsylvania. Every portion of New England has its representative Lewis families, all of them of Welsh origin, but traceable to different sources. These pages, however, will be confined to the Lewis families of Virginia, which embrace five distinct branches, between whom there is no traceable relation. These branches may be considered under their respective heads, as follows; General Robert Lewis, of Wales, who settled in Gloucester county, Virginia, in 1635; John Lewis, also of Wales, who settled in Henrico county, Virginia, in 1660; John Lewis, also of Wales, who settled in Hanover county in 1675; Zachary Lewis, also of Wales, who settled in Middlesex county, Virginia, 1692; and John Lewis from Donegal county, Ireland, who settled in Augusta county, 1732.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

GENERAL ROBERT LEWIS.

General Robert Lewis, the first of the name in America known to history or genealogy was a native of Brecon, Wales. Together with his wife, Elizabeth, he sailed from Gravesend, England, April, 1635. So much has been asserted and denied concerning this ancestor that the very mention of his name invites criticism. It may be that too much has been claimed for him, and that these claims have given rise to adverse criticisms. However this may be, whatever the claims may have been that have aroused the swarm of critics into action, certain it is that they have denied every claim that has ever been made, and do not hesitate even to deny his existence. In the "William and Mary Quarterly" for January and April, 1901, it was boldly assumed that no such person had ever existed, and that General Robert Lewis was simply a "traditional myth."

The history of General Robert Lewis, however, was not allowed to become extinct in consequence of the destruction of the records, but was preserved by Captain Henry Howell Lewis, Thomas Warring Lewis, and others with the assistance of data furnished by their immediate ancestors; so what we have of this ancestor of the Lewis family is not tradition, but a revival and perpetuation of the records.

The controversy between Mr. Tyler, Mr. Stanard and J. M. McAllister upon the early history of Gen. Robert Lewis will be found published in full in the second volume of the "Historical Collections of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, Daughters American Revolution," on file in the Carnegie Library, Atlanta, Georgia.

According to Mr. Henry Howell Lewis of Baltimore, who devoted years of his life to the pursuit of his family history both in England and in America, General Lewis, with his wife, Elizabeth, sailed from Gravesend, England, and settled in Gloucester county, Virginia. The maiden name of his wife is not known and his descendants have been unable to trace it in England. We refer to him in these pages as General Robert Lewis upon the authority of Bishop Meade and others who speak of him as being favorably known to English history and having held a commission in the British army, and his standing at home may be inferred from the fact that, according to the same authority, he brought with him a grant from the crown of 33,333 1-3 acres of land which was located in that portion of York county which is now included in the county of Gloucester. According to Mr. Thomas M. Green of Danville, Kentucky, who is most eminent authority on all genealogical subjects, General Lewis died about 1645, and previous to 1650 his widow married Major Longley or Langley. Mr. Henry Howell Lewis further states that Robert Lewis had two sons, William Lewis, and John Lewis; that William Lewis died without issue, and that John Lewis married Isabella Warner, and built Warner Hall on the Severn river, which enters into Mob Jack bay, near the mouth of the York. "Their tombs are there. I have seen them. It is to be supposed that their father and mother lie there also, as the cemetery is large and has many tombs and slabs. These are facts from the tombs and church records. What more can we desire."

It is evident that Mr. Lewis, in speaking of the numerous tombs and slabs at Warner Hall, refers to those that have become defaced and illegible from age, and doubtless the tombs of Robert Lewis and his wife are among those. It is a noteworthy fact that he says that, "these facts are taken from the tombs and church records." He asserts that John Lewis, who married Isabella Warner, was buried at Warner Hall, that he saw the tomb and that he was the son of Robert Lewis, the emigrant. "What more can be desired." No reputable authority has been known to question the authenticity of Mr. Lewis' statements. Mr. Tyler and Mr. Stanard in their controversy with Mr. McAllister, insisted that what Mr. Lewis said was tradition. Mr. Lewis, however, emphatically asserts that his statements were facts taken from the tombs and church record. Both high character and the thoroughness of his research have given currency to any utterance that he might make on the subject.

It is claimed that Robert Lewis was the son of Sir Edward Lewis of a noble line of ancestry, and Mr. Henry Howell Lewis is quoted as authority; but this is not considered authentic, though it may be true. Mr. Lewis never at any time intimated to the authors that he had succeeded in establishing the English line of General Lewis from the records, although generally accepted tradition goes far to establish this theory.

In addition to the statement of Mr. Henry Howell Lewis in regard to the identity of John Lewis, who married Isabella Warner, we have the authority of Mr. Thomas M. Green of Danville, Kentucky, who furnishes the most unquestioned record proof, and leaves no room to doubt that this John Lewis was the son of Robert the emigrant. Mr. Green cites Henning's Statutes at Large, 1769 and at other times, with reference to entailed estates. These statutes show that entailed estates in New Kent and Hanover counties, settled upon William Lewis by his father, reverted to the descendants of John Lewis who married Isabella Warner, William Lewis having died without issue. These statutes further prove that General Robert Lewis had two sons, only one of whom left issue, William Lewis as is shown above having died without issue, and his estates having reverted to the descendants of his only brother; and John Lewis the survivor, having married Isabella Warner built Warner Hall.

2 THE FIRST JOHN LEWIS.

This member of the Lewis family was the second son of General Robert Lewis of Brecon, Wales, born about 1640. He married Isabella Warner and built Warner Hall on the Severn river in Gloucester county, Virginia. Mr. William Terrell Lewis, author of "Genealogies of Lewis family," gets the Warner Hall line very much confused. Mr. Lewis himself is a descendant of John Lewis of Hanover who came to Virginia about 1675. Three-fourths of his book is devoted to genealogies of this line, on which he is undoubted authority, but on other lines he has been doubtless misled by unfounded traditions. These genealogies make William Lewis the father of Charles Lewis, of the Byrd, who married Mary Howell, and hence the ancestor of a numerous line of descendants; while Hennings's Statutes at Large show conclusively that William Lewis, the son of Robert the Welshman, died without issue.

The John Lewis we now have under consideration was the sole survivor of his family, so far as we have any account. He married Isabella Warner, daughter of Captain Augustine Warner of the British army, and sister of Speaker Augustine Warner. It has been claimed by some genealogists that this John Lewis was born in England and that he married there, but all of the circumstances and data go to prove that he was born several years after his father came to America, and that his wife's parents were in Virginia long before he was married, and, indeed, before either he or his wife were born. The exact date of the arrival in Virginia of Captain Augustine Warner of the British army is not known. The first that is definitely known of him in the colony, is the registry of his son Augustine when he entered the "Merchant's Tailors School" in London, in which he stated that he was born in Virginia in 1642. The first appearance of Captain Augustine Warner on the Virginia records is the entry of a tract of 2,500 acres of land, in connection with his wife Mary, about the branches of old Cheese Cake Town, south side of the Piankitank river, October 26, 1652, and his name first appears as burgess from York in the same year.

From the fact that Augustine Warner, Sr., and his wife, and Speaker Augustine Warner, were buried at Warner Hall, and their tombs were marked 1662, 1674, 1681, respectively, and that of General Robert Lewis cannot be located, it has been insisted by the school of chronic objectors that the Warner Hall property belonged to the Warner and not to the Lewis family. Several facts stand forth prominently, however, which preclude the possibility of any such contention being successfully made. General Robert Lewis died about 1645 while Speaker Augustine Warner did not die until 1681. Mr. Henry Howell Lewis tells us that there are numerous slabs that could not be deciphered on account of age and that doubtless the tomb of Robert Lewis was among them. He tells us further that Robert Lewis settled on the Severn and that John Lewis built Warner Hall on the same river. Thus we have the location of the estate of Robert Lewis settled, and we find that Warner Hall was built upon this property. The first record evidence that we have of the presence of Augustine Warner, Sr., in Virginia is the entry of the tract of land above referred to at Cheese Cake Town, south side of Piankitank river, October 26, 1652. Thus we have record evidence of the Warner homestead fifteen or twenty miles northwest of Warner Hall. In confirmation of this fact, the epitaph of Elizabeth Warner Lewis states that she was born at Cheese Cake, the name of the Warner homestead, November 24, 1672. So that, taking it for granted that Elizabeth Warner was born at home, there can be no question as to the homestead of the two families. There is nothing remarkable about the elder Warners being buried in the Lewis burying ground when it is considered that their oldest daughter had married John Lewis about 1660. Another fact which goes to prove that this was not a Warner burying ground is that none of the younger Warners were buried there.

Mrs. Stubbs of New Orleans, author of "Early Settlers of Alabama," in an article published in the Joseph Habersham column of the Atlanta Constitution, June, 1902, asserted that the Warner Hall property was patented by the first Augustine Warner, and undertook by a series of arguments to prove her position. It is clear that Mrs. Stubbs was conscientious in her claims, but her premises being erroneous, all that followed was simply a comedy of errors. She claimed that Augustine Warner resided within the bounds of Abingdon Parish and that he gave a communion service to that church; and as Warner Hall was in Abingdon Parish she claimed that fact settled the location of his residence. Bishop Meade, however, asserts that Augustine Warner lived in Petworth's Parish and gave the communion service to that church, and this parish takes in the Cheese Cake and Piankitank territory. Mrs. Stubbs endeavors to reconcile the birth of Elizabeth Warner Lewis at Cheese Cake by saying that Speaker Augustine Warner resided for a time long enough for Elizabeth to be born, on lands given to Speaker

Augustine Warner's wife by her father, George Reade, but these lands were not in Abingdon or Pettsworth parish, but as shown by Henning's Statutes, were in the Parish of Ware, and according to the records none of the Warners ever resided in that Parish.

READE AND WARNER.

As these names become a part of the Lewis history at this point, they will be noticed briefly before going farther on the main line. Mr. Thomas M. Green says: "Among others of the younger sons of the English nobility who sought to improve their fortunes in the Colony of Virginia, was George Reade, whose sole importance to history consisted in the fact that he was one of the first ancestors of General Washington who ventured across the Atlantic, and it was from him that the first and greatest of Americans derived his given name."

George Reade came to Virginia about 1637. He was secretary of the colony 1637, acting governor 1638-9, member of House of Burgesses from James City 1649, and for York 1656, member of King's Council from 1657 until his death 1671. (Henning's Statutes at Large, Vol. I, pp. 358, 414, 421, 429, 432, 499, 505.) He married Elizabeth, daughter of Colonel Nicholas Martian (pronounced Marchen) and had four sons and one daughter. This Nicholas Martian was evidently a Frenchman, as his name would indicate, and from the further fact that the records of North Hampton county show that he obtained denization papers in England before coming to Virginia which would not have been the case if he had been an Englishman. He was born 1591, and came to Virginia about 1620. He was justice of York county from 1632 to 1657, member of the House of Burgesses from time to time, as shown by Henning's Statutes, Vol. 1, pp. 129, 154, 179, 203. His will, dated March, 1656, and proved April 24, 1657, is on record in York county, and divides his estate between his three daughters, Elizabeth, wife of Colonel George Reade, Mary, wife of Colonel

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Sarbrook, and Sarah, wife of Captain William Fuller, at one time governor of Maryland. As appears from the will of Nicholas Martian, he left no son, and so far as is known the name has become extinct or fallen into obscurity.

George Reade, who married Elizabeth Martian, as has been seen, had four sons and one daughter. His will was admitted to probate 1671. His sons, Robert, Francis, Benjamin and Thomas, were the respective heads of numerous families of the name, and from the Reades, either directly or through the Warners, have descended the numerous Roots family, Thomas Reade Roots being a combination of names which has become stereotyped in many households.

Before dismissing George Reade, it is proper that we should refer briefly to his English history, as he was first taken up after reaching Virginia. As a matter of fact, all of the names in which this volume will deal have European histories. They are strictly historic families, but they came to America to make history and left their past history behind them. George Reade is no exception to the rule, but such were his associations that his English history followed him. This is true of many other names.

The first clue to the English history of George Reade was the fact, shown by several letters in the first volume of the English Calendar of Colonial Papers, that he had a brother, Robert Reade, who was private secretary to Sir Francis Winderbank, secretary of state during the reign of Charles I, from which it was ascertained that George Reade was a descendant of the Reades of Facccombe, in the county of South Hampton.

Andrew Reade of Facccombe, was born about 1550. His will was dated October 16, 1619, with a codicil dated November 15, 1621, and was proven October 24, 1623. He married Miss _____ Cook, of New Kent, and had five sons and four daughters, Henry, Robert, George, John and Andrew, being the sons. The eldest son married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Winderbank, and died April 4, 1647. The second son, Robert, who lived at Linkenholdt, married three times. His third wife was

Mildred, daughter of Sir Thomas Windebank, of Haines' Hill, Parish of Hurst, Berkshire, who was clerk of the signet of Elizabeth and James. It does not appear whether or not the wives of Henry and Robert were sisters, or whether there were two Thomas Windebanks, contemporaneous with each other, but it is certain that Robert's wife was a sister of Sir Thomas Windebank.

Robert Reade and Mildred Windebank had five sons, Andrew, William, Thomas, Robert (who was secretary to his uncle, Sir Francis Windebank), and George, the subject of this sketch, who came to Virginia in 1637. George Reade is mentioned several times in volume I, Calendar Colonial State Papers. He was a friend and adherent of Governor Harvey and Secretary Kemp, and during their absence in England was secretary and acting governor of the colony at different times.

Augustine Warner, Sr., is referred to in the "William and Mary Quarterly" as "Colonel," and by Mr. Green and others as "Captain" Augustine Warner. It is more than probable that he was a captain in the British army and colonel in the Colonial service. The Quarterly says that he came to Virginia as early as 1628, but I find no record of his presence there previous to 1642, and none between that time and 1652.

Augustine Warner, Sr., and his wife, Mary, had only three children so far as is known, though Mrs. Stubbs tells us of a fourth, a daughter who married Major Cant. I have found no record or even reference to this marriage from any other source. Augustine Warner, Jr., who married Mildred Reade, Isabella, who married the first John Lewis, and Sarah, who married Lawrence Townley and was the ancestress of General Robert E. Lee, are all for whom the records vouch. Mr. Green says: "It was the fashion as well as the necessity with the wealthier Virginians to send their oldest sons to England to be educated, and thither went the younger Augustine Warner, who in 1657 was entered on the books of the Merchants Tailors School in London as Augustine, eldest son of Augustine Warner, gentleman, born in Virginia, October 20, 1642. Matriculating at

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Cambridge and returning to Virginia, he was elected to the House of Burgesses from Gloucester as early as 1666, whence he passed to the Royal Council, under Sir William Berkley. In 1676 he was speaker of the Burgess of the Assembly which succeeded the one which had been in existence since 1666, and which Berkley dissolved in consequence of Bacon's rebellion. It was at the Bar of the Assembly of Burgess, presided over by this Augustine Warner, that Bacon knelt and sued for pardon.

Speaker Augustine Warner married Mildred, only daughter of George Reade and his wife, Elizabeth Martian. Mr. Green says: "They left sons who handed down the name, but we have no well-authenticated history of any of the name, or their lines of descent." It may be said that so far as the records show, all of Speaker Augustine Warner's sons died without issue. Speaker Warner had three daughters, Mildred, Elizabeth and Mary, who married, respectively, Lawrence Washington, John Lewis, and John Smith of Purton, Gloucester county. It was necessary to designate who John Smith was, otherwise, it would never have been known who Mary Warner married.

Nothing further is known of the history of the first John Lewis than has already been given, except that he was the sole heir of Robert and the founder of that line of the Lewis family in America. Councilor John Lewis, who married his first cousin Elizabeth Warner, was his only child so far as is known.

Thus we have brought the two lines of descent from General Robert Lewis of Wales on the one side, and from Nicholas Martian and George Reade, through Augustine Warner, on the other, and find the union consummated in the marriage of Councilor John Lewis to Elizabeth Warner.

3. THE SECOND JOHN LEWIS.

Councilor John Lewis was the grandson of General Robert Lewis the Welshman, born in 1669, and died 1725. He married his first cousin, Elizabeth Warner, granddaughter of George Reade and great-granddaughter of Nicholas Martian. On the tombstone of Elizabeth Warner Lewis it is stated that she was the loving mother of fourteen children. It is not known how many of these reached maturity or left issue. We have only the history of three sons, John Lewis, born 1692, Charles Lewis, born 1696, and Robert Lewis, born 1704. The names of five daughters have been preserved through the records of Abingdon Parish, and Henning's Statutes, but there is no data in regard to any of them except Isabella who married Dr. Thomas Clayton July 14, 1720. They had one child, Juliana.

ROBERT LEWIS OF BELVOIR.

4 Robert Lewis, the youngest son of John Lewis and Elizabeth Warner, taken up at this time for the sake of convenience, was born 1704, at Warner Hall, the old ancestral home in Gloucester county, Virginia. He married Jane Meriwether, daughter of Nicholas Meriwether and Elizabeth Crawford, 1725.

For three successive generations and for nearly one hundred years, the Lewis family have in every essential sense of the term been among the "Lords of Gloucester." Unbroken tradition, supported by the highest standard of record proof, goes to sustain this assertion. The founder of the family having brought with him a grant from the Crown to immense tracts of land, and having been possessed of large estates before leaving Wales, had no difficulty in establishing in his new home the foundation of an immense fortune, baronial indeed in its extent and value. Up to the time when the fourth generation found it expedient, like bees from an over-crowded hive, to withdraw from Gloucester, Warner Hall had been to the Lewises and Warners what Windsor Castle had been to British royalty. It must not be inferred, however, that this was the breaking up of the Lewis family. It was the opposite. Warner Hall stood and a John Lewis still continued to occupy it; and it was as much as ever the scene of gaiety and of hospitality, while the Lewises, Warners and Washingtons continued to meet there and hold high carnival. But the family had grown too large and their operations too extensive to be confined within the limits of a single county, and so we find them establishing themselves in other localities and laying the foundations of other estates.

One of Mr. Jefferson's biographers says that his father, Peter Jefferson, was one of the earliest settlers of Albemarle county, being the third or fourth to settle in Shadwell district; but Bishop Meade, in his "Old Churches and Families," finds Peter Jefferson's name on the vestry book of St. James Northam Parish, Goochland county, in 1744, while he finds the name of Robert Lewis on the vestry book of Fredericksville Parish, Albemarle county, in 1742. So that there can be no doubt but that Robert Lewis was one of the pioneers of Albemarle. What the earlier members of this family had been to Gloucester, Robert Lewis was to Albemarle, and as an evidence of his estates it may be mentioned that in his will he devises to his children 21,660 acres of land. He married a second time, in his old age, the widow of his old friend, Thomas Meriwether, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Thornton. He died 1765.

To Robert Lewis and Jane Meriwether were born eleven children all of whom lived to be grown and married. Their names are as follows:

- 5¹John Lewis, born about 1726, married Catherine Fauntleroy.
- 5⁵Nicholas Lewis, born 1728, married Mary, daughter of Dr. Thomas Walker and Mildred Thornton, of Castle Hill, Albemarle county, Virginia. She was born July 24, 1742.

- 5⁷Ann married John Lewis, "the honest lawyer," son of Zachary Lewis, of Spottsylvania county, Virginia.

JOHN LEWIS.

5 John Lewis, oldest son of Robert Lewis of Belvoir, and Jane Meriwether, born about 1726; married Catherine Fauntleroy, daughter of Col. Wm. Fauntleroy of Richmond, Virginia. His last appearance on the records of Albemarle was as executor of his father's will, 1766, and the execution of a deed, with his wife Catherine, a few years afterwards, when he is described as "John Lewis of Halifax," after which other genealogists seem to have lost sight of him. The best evidence, however, locates him on Dan river about five miles east of Danville, in Halifax county, Virginia. It has been only by the most persistent search and constant perseverance that any of his descendants have been located and identified. Four children, two sons and two daughters, have however been successfully located: John, Francis, Apphia and Sallie.

6 John Lewis, oldest son of John Lewis and Catherine Fauntleroy, born August 31, 1753; married Elizabeth Kennon, daughter of Wm. Kennon and Elizabeth Lewis and granddaughter of Charles Lewis of "The Byrd," born November 13, 1754. They were married February 8, 1776. Issue as follows:

Mr. Lewis is a lawyer who, for legal ability, ranks with the first members of the profession. He is not startling or sensational, nor is he versed in the tricks and short cuts of the "Shyster," but his ability is recognized by all who know him, and his integrity is unquestioned. Were it not for the fear of shocking the nerves of the public, we would class him with John Lewis of Spottsylvania, of a past generation, and say that he was entitled to the appellation of "the honest lawyer."

Following are the names of the children of Ulysses Lewis and Miss Stewart:

- 9 ¹Eugene.
- 9 ²John.

5 NICHOLAS LEWIS.

Second son of Robert of Belvoir, although a man of about 45 years of age at the time the Revolution broke out, was nevertheless in the full vigor of life. Mr. Jefferson, in his notes on "Virginia," vol. VIII, p. 481, says of Nicholas Lewis: "He commanded a regiment of militia in a successful expedition of 1776, against the Cherokee Indians, who, seduced by the agents of the British Government to take up the hatchet against us, had committed great havoc on our southern frontier, by murdering and scalping helpless women and children according to their cruel and cowardly principles of warfare. The chastisement they then received closed the history of their war, prepared them for receiving the elements of civilization, which, zealously inculcated by the present Government of the United States, have rendered them an industrious peaceable and happy people. This member of the Lewis family, whose bravery was so usefully proved on this occasion, was endeared to all who knew him, by his inflexible probity, courteous disposition, benevolent heart and engaging modesty of manner. He was the umpire of all the private differences of his county, selected always by both parties. He was also the guardian of Meriwether Lewis."

The foregoing by Mr. Jefferson, is only a side reference, so to speak, in his biographical notice of Meriwether Lewis. The Revolutionary services of Nicholas Lewis would be sufficient in itself to fill a volume. He married Mary, daughter of Dr. Thomas Walker and Mildred Thornton of Castle Hill, Albemarle county, Virginia. She was born July 24, 1742, and had nine children. Following are some of the marriages of these children:

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Nicholas Meriwether married Mildred Hornsby; Thomas Walker married Betsy Meriwether; Jane married Mr. Dickerson; Mildred married David Wood; Mary married Isaac Miller; Elizabeth married William Meriwether of Clover Field; Peggy married Charles S. Thomas. The descendants of these names have scattered to different parts of the country, many of whom no doubt having lost all trace of their ancestry. It is to be hoped that interest may be aroused and the attention of the younger generations bearing these names may be called to the subject.

Following is the issue more in detail:

6¹Thomas Walker Lewis, son of Nicholas Lewis and Mary Walker, born 1763, died June 1807; married 1788, Elizabeth Meriwether.

6²Nicholas Meriwether Lewis second son of Nicholas Lewis and Mary Walker; born August 18, 1767; Died September 22, 1818, married his cousin Mildred Hornsby, daughter of Joseph Hornsby of Williamsburg, Virginia, and his wife Mildred Walker. They emigrated to Kentucky, near Louisville.

Mr. Frank E. Block is from St. Louis, Missouri, having commenced business in Atlanta more than 30 years ago. He has been universally successful, and to day he does a manfacturing business second to none in the South. He belongs to what we are fond of calling "The Old School."

5 CHARLES LEWIS.

This member of the Lewis family, the third son of Robert of Belvoir, was also an active participant in the American Revolution, having taken a leading part in the events which led up to it. Mr. Jefferson in his "Notes on Virginia," vol. VII, p. 481 says of him; "He was one of the earlier patriots who stepped forward at the commencement of the Revolution, and commanded one of the regiments first raised in Virginia, and placed on continental establishment. Happily situated at home with a wife and young family, and a fortune placing him at ease, he left all to aid in the liberation of his country from foreign usurpation, then first unmasking their ultimate end and aim. His good sense, bravery, integrity, enterprise and remarkable bodily prowess marked him an officer of great promise, but he unfortunately died early in the Revolution." As remarked in regard to Colonel Nicholas Lewis, the foregoing are only side notes of Mr. Jefferson. The military record of Charles Lewis would be too extensive for the scope of this work. He married his cousin, Mary, daughter of Charles Lewis, of Buckeyeland, and his wife Mary Randolph. His will probated May, 1777, is on record in the Clerk's office of Albemarle county, Virginia, and is as follows:

"I, Charles Lewis of the county of Albemarle and Parish of St. Ann do constitute this my last will and testament in manner and form following, viz.:

"1. It is my will and desire that all my just debts be paid, and to enable my executors the better to do so, it is my will and desire that they should sell all my land on Ivy Creek.

"2. I lend my beloved wife, Mary Lewis, during her natural life, five hundred acres of land, including the houses and plantation, also, the fourth part of my negroes, and all my household furniture, and the fourth part of all my stock of all kinds.

"3. I give and bequeath the residue of my negroes and other personal estate, to be equally divided among my children, to them and their heirs forever, and in the case of the death of either of my children, their part of the estate to be equally divided among the survivors.

"4. I give and bequeath to my sons Howell, and Charles Warner and their heirs forever, my tract of land in the North Garden, to be equally divided between them in quantity and quality.

"5. I do hereby appoint, my beloved wife, Mary Lewis, executrix, Colonel Charles Lewis of Buckeyeland, Charles L. Lewis, Bennett Henderson, Charles Hudson and my brother, Nicholas Lewis, executors of this my last will and testament.

"Given under my hand and seal, this eleventh day of June, 1776.

"CHARLES LEWIS, Seal.

"Signed, sealed and delivered in presence of John Thomas, Bennett Henderson, Charles L. Lewis.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

"Codicil providing for unborn child added September 7, 1776.

"Admitted to record at a court held for Albemarle, May, 1777.

"JOHN NICHOLAS, Clk."

From the foregoing will it will be seen that Charles Lewis died previous to May, 1777, less than a year after the breaking out of the American Revolution. It will also be seen that he had only two sons, Howell and Charles Warner. It may be that he had daughters but if so they were included in the term "all my children."

We have no authentic account of his descendants further than this as seen by the foregoing will, only two names are mentioned, Howell and Charles Warner.

Having obtained the lineage of one of the descendants of Howell Lewis, son of Col. Charles Lewis, too late to give a more extended account, we will give what we have that others may add more. We are indebted to Mrs. Julia Lewis Shay, wife of A. K. Shay of Seattle, Washington, for this line. She says: "My great-grandfather was Col. Charles Lewis, son of Col. Robert Lewis and Jane Meriwether of Albemarle county, Virginia. My grandfather was Howell Lewis who married Mary Carr. My father was James Howell Lewis who married Sarah Ann Stanford and were the parents of twelve children; six sons and six daughters. One daughter died infant. Mrs. Julia Lewis Shay was one of these daughters and she has seven sons and one daughter. One son is married and has two children a son and daughter. Her daughter is married and has a little girl three months old. Mrs. Shay is a D. A. R., member of the Lady Sterling Chapter of Seattle, Washington."

WILLIAM LEWIS.

5 William Lewis was the fourth son of Robert Lewis of Belvoir, and was also an officer in the Revolutionary army, and bore a conspicuous part in that struggle. He married Lucy Meriwether, sixth daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, and made his home at Locust Hill, seven miles west of Charlottesville. Locust Hill was a part of the vast estate owned by his father, on Ivy Creek, and was bequeathed to him, as will be seen by reference to his father's will. It is a noteworthy fact that, notwithstanding the vast increase in the value of lands and the radical changes in the methods of life, this property has never passed out of the hands of the family. Governor Gilmer in referring to this branch of the Meriwether family, says of the gentlemen: "Mr. Anderson who married the daughter of Colonel William Lewis was remarkable for nothing specially except the faculty for squandering his wife's estate," but it must be remembered that Governor Gilmer was not only a paralytic, but also a dispeptic and a misanthrope. About half a mile from Ivy Station on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad is the residence of Mr. C. Harper Anderson, great-grandson of Captain William Lewis, and on its walls hangs the oil painting of his great-grandmother, Lucy Meriwether Lewis, known to her descendants, as "Aunt Marks." That part of the land belonging to the estate upon which the former home of William Lewis stood, has passed into other hands, but Mr. Anderson still owns several hundred acres of this historic patrimony, and a new residence stands not far distant from Locust Hill.

William Lewis and Lucy Meriwether had only three children, two sons and one daughter; Meriwether, Reuben and Jane. Meriwether never married. Reuben married his cousin, Mildred Dabney, daughter of Samuel Dabney, and "pretty Jane" Meriwether. They left no children. Jane Lewis married Edmond Anderson, also a first cousin. Mr. Harper Anderson, mentioned above is a descendant of this marriage, and notwithstanding the caustic remarks of Governor Gilmer in regard to Edmond Anderson, it is nevertheless true that Mr. Harper Anderson is still the owner by regular line of descent, of valuable property which has come down to him through a succession of five generations.

GENEALOGIES OF THE MERIWETHER LEWIS.

6. Meriwether Lewis was the oldest son of Captain William Lewis and Lucy Meriwether, and was born at Locust Hill, seven miles west of the town of Charlottesville, August 18, 1774. The station on the Chesapeake and the Ohio railroad which runs within half a mile of the old homestead of the Lewis family, is known as Ivy Station. Fifteen minutes' ride over a smooth road, full in sight of the Blue Ridge mountain, brings you within a short walk of Locust Hill, the birthplace of Meriwether Lewis, a place remarkable alike for its historic surroundings, and its long continuance in the same family; longer, perhaps than any other homestead in America, unless, some of the older entailed estates may prove exceptions. Locust Hill, however, was not an entailed estate. Purchased by Robert Lewis of Belvior, about 1730, it has descended from father to son for five successive generations, and more than a hundred and seventy years, with no entail or other legal provision to save it from the sheriff's hammer; and it therefore stands as a monument to the patriotism, paternal love and frugality of its successive owners.

Although Locust Hill was the birthplace of Meriwether Lewis, and although he entered the United States army from that place, there is an event in his life that historians, biographers and genealogists seem alike to have overlooked, or never to have known. His father died when he was a small boy, and his mother afterwards married Colonel William Marks, also a Revolutionary patriot, and in a sort of exodus, so to speak, of the Meriwethers, Mrs. Marks, together with her second husband, and her Lewis children, removed to Georgia. Governor Gilmer, in his "Georgians" mentions this fact, but so incidentally that the reader is not impressed with it. Georgia, like Kentucky, was at that time (1785-1790) the far West, where the Indian roamed at will over her hills and through her valleys.

Mr. Jefferson, no doubt drawing upon his imagination, tells us of the early childhood of Meriwether Lewis, of his hunting the "raccoon and the opossum," in the darkness of the night among the spurs of the Blue Ridge, and in this way accounts for his habits of hardihood in after life.

Mr. Jefferson was doubtless ignorant of the removal of Mrs. Marks and her Lewis children to Georgia, and wholly ignorant of the early life of Meriwether Lewis, who had spent all of his coon-hunting days in Georgia, where Indians were the only game that the white man could afford to hunt, or at school, where coons were not to be found. It is more than probable that Meriwether Lewis was never on a coon hunt in his life. It is true that he was inured to hardships and accustomed to danger in his boyhood, and that this had much to do with shaping his character in after life; but it is to the Indian, and not to the coon and opossum, that we must look for the explanation of this fact.

After the death of Colonel Marks, "Aunt Marks" returned to Locust Hill, Albemarle county, Virginia, and shortly after her return Meriwether Lewis entered the United States army. He volunteered in 1794, with the troops called out to suppress the whiskey rebellion, and in 1795 entered the regular army. He was promoted to the rank of Captain in 1800, and in 1801, when Mr. Jefferson was inaugurated president, he became his private secretary, and in 1803, upon the recommendation of the President was appointed to take command of the exploring expedition, which has become a part of our country's history as the expedition of "Lewis and Clark." The scope of this work will not admit of historical or biographical reference, except of the briefest character, and therefore this notice of Meriwether Lewis will be closed with a quotation from instructions which accompanies his appointment, and which will show the purport and scope of the undertaking, together with extracts from letters going to show the confidence reposed in him by the Government:

MR. JEFFERSON'S LETTER OF INSTRUCTIONS.

"Meriwether Lewis, Esq., Captain of 1st Regiment of Infantry of the United States of America.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

"Your situation as secretary of the President of the United States has made you acquainted with the object of my confidential message of January 18, 1803, to the Legislature. You have seen the act they passed, which, though expressed in general terms, was meant to sanction those objects, and you are appointed to carry them into execution.

"Your mission has been communicated to the ministers here from France, Spain and Great Britain, and through them to their respective governments, and such assurance given as to its object as we trust will satisfy them. The country of Louisiana having been ceded by Spain to France, the passport you have from the minister of France, the representative of the present sovereign of that country, will be a protection, with all its subjects, and that from the minister of England will entitle you to the friendly aid of any traders of that allegiance with whom you may happen to meet. The object of your mission is to explore the Missouri river and such principal streams of it or any other river as may offer the most direct and practicable water communication across the continent.

"As it is impossible to foresee in what manner you will be received by the people with whom you may come in contact, Indians, traders and others, whether with hospitality, or hostility, so is it impossible to prescribe the exact degree of perseverance with which you are to pursue your journey. We value too much the lives of citizens to offer them to probable destruction. Your numbers will be sufficient to secure you against the unauthorized opposition of individuals or small parties, but if a superior force authorized or not authorized by a nation, should be arrayed against your further passage, and inflexibly determine to arrest it, you must decline its further pursuit and return. In the loss of yourselves we should lose all the information you will have acquired. By returning safely with that, you may enable us to renew the essay with better calculated means. To your own discretion, therefore, must be left the degree of danger you may risk, and the point at which you should decline, only saying we wish you to err on the side of your safety, and to bring us back your party safe, even if it be with less information.

"On your arrival on the Pacific coast, endeavor to learn if there be any port frequented by the sea vessels of any nation, and to send two of your trusted people back by sea, in such way as shall appear practicable, with a copy of your notes; and should you be of the opinion that the return of your party by the way they went will be imminently dangerous, then ship the whole and return by sea by the way either of Cape Horn or the Cape of Good Hope, as you shall be able. As you will be without money, clothes or provisions, you must endeavor to use the credit of the United States to obtain them, for which purpose open letters of credit will be furnished you, authorizing you to draw on the Executive of the United States or any of its officers in any part of the world, on which drafts can be disposed of, and to apply with our recommendations to the consuls, agents, merchants or citizens of any nation with which we have intercourse, assuring them in our name that any aids they may furnish you shall be honorably repaid and on demand. Our consuls, Thomas Hughes at Batavia in Java, William Buchanan in the isles of France, and John Elmsly at the Cape of Good Hope, will be able to supply your necessities by drafts on us.

"Should you find it safe to return by the way you go, after sending two of your party around by sea, or with your whole party, if no conveyance by sea can be found, do so, making such observation on your return as will serve to supply, correct or confirm those made on your outward journey.

"On re-entering the United States and reaching a place of safety, discharge any of your attendants who may desire and deserve it, procuring for them immediate payment of all arrears of pay and clothing which may have been incurred since their departure, and assure them that they shall be recommended to the liberality of the Legislature for the grant of a soldier's portion of land each, as proposed in my message to Congress; and repair yourself, with your papers, to the seat of government.

"To provide, in the accident of your death, against anarchy, dispersion and consequent danger to your party and total failure of the enterprise, you are hereby authorized by any instrument signed and written in your own hand, to name the person among them who shall succeed to the command on your decease, and by a like instrument to change the nomination from time to time as further experiences of the characters accompanying you shall point out superior fitness; and all the powers and authorities given to yourself are in the event of your death transferred and vested in the successor so named, with further powers to him and his successor in like manner to name each his successor who, on the death of his predecessor shall be vested with all the powers and authorities given to himself. Given under my hand in the city of Washington this 20th day of June, 1803."

Meriwether Lewis died October 11, 1809. After the completion of his expedition, the success of which secured to the United States by right of discovery all of that territory now embraced in the States of Oregon and Washington and some of the other Rocky Mountain States, he was appointed governor of Louisiana, now Missouri the capitol site of which at the time was in St. Louis. While en route to Washington on official business, unattended save by a single companion, who doubtless proved to be his assassin, he was murdered while passing through what is now the State of Tennessee, near where the town of Franklin is at present situated. Although it was believed at the time that he had committed suicide, and was so reported by Mr. Jefferson as a historical fact, the theory is not only not plausible but contradictory in its every bearing. Governor Gilmer, who perhaps knew more of Meriwether Lewis than any man of the time, being a near relative, and about the same age, who was many years in public life, having been twice governor of Georgia and having served several terms in Congress, did not believe the suicide theory, but emphatically contradicted it and gave the best of reasons to disprove it; while Mr. Jefferson's own account of the circumstances, when analyzed, furnishes its own refutation. No one could suspect Mr. Jefferson of doing intentional injustice to the memory of Meriwether Lewis, but that his credulity was imposed upon is proven by his own statements.

Paul Hayne's account of the expedition of Lewis and Clark is the most comprehensive of any that has been published, and shows the vast scope of the undertaking, together with its difficulties and dangers, as well as the great benefits resulting to the country therefrom. Mr. James Parton has also published a very interesting, and at the same time correct, account of this expedition.

Of one fact we are assured, that he made a noble record while living and died true to his country, true to his duty as a man, and true to the trusts reposed in him. Capt. Lewis died at the age of 35 years, and was buried in the center of Lewis county, Tennessee. In a dense oak forest, remote from human habitation, stands a simple granite monument, erected by the State of Tennessee over the grave of Meriwether Lewis; upon which is cut the eulogy, written of him by President Jefferson: "His courage was undaunted, his firmness and perseverance yielded to nothing but impossibilities. A rigid disciplinarian, yet tender as a father of those committed to his charge; honest, disinterested, liberal, with a sound understanding and a scrupulous fidelity to truth." It also bears this Latin epitaph, "Immaturus obi; sed to felicior annos vive meos, bone republica vive tuos." His own family motto: "Omne solumforti patria est," might have been more appropriate.

August 12, 1905, will be the Centennial anniversary of the arrival of Captain Lewis in the Oregon country, and the Loyal Lewis Legion, a fraternal, genealogical and historical society, composed of those by the name of Lewis and their kin, will hold a Congress in Portland, Oregon, under the auspices of the Lewis and Clark Exposition. One entire day has been set aside and designated as Lewis Day (as was also September 23, 1904 at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition), in honor of the intrepid explorer Meriwether Lewis. The Tennessee Lewis Society, through Hon. E. C. Lewis of Nashville, will decorate the tomb of Meriwether Lewis with flags and flowers while Lewis' Congress will meet in Portland, Oregon, to honor his life, character and services, to pay royal homage to his memory, to sing his praises and record their estimate of his worth. He was a history maker. He achieved honor for honor's sake, by which he is now remembered one hundred years afterwards. May the Lewises of today emulate all that was good, just and generous; emulate the sturdy character, the strenuous life of our honored hero, and win honor in this day and generation by which they may be remembered and honored one hundred years hence.

Reuben Gold Thwaites has edited a very authentic account of the expedition from the original journals of the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

5. ROBERT LEWIS.

Youngest son of Robert Lewis of Belvoir, was not twenty-one years old when his father's will was written in 1757, hence it follows that he was born subsequent to 1736. He married his cousin, Mary Frances Lewis, daughter of "Charles Lewis of the Byrd," and settled in Granville county, North Carolina. He appears upon the records of that state quite prominently, and was a member of the Constitutional Convention which met just previous to the breaking out of the Revolution. He died comparatively young, leaving several children as follows: James is one of the executors of his will, as shown by settlement of guardian; Howell Lewis 1791; Jane and Nicholas as shown by guardian Thomas Hynes; Charles, and is shown in book three, page 86, division of slaves among the children; Frances who married Dr. John Payne; Charles and Nicholas. Thus we have, Jane, Charles, Nicholas, James and Frances Payne, and from other sources we have John and Richard. Mrs. General Gordon, the first wife of Chief Justice Bleckly of the Supreme Court of Georgia, and Judge Haralson of the Supreme Court of Alabama, descended from this line.

Miss Latimer, daughter of James Latimer of Charles county, Maryland, married, first, a gentleman named Posey who died and left her a widow and in her widowhood she determined to cast her lot in Georgia, which was then the "far west" and passing through North Carolina, traveling herself, with proper protection in her carriage, while her slaves and manager traveled with the wagons and the stock. She met Dr. John Lewis, son of Robert Lewis. They married, settled in Warren county, Georgia, and were the ancestors of Mrs. Frank Graham of Augusta, Georgia, Judge Hal Lewis, Supreme Court, and many others in Georgia.

Of the descendants of the first marriage very little is known. The descendants of the second marriage will be taken up under the head of John Lewis. Following are the children of Jane Lewis and Thomas Meriwether. William born 1751. Robert born 1752. Thomas born 1754. Jane, Elizabeth, Nicholas, Mary, who married Richard P. White, and Richard.

5 MILDRED LEWIS.

Mildred Lewis fourth daughter of Robert of Belvoir, married Major John Lewis. He was thus described in her father's will, and numerous records, both of Albemarle and Goochland, locate him in Goochland county. The early genealogists insisted on marrying Mildred to John Lewis, son of Zachary, and some of the later writers are unwilling to admit that she married John Lewis, the son of Joseph, but about this there can be no doubt.

John Lewis, husband of Mildred, whose will is on record in Goochland, 1796, was great-grandson of John Lewis, of Henrico, who came to Virginia about 1660 from Wales.

The will of Major John Lewis mentions four married daughters, Ann Moseley, Elizabeth Halsy, Mary Atkison and Sarah Mann, and two sons, John and Joseph. John Lewis Robard of St. Joseph, Missouri, and Judge Joseph Lewis, of Kentucky, are descended from this line.

5 ANN LEWIS.

5 Ann Lewis, daughter of Robert Lewis, of Belvoir; married John Lewis, son of Zachary, who was known as "the honest lawyer of Spotsylvania;" he was born October 18, 1729, died September 12, 1780. For years the genealogists, having married Mildred to this John Lewis, were unable to place Ann, but the will of Samuel Cobbs and other record proofs have settled all doubt about the matter, and both Mildred and Ann are provided with a husband without any conflict of authority.

The will of this John Lewis, on record in Spotsylvania county, Virginia, names three sons, John Zachary Lewis, Robert Lewis and Nicholas Lewis. The fact that he mentions no daughters does not necessarily preclude the idea that he had daughters, and at most it is only a negative inference that he had no daughters, as at that time daughters were never mentioned in the distribution of estates, except when some special provisions were made. The parentage of Mary Lewis, who married David Wood Meriwether in 1784, has been a matter of dispute among genealogists for years, not a few of whom have claimed that she was not a daughter of Ann Lewis and "the honest lawyer." We have controverted this claim, but have yielded our opposition, for first her undisputed association with this family of Lewis, second, the general and unbroken tradition through successive generations, third, the utter failure of ourselves, or any one else, after years of search, to locate her anywhere else; hence we do not hesitate to include the descendants of Mary Lewis and David Wood Meriwether under this head. In addition to these circumstantial proofs we have recently found in the published records of Spotsylvania where the children of this John Lewis give a deed of release which is signed by the sons of John Lewis and David Meriwether, on the part of his wife Mary.

6 ¹Nicholas Lewis, son of Ann Lewis and her husband John

5 ELIZABETH LEWIS.

5 Elizabeth Lewis, daughter of Robert of Belvoir; married Rev. Robert Barret of Richmond, Virginia, rector of St. Matens Parish. There is no other record of her history, nor is it known how many children she left. The history of only one is known and that is very meager, though the descent from him has been preserved.

4 CHARLES LEWIS OF "THE BYRD."

Charles Lewis was the second son of Councilor John Lewis and his wife Elizabeth Warner, born October 13, 1696, died 1779. His will is on record in Goochland county, Virginia. He married May 28, 1717, Mary Howell, daughter of John Howell, gentleman. Col. Charles settled the Byrd plantation in 1733, and it is from the name of this estate that he has always been designated, "Charles of the Byrd," by way of distinction from others of the same name. His children, as shown by his will, are as follows:

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

JOHN LEWIS.

5 John Lewis oldest son of "Charles of Byrd" and his wife Mary Howell, was born about 1720, or perhaps earlier, as his parents were married 1717. Of the early history of this John Lewis we have no definite account, and it is not until 1769, or when he was at least 49 years old, that he appears distinctively on the records. At this period of the Lewis family, there were so many by the name of John that it was difficult to distinguish one from the other, when their names appeared in a general way. John Lewis married his cousin Jane Meriwether, daughter of Col. Robert Lewis of Belvoir, and widow of Thomas Meriwether. It is very probable, indeed, almost certain that this John was married twice, though neither the records nor tradition sustain this conclusion, but the circumstances point very strongly in that direction. The first husband of Jane Lewis was living in 1765 when John Lewis was 45 years old, and very few men of that period lived to this age without marrying.

Mr. Alexander Brown, author of the "Cabels and their Kin," insists that this was the Major John Lewis referred to in the will of Robert of Belvoir, and that he was the husband of Mildred at the time the will was written, and that he married Jane Lewis, the widow of Thomas Meriwether after the death of Mildred; but this is mere conjecture for which there is no authority, and besides, there can be no doubt that the husband of Mildred was the son of Joseph Lewis.

The most authentic account we have of this John Lewis is based upon generally accepted traditions, against which there is no proof, and is sustained by such conclusive circumstances that it is accepted as history. That he married Jane Lewis of Belvoir, daughter of Col. Robert Lewis, and widow of Thomas Meriwether, there can be no doubt.

As will be seen from the will of this John Lewis, written 1791, he left six children, three sons and three daughters. The sons were all twenty-one years old when the will was written,

The foregoing is made up from notes taken from time to time, and while they are fragmentary, as to arrangement, they are positively reliable and give more information of the descent of Mary Lewis and William Williams than I have been able to obtain from all other sources. They bring down several of the descendants of this couple to the ninth generation, and furnish data from which the descendants of that line will be enabled to make up a complete genealogy.

Mrs. A. Louise Williams, wife of Mr. Fielding Lewis Williams of Bristol, Rhode Island, is responsible for the foregoing data.

ESTES FAMILY OF VIRGINIA.

The ancestor of the Estes family was from Dover, England. The progenitor of that line of the Estes family, who settled in Spotsylvania county, Virginia, is not known, but he was probably a brother to John Estes who married Nancy Montigue, as the families are known to have been closely related. Richard Estes is the first of this line known to the authors and he was living in Virginia during the Revolutionary war. Mr. Charles Estes in his Estes Genealogies makes this Richard a son of Bartlett Estes, who was a younger brother of Middleton, hence a grandson of John Estes and Nancy Montigue, but this is a mistake, as proven by the date of the birth of his son, Berkeley Estes, who married Malinda, a daughter of Middleton Estes. Berkeley Estes was born April 9, 1797, and Middleton Estes, December 11, 1782, and they are known to have been second cousins. This Richard was married about the close of the Revolutionary war to Catherine Carleton, daughter of Ambrose Carleton of Spotsylvania county, Virginia, as shown by the Spotsylvania records.

The records in the Record and Pension Office, War Department, Washington, D. C., show that one "Richard Estes, served as a private in Captain John Spottswood's Company of Foot, Tenth Virginia regiment, commanded by Colonel John Green, Revolutionary war. He enlisted February 19, 1778, to serve one year, and his name last appears on a muster roll dated at Middlebrook, March 4, 1779, which shows that he was discharged February 17." Given by authority of the secretary of war, Washington, D. C. We have no proof that this Richard was the person referred to in the records of the War Department but it is quite probable he was.

ESTES FAMILY OF VIRGINIA AND KENTUCKY.

- 1 ¹John Estes came from England and settled in Virginia. He married Nancy Montigue. We have no record proof of when nor where this marriage occurred, but their children were born in Spotsylvania county, Virginia. Mr. Charles Estes in his "Estes Genealogies," states they were the parents of eight children which will be given below:
- 2 ¹Middleton Estes, born December 11, 1782, in Virginia, married in Lexington, Kentucky, Elizabeth Adams, daughter of Captain Adams, of Orange Courthouse, Virginia. Abraham's vocation was agriculture. One Abraham Estes served in the volunteer militia under Captain Bledsoe in War of 1812, and was probably discharged early in April, 1814, on account of disability, and placed on Kentucky roll in 1816. He is doubtless the person whose record is given here.

5 JOHN COBBS.

John Cobbs was the son of John Cobbs of Goochland, and the younger of the three brothers who appear on the records of Louisa county, Virginia. His name first appears on the records in the will of his brother Samuel who bequeaths one thousand acres of land to him and his brother Edmund, situated on Ivy Creek in Bedford county, Virginia, and, as illustrative of the obscurity with which the early life of John Cobbs seems to have been surrounded, and the difficulties attending the efforts to trace him, it may be mentioned in this connection that, while Edmund settled on this land, and, as shown by the settlement of his estate in 1799, more than forty years after the execution of the will of Samuel Cobbs, was still in possession of the entire 1000 acres, which was distributed among his children, there is nothing on the records of Bedford county to show how Edmund got into possession of the whole, or that John Cobbs ever transferred his portion to any one.

The first that we see of John Cobbs on the record, after he is mentioned in the will of his brother Samuel, is in Granville county, North Carolina, in a deed to land purchased by him from Wm. Moore in 1769. This purchase is made just before his marriage to Mildred, daughter of Howell and Mary Lewis, and is witnessed by Thomas Cobbs, Howell Lewis and Mary Lewis, and his marriage took place September 6, 1769, after which he disappears from the records again until 1784, when he reappears on the records of Goochland county, Virginia, from which county he originally came, in the payment of taxes on property in that county. In this entry he is described as John Cobbs of Georgia, and finally by deed of gift on record in Washington county, Georgia, we find him described as John Cobbs of Columbia county, Georgia, deed bearing date August 1791. His descendants are noticed under the head of Howell Lewis, whose daughter, Mildred, he married 1769.

5 EDMUND COBBS

Is the son of John Cobbs of Goochland county, Virginia, and a younger brother of Samuel Cobbs, who married Mary Lewis, that is, he was one of the three sons of John Cobbs—Samuel, Edmund and John. Edmund Cobbs first appears on the records in the will of his brother Samuel on record in Louisa county, Virginia, in which Samuel bequeaths to his two brothers, Edmund and John, 1,000 acres of land jointly, located on Ivy creek in Bedford county, Virginia, and in the division of Edmund Cobbs' estate in 1799, this identical land, which we find described in the will of Samuel Cobbs in 1758, is described as part of his estate. A curious fact connected with this bequest of Samuel Cobbs to his brothers is, that there is nothing on record to show that John Cobbs ever transferred his interest in this land to any one, and no record evidence as to how Edmund Cobbs ever came into possession of the whole of it. Perhaps it was a case of "squatter sovereignty."

Edmund Cobbs died intestate and his estate was divided between his widow and ten children, as follows: Mrs. Sarah

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Cobbs widow, and Elizabeth who married William Tompkins; John Cobbs, Reuben Cobbs, Edmund Cobbs, Samuel Cobbs, Waddy Cobbs, Jeffry Cobbs, Wm. Cobbs, and Judith, now married to John Staples. Edmund Cobbs married Sarah Lewis, daughter of "Planter John Lewis" of Albemarle county, Virginia, who is distinctly referred to in his will as "Sarah Cobbs." Of the ten children of Edmund Cobbs we have not been able to obtain data of any of them but John Lewis, Waddy and Edmund. Five sons and two daughters have been entirely lost sight of and their descendants have no doubt lost sight of their line of descent.

As has been seen, Bishop Cobbs was born in Bedford county, Virginia, February 5, 1796. He was educated in the best schools of Virginia, and began his active life as an educator. One of his first positions was as principal of New London Academy, but he soon turned his attention to the ministry, and one of his earliest ministerial charges was in his native county at St. Stevens Church, twelve or fifteen miles west of Lynchburg on the old Forest Road, and he continued in the service of this parish until he was called to build up some other weak point in the diocese. There are hundreds now living in Bedford and adjoining counties whose parents and grandparents were led to the Christian altar and baptized into the church by the Reverend Nicholas Cobbs and whose marriage ceremonies he performed and at whose funeral rites he officiated. Mr. Cobbs served a number of other parishes in the diocese of Virginia during his ministry, and his success in building up the church, not so much upon a financial as a spiritual basis, was marked in every field.

The Reverend Nicholas Hamner Cobbs was ordained bishop at Philadelphia, and installed at once Bishop of the Diocese of Alabama. The services of Bishop Cobbs after his promotion to the Episcopacy were even more marked than they were during his ministry. His manner and methods, however, were ever unostentatious, and being actively engaged in the labors of the diocese he devoted very little time to literary work, and left little for publication except sermons. He died in Montgomery, Alabama, in 1861, at the age of sixty-five. His widow and a large family of children survived him.

John Lewis Cobbs was the only one of Bishop Cobbs' sons who ever engaged in public life, and he seems to have been literally dragged into it. He was for a number of years a dry goods merchant in Montgomery, but after the close of the war between the states and the restoration of Alabama, he was called from his retirement and made treasurer of the state.

7 JAMES MADISON COBBS.

Madison Cobbs was the second son of John Lewis Cobbs and his wife Susannah Hamner. He was born 1798 in Bedford county, Virginia, where he spent his boyhood and early manhood. Early in life he made Lynchburg his home, where he engaged in merchandising, selecting the dry goods trade as his line, operating at different times individually, or under the firm name of Cobbs & Armistead, or Cobbs, Armistead & Henderson.

Mr. Cobbs was a model of the old-school gentleman, and was a contradiction to the generally accepted idea of the dry goods merchant. No one ever thought of questioning his integrity, and his reputation for the most scrupulous veracity was everywhere recognized. At the breaking out of the civil war he suspended business, but resumed again at its close, but soon found that any kind of success depended upon the adoption of methods wholly foreign to his convictions and at war with the teachings of a lifetime, and hence he retired from business.

Mr. Cobbs married his cousin, Eliza, daughter of Sarah Lewis Cobbs and John Alexander, and had issue:

4 THOMAS COBBS.

Thomas Cobbs of Goochland, Hanover and Albemarle counties, Virginia, Granville county, North Carolina, and Columbia county, Georgia, was born early in the eighteenth century, the exact date not definitely known. Goochland county, Virginia, was no doubt his native county. As is seen, he was so migratory in early life that it is something like chasing a wil-o'-the-wisp to try to keep up with him. He was fourth in line from Ambrose Cobbs, the emigrant, and was a son of the second Robert Cobbs and was a brother of the third Robert of Henrico and John of Goochland.

The records place Thomas Cobbs first in Goochland until 1750, after which he appears on the fee books of Goochland as "Thomas Cobbs of Hanover." He subsequently removed to that portion of Albemarle county which lay on the south side of

James river, which was cut off to form the county of Buckingham, and afterwards to Granville county, North Carolina, on the records of which county he appears for several years prior to and after 1769. He next appears on the records of Columbia county, Georgia, where he evidently spent the remainder of his life, having lived to an incredible old age. He first appears on the Goochland records prior to 1735, and is reputed to have been born 1708 or 1710, and as he died in 1832, he was more than 120 years old. Tradition says that he was an officer in the Revolution, but this is not probable, as he was over 65 when the war broke out. The tradition doubtless had its origin in the fact that he had a son of the same name who was an officer in the army.

5 Thomas Cobbs, son of the above Thomas, was an officer in the Revolution. He married and left issue but nothing is known of them except one daughter, Nancy, who married William Smith of Prince Edward county, Virginia, and was the ancestor of General E. Kirby Smith of the Confederate Army. Their children were Robert H., Napoleon B., Catherine, Nancy, Julia, James, Sterling and Mary.

5 John Cobbs, son of Colonel Thomas Cobbs, seems to have been more fully identified with his father than any of his children. Indeed it seems that old Thomas was a sort of migratory specimen for a number of years, from Goochland to Hanover, to Albemarle, to Granville, North Carolina, until he finally settled down in Columbia county, Georgia, in the latter part of the eighteenth century; and it seems, so far as the records show, that John is the only one of his sons that kept up with him. There is no doubt that this is the John Cobbs whose name appears as witness to a deed of gift executed by John Cobbs conveying land and negroes to his children in 1791. This John Cobbs signs his name to that instrument as "John Cobbs, Jun.," while the maker of the instrument is described as John Cobbs the elder, but they are clearly not father and son, as John Addison Cobbs is named in the deed as the son of John Cobbs the "elder." There is no doubt that this John Cobbs left a number of sons, as there are many descendants of Thomas Cobbs scattered throughout Georgia and Alabama, but there is only one whose name has come down in history, and we have no well authenticated line of descent from him.

6 Thomas W. Cobb was the son of the abovenamed John Cobbs, and grandson of Thomas Cobbs of Columbia county, Georgia. The paradox in the difference in name of father and son is quite apparent. The father of Thomas W. Cobb, in a sworn statement to a court paper in 1796, signed his name "Cobbs," as maker of the instrument; and the ancestor of another line of the Cobbs family in Georgia, whose descendants sign their names "Cobb," in an instrument referred to above, executed in 1791, describes his children as Cobbs, and signs his name Cobbs. If there was ever any reason for the change it has never been suggested. The name of Cobbs has been unsullied as to reputation, remarkable for high character and integrity, and distinguished for learning throughout their history, which makes the change still more unaccountable. All of the other branches so far as known, have retained the original spelling. Nothing but the merest caprice can account for the change.

It is asserted historically that Thomas W. Cobb was educated by his grandfather, old Thomas Cobbs, when nearly one hundred years old, against the remonstrances of his friends; but, true to the characteristics of his name, he persisted, and lived to see his grandson in the United States senate from Georgia.

Thomas W. Cobb studied law with Wm. H. Crawford, and was eminent in his profession. He represented his district in the lower house of Congress, and was also chosen United States senator from Georgia. Cobb county was named in honor of him. Mr. Cobb was also appointed one of the Superior Court judges for Georgia and resigned his seat in the Senate to take his seat on the bench.

It is not known who Thomas W. Cobb married, nor is there any definite data in regard to his children. There is no doubt, however, that Thomas Cobbs of Columbia county had other sons, and that a numerous descent has sprung from this head of the family who have chosen to write themselves "Cobb" instead of "Cobbs." There are a great many in Georgia and Alabama who spell their name "Cobb," who, from neglect or indifference, have lost all trace of their ancestry, and know nothing of their line of descent. Unlike the Frenchman that Mark Twain tells about, they are perfectly satisfied about their fathers, but are anxiously inquiring about their grandfathers.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Judge Cobb of Alabama who represented the Tuskegee district in Congress for a number of years is of this family. The late Henry W. Grady and the widow of Governor H. Y. Atkinson, are also descended from the same branch, but the descent is sustained only by tradition, but it is well sustained in both families, and supported by family records.

ROBERT COBBS OF HENRICO.

Robert Cobbs was the third son of the second Robert Cobbs of York, grandson of the first Robert, and great-grandson of Ambrose the emigrant. He was the younger brother of John and Thomas Cobbs of Goochland county, Virginia, and appears on the deed books of Henrico from 1744 to 1748. His will is not recorded in Henrico, and there is no doubt that he removed to Chesterfield, or some adjoining county. There were many of the name in Chesterfield, doubtless descended from this ancestor. The Randolph manor, known as "Cobbs," was in Chesterfield, and the Randolphs of Cobbs were intimately associated, if not connected, with this branch of the family.

Chancellor Cobbs of Alabama is descended from this branch. From Chancellor Cobbs we have the following verbatim account of his family. Beyond this he knew nothing: "My father was born in Manchester, Virginia, 1777. His name was Thomas and he had a brother John. He married three times, the names of his first two wives were unknown. His third wife was a widow Hopkins, nee Miss Boone. He removed to Raleigh, North Carolina, and was at one time mayor of the city. He afterwards removed to Alabama where he spent the remainder of his life."

Chancellor Cobbs, when I saw him, 1894, was a well preserved man of about 65. He was a ripe scholar, an eminent lawyer, and profound jurist. He was at the time presiding over the chancery court of Birmingham, Alabama. In my general search for information I was thrown into correspondence with Thomas D. Cobbs of Houston, Texas, a son of Chancellor Cobbs of Alabama, a lawyer of high standing, eminent in his profession. He was then general counsel for the Houston & Texas Central railroad.

SAMUEL COBBS OF AMELIA.

Samuel Cobbs was the first clerk of Amelia county, Virginia, when it was first laid off in 1735. He was an appointee of the crown and was sent from Williamsburg to take charge of the office. He continued clerk of the county until he died 1757. It does not appear that this Samuel Cobbs was in the same line of descent as Thomas, John and Robert of Goochland and Henrico, but it is reasonably certain that he descended from the same common ancestry; from either Ambrose or Joseph of York, who were the original emigrants; and this conclusion is confirmed by the fact that he comes from the same locality, and the same characteristics are shown in all of his recorded writings. While the date of his birth is not definitely shown, the records show that he was born prior to 1700. He makes a bequest to a grandson in 1757, and states that he had been married nearly forty years, from which it follows that he was over sixty at the time. The will of Samuel Cobbs bears date June 27, 1757, and was probated July 28, following. He left his entire estate to his widow, Edith Cobbs, but mentions his two sons, Samuel and John Catlin. The records show that John Catlin Cobbs remained in Amelia and married there, but there is no account of any descendants. Samuel Cobbs returned to Williamsburg as shown by the records. In the will of his mother, Edith Cobbs, probated August 27, 1761, all of the property left by the elder Samuel, in the town of Williamsburg, was bequeathed to her son Samuel, and he appears on the records of Amelia as Samuel Cobbs of Williamsburg. There is no account of any of his descendants. He was probably born about 1740, as he was a minor at the time his father's will was made.

Samuel Cobbs was an officer in the Revolutionary Army and appears on the land books as Lieutenant Samuel Cobbs, as having received land grants in consideration of military services.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Mrs. Edith Cobbs mentions in her will two unmarried daughters, Theodocia and Judith, and a granddaughter Rachel Booker; a grandson, Samuel Cobbs, is also mentioned.

THOMAS COBBS.

Thomas Cobbs appears on the records of Albemarle in deed book 2, August 11, 1760. His will is also on record in which he names two sons and one daughter, Thomas and Charles Cobbs and Mary Campbell. His two sons are named as executors. His will was probated June 11, 1761.

Thomas Cobbs, the son of above Thomas and executor of his father's will, appears on deed book 12, page 508, Albemarle county, Virginia, May 11, 1797. Thomas Cobbs and Mary his wife convey certain lands to _____ Garth in Albemarle county and commission is appointed by the county court in 1802 to obtain Nancy Cobbs' alienation of dower.

Charles Cobbs, another son of the above Thomas Cobbs, appears on the records of Albemarle, deed book 2, page 272, in a deed from William Walton to Charles Cobbs, both of Albemarle. Charles Cobbs married a daughter of this William Walton and removed to Campbell county, Virginia, where his will is on record. He left a large family of sons and daughters, but they seem to have lost all trace of their ancestry beyond Thomas Cobbs of 1760. There can be no doubt that they descended from the same line of the other Cobbs of which we have been treating, but they have lost the connecting link.

MERIWETHER FAMILY.

Stereotyped family history informs us that during the reign of Charles II, three brothers, Nicholas, ~~Charles~~ and David Meriwether left Wales and emigrated to the colony of Virginia. Whether there were three or more is not important. It is certain that Nicholas came, and as he will furnish more material than we can handle we will content ourselves with him for the present.

Nicholas Meriwether was born in Wales toward the close of the sixteenth century and died December 19, 1678. He was the father of Nicholas, the present subject of our sketch, and the other two traditional brothers.

Nicholas Meriwether, son of the above-named Nicholas, was born in Wales, 1647, and died in Virginia 1744. He married Elizabeth Crawford, daughter of David Crawford of New Kent county, Virginia, and had children as follows: William Meriwether, David Meriwether, Thomas Meriwether, Nicholas Meriwether, Elizabeth Meriwether, Sarah Meriwether, Mary Meriwether, Jane Meriwether.

The Meriwether family, confined to Nicholas and Elizabeth Crawford, would furnish material in itself to make up an ordinary library. I will therefore attempt only a partial sketch of the family, confining myself to the descendants of Jane, who has been already disposed of under the head of her husband, Col. Robert Lewis of Belvoir, and David, who married Ann Holmes.

2 David Meriwether, son of Nicholas Meriwether and Elizabeth Crawford, born about 1685, married Ann Holmes, daughter of George Holmes, and had children as follows: Thomas, Francis, Nicholas, Ann, Sarah, David.

Genealogists differ as to whether Thomas Meriwether, who married Elizabeth Thornton, was a son of David or William Meriwether. I have, however, selected David, as the weight of evidence seems to be in his favor.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

3 Thos. Meriwether, oldest child of David Meriwether and Ann Holmes, born 1714-15, died 1756. He married Elizabeth Thornton and had children as follows: Nicholas, Francis, David, Mary, Elizabeth, Sarah, Ann, and Lucy Meriwether, born February 4, 1752. She married first, Col. William Lewis and was the mother of Meriwether Lewis, of whom mention is made on another page. She married second, Col. Marks, an officer of the Revolutionary army. She died September 8, 1837, in her eighty-sixth year; Mildred, Thomas, and Jane—as Governor Gilmer calls her, "Pretty Jane Meriwether." She married Samuel Dabney; she was the recognized beauty of the circle in which she moved, very pretty, very rich, and very much courted. Her sphere was necessarily wide.

William, youngest son of David Meriwether and his wife, Ann Holmes, born December 25, 1730, in Louisa county, Virginia, married Martha Cox Wood and had eight children, among whom was David Wood Meriwether who was born in 1756 and married Mary Lewis, daughter of John Lewis of Spotsylvania county, Virginia. He moved to Kentucky, and died in 1795.

The following notes on the Meriwether family will be necessarily desultory, as the names are so numerous that it is impossible in the space allowed to take them up in regular order. They will be for the most part confined to the descendants of Thomas, James and William Meriwether, sons of David Meriwether and Ann Holmes his wife:

4 Frank Meriwether, born October 31, 1737, was a son of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, married Martha Jamison, and from this marriage ten children resulted three sons and seven daughters: Thomas, Valentine, Nichelas, Mary, Mildred, Elizabeth, Lucy, Margaret, Nancy and Sarah.

(This member of the Meriwether family, being included in Governor Gilmer's book as one of the North Georgia settlers, was doubtless among the pioneers of Broad river, and in further confirmation of this, it may be mentioned that two of his children, a son and daughter, married a daughter and son of Governor Matthews.)

- 4 David Meriwether, third son of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, born September 2, 1739, married Mary Harvie. They had only two children, a son and a daughter: Lewis B. Meriwether married Elizabeth Johnson, and Mary married Benjamin Taliaferro. (David Meriwether was also one of the Broad river Colony mentioned by Governor Gilmer in his "North Georgians," and it is recorded in the history of Georgia Methodism, that the first conference held in the State was at the house of David Meriwether in the forks of Broad river, 1784.)
- 4 Mary Meriwether, daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, born April 4, 1742, married Peachy R. Gilmer of Albemarle county, Virginia. They had two sons and four daughters: Thomas Gilmer, George Gilmer, Mary Peachy, Lucy, Elizabeth and Francis, who married Richard Taliaferro.
- 5 Thomas Gilmer, son of Mary Meriwether and her husband Peachy R. Gilmer, born about 1765, married Elizabeth Lewis, daughter of Thomas Lewis, and granddaughter of Irish John Lewis of Augusta county, Virginia. They had eight children: Peachy Ridgway Gilmer, Thomas L. Gilmer, Mary, John, Wm. B., Charles Lewis, Lucy Anne, and George Rockingham Gilmer, who married Eliza Frances Grattan. (This family was also among the pioneers of Broad river, having left Virginia with the general exodus of the Meriwethers, just after the close of the Revolution, and the last-named son, George Rockingham Gilmer, represented his district in Congress for many years, and was twice Governor of Georgia. A more extended notice of him will be given in the closing pages of the Meriwether family.)
- 4 Elizabeth Meriwether, daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, born March 3, 1744, married Thomas Johnson of Louisa county, Virginia, known as "Sheriff

Tom." They had a large family of children, among whom were Mary who married Henry Winston, Elizabeth who married the Rev. John Poindexter, Rebecca who married Joseph Winston, Lucy who married Wm. Quarles, Sarah who married Richard Overton, and Nanny who married Charles Barrett.

- 4 Sarah Meriwether, daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, born November 26, 1746, married Michael Anderson and had five children. No marriages recorded.
- 4 Ann Meriwether, daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, born May 1, 1750, married Richard Anderson and had seven children.
- 5 David Meriwether Anderson, son of Ann Meriwether and Richard Anderson as above, married first, Susan Moore, and second, Mrs. Mary Walker Leitch. Issue by first marriage: Ann, Catherine, Richard, Lucy Jane, Elizabeth Moore, Lewis; no children by second marriage.
- 6 Ann Anderson, oldest daughter of David Anderson and Susan Moore, married William Porter and had two children: Helen Porter, and J. Meriwether Porter.
- 6 Lewis Anderson, son of David Anderson and Susan Moore, married Eliza M. L. Leitch and had six children: Susan Moore, David Johnson, Nannie, Margaret, Ellen Overton, and Warner Lewis.
- 7 J. Meriwether Porter, son of Ann Anderson and William Porter, married Mary Boothe and had three children: Nannie, Kate and Nellie.
- 7 Susan Moore Anderson, daughter of Lewis Anderson and Eliza Leitch, married John R. McMurdo and had a number of children, but the names of only three have been obtained: Eliza, Susan and John, Jr.
- 5 Elizabeth Anderson, daughter of Ann Meriwether and Richard Anderson, married Waddy Thomson. This Waddy Thomson was the son, by a former marriage, of the first Waddy Thomson of Albemarle county, Virginia and whose second wife was Mary Lewis, widow of Samuel Cobbs and daughter of Robert Lewis of Belvoir. Mr. George Woods Meriwether of Louisville, Kentucky, says in his sketch of the Meriwether family, that Waddy Thomson, whom he describes as Waddy Thomson of South Carolina, whose son was in Congress a number of years from that State, and also minister to Mexico, was the same that married Elizabeth Anderson. He died in Greenville, South Carolina, at an advanced age, in 1845. This settles the identity of Waddy Thomson of South Carolina who was minister to Mexico, as the grandson of Waddy Thomson who married Mary Lewis Cobbs.

- 4 Lucy Meriwether, daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, married first, Col. Wm. Lewis, second, Col. Marks. Her descendants by her first marriage are noted under the head of the Lewis family. Col. Wm. Lewis being one of the sons of Robert Lewis of Belvoir. By her second marriage Lucy Meriwether had two children: Dr. John Marks and a daughter named Mary who married a gentleman named Moore. Mary Moore and her husband removed to Texas and left issue. Among them were Hon. George Fellows, chief justice of the State, and others.
- 4 Mildred Meriwether daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, married John Gilmer and had eight children: Thomas, Nicholas, George, Francis, David, Harrison, Sarah, Elizabeth and James.
- 4 Jane Meriwether, youngest child of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, who has already been mentioned, irregularly, is taken up again to supply omissions. She was born April 3, 1757. Her mother provided wholly for her in her will. She having been born after her father's death, was not provided for in his will. Mrs. Elizabeth Thornton Meriwether, after the death of her first husband, married Col. Robert Lewis of Belvoir. As before stated, "Pretty Jane Meriwether" married Samuel Dabney, and had eleven children: William, Samuel, Thomas, George, Elizabeth, Charles, Frank, Richard, Mildred, Edmund and John Dabney.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

- 3 James Meriwether son of David Meriwether and his wife, Ann Holmes, born June 1, 1729, married Judith Hardenis Burnly. They had three children, General David Meriwether being the oldest.
- 4 General David Meriwether was born in Louisa county, Virginia, 1754, died in Clark county, Georgia, 1832. He married Miss Frances Wingfield of Wilkes county, Georgia, in 1782. They had eight children: John who lived in Alabama; Major James who married several times and his daughter Fannie married Thomas W. Cobb who was in the United States Senate, and for whom Cobb county was named; Dr. Wm. Meriwether, Fannie, George David, Thomas, Judith who married Rev. Mr. Henning, some of whose descendants are now living in Memphis, Tennessee. David Meriwether entered the Revolutionary army in the Virginia Continental line and continued in active service, except when in captivity, until the close of war. He participated in the battles of Monmouth, Trenton, Brandywine, Germantown, and the seiges of Savannah and Charleston. He was twice elected to Congress and was appointed to fill an unexpired term in the United States Senate. He was appointed by the President of United States in conjunction with General Jackson, to treat with the Southern Indians, and held many other positions of trust and honor.

- 4 Wm. Meriwether, third son of James and Judith Burnly Meriwether, married a Menslow and left six children.
- 5 David Meriwether, second son of Wm. Meriwether, last named, was born in Louisa county, Virginia, October 30, 1800. He removed to Kentucky in early life and his first business venture was in the fur trade, which he conducted with energy, and in which he was eminently successful. When yet a young man he entered politics as a Democrat, and between 1832 and 1883 he was thirteen times elected to the Kentucky Legislature, becoming speaker of the House in 1859. He was in the Constitutional Convention of 1849, and upon the death of Henry Clay, was appointed by Governor Powell to fill his unexpired term in the United States Senate; under President Pierce's administration he was territorial governor of New Mexico from 1853 to 1857. He married Sarah Leonard of Massachusetts, and had seven children: Catherine, William Augustine, Orlando Raymond, James Beverly, Elizabeth, Mary, David.

ginia, and had eight children: Elizabeth married Nicholas Meriwether and died November 27, 1784; Martha married George Meriwether and died 1786; David Wood Meriwether, born 1756, died 1797, married Mary Lewis, daughter of John Lewis of Spotsylvania county, Virginia; Mary (Lewis) Meriwether, died 1801.

- 4 William Meriwether, second son of William and Martha Cox Meriwether, born 1757-8, married Sarah Oldham, May 24. 1788, and died June 26, 1814. His wife died 1830. Mildred, Sarah, Valentine, and Ann, were the other four.
- 5 Sarah Lewis, youngest daughter of David Wood Meriwether and Mary Lewis, born September 9, 1794, married first David Farnsly, January 2, 1814, and second Ebenezer Williams, September 3, 1832, and died 1854. By her first marriage she had six children and by her second marriage she had two, Leah Anne, and Sarah Ebenezer.
- 6 Leah Ann Williams, oldest daughter of Sarah Lewis Meriwether and Ebenezer Williams, married Charles Pawson Atmore and had six children: Wm. Ebenezer, Charles Pawson, Mary Lloyd, Cary, George Williams and Annie, born December 8, 1858, married Paul Caine, December 1880.

- 2 Nicholas Meriwether son of Nicholas Meriwether and Elizabeth Crawford was born 1699 and married Mildred Thornton. The exact date of his death is not known. We learn, however, from the will of his father that he died previous to the making of that instrument, December 12, 1743, as he is referred to in that, as "Nicholas Meriwether, deceased," and one negro girl is bequeathed to his daughter Mildred. There is very little known of the children of this marriage, except the above reference to Mildred, and from tradition, and numerous records, which go to confirm same, that he had a son Thomas who married Jane Lewis, daughter of Robert Lewis of Belvoir.

- 3 Thomas Meriwether, son of the above-named Nicholas Meriwether, was born about 1725, and married Jane, eldest daughter of Col. Robert Lewis of Belvoir. That this Thomas Meriwether was the son of Nicholas and Mildred Thornton is shown by the most conclusive proofs: First, the elder Nicholas makes no mention of any sons except William, David, and Nicholas. David had no son Thomas, and William's son Thomas married Elizabeth Thornton, so that this Thomas had nowhere else to look for his paternity; second, these three sons of Nicholas Meriwether and Elizabeth Crawford being the only males of this generation of the Meriwether name, it necessarily follows that this Thomas was the son of Nicholas Meriwether and Mildred Thornton. That this Thos. married Jane Lewis of Belvoir is equally clear, as there was only one other of the name in the Colony at the time and he married Elizabeth Thornton. It is only necessary to show that Jane Lewis married a Thomas Meriwether, and this is abundantly proved by the will of her father and that of Samuel Cobbs who married her sister, and who refers to her as the wife of Thos. Meriwether; and, finally, Thomas Meriwether and Jane his wife join in a deed to Charles Lewis of Albemarle, conveying land in 1766. So that it is clearly shown that the only two Meriwethers of this generation, by the name of Thomas, married respectively Elizabeth Thornton and Jane Lewis. Some of the descendants of Thomas Meriwether and Jane Lewis have been obtained and herewith given.
- 3 Thomas Meriwether and Jane Lewis had the following: Wm. Meriwether, born 1751; Robert Meriwether, born 1752; Thomas Meriwether, born 1754; and Mary, Jane, Elizabeth, Nicholas and Richard, younger children, date of birth not given.
- 4 Wm. Meriwether, son of Thomas Meriwether and Jane Lewis, born 1751, had issue as follows: Thomas, born 1781; Fran- cis, born 1785; Matilda, born 1790; Lucinda, born 1800; Jane, born 1783; William, born 1792; Robert, born 1795.

- 5 Robert Meriwether, son of the last-named William, and grandson of Thomas Meriwether and Jane Lewis, married Martha Fuqua Baker and had issue as follows: Francis Meriwether, born 1824; Martha Meriwether, born 1827.
- 6 Martha Meriwether, daughter of Robert Meriwether and Martha Fuqua Baker, and great-granddaughter of Thomas Meriwether and Jane Lewis, was born 1827 and married David W. Lewis and had issue as follows: Fannie Grattan Lewis, born 1852, married H. H. Perry of Georgia. Martha Whitten Lewis, born 1855, married Luther B. Ramsauer, Georgia; Anna, born 1857, married Wm. Garrett; Willie Wells, born ——, married James H. Littlefield of Texas; Mary Reagan, born 1862, married W. F. Crussell of Georgia.

The children of Thos. Meriwether will be found with those of Jane Lewis.

This short sketch of the Meriwether family has not been from lack of material. As stated in the outset, this family furnishes enough material for a library. It would have been impossible, however, in a work of this scope, to have taken up and followed out all of the lines, and to have attempted it would have destroyed all interest in a general review of the leading members of the family. Enough has been given to preserve the general features of a family history and to assist any one in search of information in working out their lines. The line of Jane Meriwether, daughter of Nicholas and Elizabeth Crawford, has been run down to completion under the head of her husband, Robert Lewis of Belvoir, and the lines of David and the second Nicholas have been followed up as far as information could be obtained. We will now conclude this sketch with a notice of George Rockingham Gilmer and Meriwether Lewis, either one of whose lives furnishes a family history, in itself of which any family should be proud:

GENEALOGIES OF THE GEORGE ROCKINGHAM GILMER.

This member of the Meriwether family was descended on all sides from one of the most distinguished connections of his day and generation. The Gilmers being leaders in Virginia, politically and professionally, united with the Meriwethers, and then added to that the sturdy Scotch-Irish characteristics of Irish John Lewis, and you have something of the make-up of George Rockingham Gilmer. His grandfather, Peachy Ridgway Gilmer, born about 1735, married Mary Meriwether, daughter of Thomas Meriwether and Elizabeth Thornton, born April 4, 1742, and their son Thomas, father of George Rockingham Gilmer, married Elizabeth Lewis, daughter of Thomas Lewis, and granddaughter of Irish John Lewis of Augusta county, Virginia, thus combining, as above stated, the elements going to make up his remarkable character.

At what time Governor Gilmer came to Georgia is not definitely known. He may have been a native Georgian as many of his Meriwether kin came to Georgia at the close of the Revolution, and he was born about 1790. Be this as it may, he was a Virginian by blood, and a thorough Georgian by adoption. He represented his district in Congress for many years and was twice governor of the State. He was an extreme Whig which party had succeeded the Federal party, and the antagonism between them and the Democratic party, and especially General Jackson, was intense. In this antagonism Governor Gilmer shared, and at times "out Heroded Herod." He fought Jackson's Administration with all of the vigor of his bright mind, and when his logic and reasoning powers failed to check the admirers and followers of Jackson, he would turn loose upon them his ridicule and sarcasm in which he excelled. For ridicule "Nancy Hart" was his model. Nancy was a Revolutionary heroine, whose devotion to the cause of freedom was equaled by few and surpassed by none; but she was red-headed and cross-eyed and utterly regardless of all of the conventionalities of life and many were the deeds of heroism that she performed, and many times the Tories were made to stand in mortal dread of "Nancy Hart." On the occasion of a band of Tories raiding through North Georgia, a party of three stopped at her house. She was alone, and they ordered her to prepare supper for them which she proceeded to do. When they sat down to eat she seized a musket and ordered them to surrender. As she had the "drop on them" and being cross-eyed, they did not know which one she was pointing at, all of them threw up their hands. She stood guard over them all night and next morning carried them off, prisoners to the camp of the patriots.

In order to curry favor with General Jackson after he became president, there was always some member of the House offering some resolution appealing to his vanity, one of which was, that all of the vacant niches in the rotunda of the Capitol be filled with paintings of the different battles he had fought. To this Governor Gilmer made no objection but offered an amendment, reserving one place for a painting of Nancy Hart crossing Broad river with her clothes in one hand and a musket in the other, marching three Tory prisoners to the camp of Capt. Cook. It is needless to say that the resolution was killed.

The political school to which Governor Gilmer attached himself, rapidly become more and more unpopular, and while his party embodied hosts of the best element of the country, controlled to a large extent by the giant mind of Henry Clay, yet the rank and file drifted away from the teaching of the fathers, and Governor Gilmer's success and even usefulness was materially crippled thereby. It will be remembered that Kentucky was always a Whig State until after the war, and that Tennessee voted against Polk (her own son), for President.

MERIWETHER LEWIS.

Meriwether Lewis has been sketched and the story of his expeditions fully told under that head of the Lewis family, and the result of that expedition has told its own story and become part of American history, but why it should ever have become known in history as the expedition of Lewis and Clark passes comprehension, and proves that history is no bar to fiction, but often serves as a basis upon which to build it. The expedition was in no sense the Expedition of Lewis and Clark, but the expedition of Meriwether Lewis. It is true that Clark was with Lewis and that he was a commissioned officer, but he was there by the permission of Lewis—simply as commandant of the privates.

Mr. Jefferson had just effected the Louisiana purchase, but that did not reach to the Pacific and the only means of accomplishing this end was by discovery and occupation. And to this end he turned his attention at once. In his letter appointing Lewis to carry his plans into execution, under date June 20, 1803, he uses this prefatory language: "Your situation as Secretary of the President of the United States has made you acquainted with the object of my confidential message to congress, of January 18, 1803. You have seen the act and you are appointed to carry its provisions into execution." Clark's name was at no time mentioned in connection with the expedition. So broad was the authority given Lewis that he was authorized to name his successor so that, in the event of his death, no confusion would result, and Clark could not have succeeded to the command unless named by Lewis. Therefore, Clarks name has no legitimate connection with it.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM CLARK.

Far be it from the authors of this history to detract either from the merits or fame of Captain Clark, or to fail to mete out to him the just mead of praise to which he is entitled. Indeed, every one connected with that expedition is entitled to all praise, from Lewis down to the humblest private, and while the names of only two are perpetuated in history, they were all a band of heroes. It was only with reference to the strict historical text that I was referring. The reader is cited to the appointment of, and instructions to, Lewis by Mr. Jefferson under head of "Lewis family."

There is no doubt that there was Congressional recognition of the services of Captain Clark after their return, which necessarily connected Clark with the expedition, but until it had been completed, "Lewis" was the only name known.

McALLISTER FAMILY.

In the list of American families there are very few whose history antedates that of McAllister or whose descendants have better reason to hold in high esteem than those who have come down in that line, for they have back of them an ancestry whose lives were remarkable mostly for the performance of worthy deeds; or whose ancestral record has been better maintained by those following in succession. Many, it is true, have fallen short of the true standard, but as a rule, with a steady of purpose, like the needle to the pole, in every generation, they have left "footprints upon the sand of time."

The McAllisters are descended from McAllister McDonalds, the progenitors of the McAllisters, who flourished about 1263, who traced back to Somerled, Thayne of Arguyle and first Lord of the Isles, who was son of Magnus, sometimes called "Barefoot," King of Norway. They were also maternally descended from a sister of Robert Bruce (The Bruce) who married a Highland Chief of that name. The family crest is an upraised arm and hand with a cross, crosslet, fitchel and the motto: "Pes Mane Pes Terras."

The McAllisters were not among the early settlers in the colonies, as it was well up in the eighteenth century when they made their appearance on this side the Atlantic. But while Pennsylvania was yet a wilderness, two traditional brothers (some say three but the authors were never able to find the third), came over from Scotland. These were Archibald and Hugh McAllister who landed at Philadelphia 1732. Archibald took up lands and settled in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, which then embraced all of the territory west of the Susquehanna river. Hugh McAllister came farther south and settled in Maryland where the town of Cumberland was afterwards built.

Archibald McAllister located at Big Spring, near where the town of York now stands, and with his wife, who came from Scotland with him, spent their lives at that place, where they raised their family. They had six sons and two daughters: John McAllister, Richard McAllister, James McAllister, Archibald McAllister, Daniel McAllister, Andrew McAllister, Mary McAllister, Jean McAllister.

It is not intended to trace the descendants of Archibald McAllister further than to give brief sketches of a few of them whose names belong to history, as Miss Mary McAllister one of his descendants, and daughter of Mr. James H. McAllister of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, has published a complete history of all of the generations.

2 Col. Richard McAllister was no doubt the most conspicuous of Archibald McAllister's sons. He commanded a regiment under Washington's immediate command, and was with him in all of the principal engagements of the Revolution. Col. Richard McAllister had ten children, as follows:

- 3 ¹Jane, born March 3, 1750, married Robert White of Georgetown, District of Columbia.
- 3 ²Abdiel, died single. He served with Arnold at the siege of Montreal and Quebec, was taken prisoner and paroled.
- 3 ³Mary McAllister, died single.
- 3 ⁴Archibald McAllister, born 1756, married Elizabeth Carson and had six children. He served in the Revolutionary army with the rank of captain.
- 3 ⁵Mathew was born May 4, 1758, died in Savannah, Georgia. He married Maria Hannah Gibbons and was the father of Mathew Hall McAllister of whom more will be seen hereafter.
- 3 ⁶Nancy married Patrick Hays.
- 3 ⁷Elizabeth married a cousin, John McAllister, and removed to Tennessee.
- 3 ⁸Sarah, born April 28, 1765, married John Orme. She was the grandmother of Dr. Orme of Atlanta.
- 3 ⁹Richard, born August 28, 1763, died in Georgia.
- 3 ¹⁰Margaret, born February 23, 1767, died single.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

3 ¹¹Jessie, born February 23, 1768, married and had several children.

John McAllister who married Elizabeth McAllister, daughter of Col. Richard McAllister, was doubtless the grandfather of Judge Wm. McAllister of Nashville, Tennessee. It is true that Judge McAllister says that his grandfather married a Miss Aikin, but he says that he was from Taseytown, Maryland and as this is the locality in which John McAllister resided, and the records show that he was a widower when he left there for Tennessee, his marriage with Miss Aikin was no doubt a second marriage.

Another circumstance goes to confirm this conclusion. Judge McAllister spells his name with one "l," and the records show that this John McAllister did the same, notwithstanding the fact that his first wife who was his first cousin, spelled her name with two "l's," and his father-in-law, Col. Richard McAllister, who was his father's brother, spelled his name with two "l's." This incident goes to show how easily families may lose their identity, as Judge McAllister is still at sea as to his ancestry back of his grandfather.

Many of the relatives of Judge McAllister are to be found in Tennessee and many of the name doubtless belonging to the same family, are scattered over Kentucky, Missouri, and other States, but so negligent have the American people been in keeping up with their family lines that the great majority have lost all clue to their ancestry. The wife of General Humphrey Marshall of Kentucky, member of the United States Congress from that State, and also of the Confederate Congress, and general in the Confederate army was a McAllister.

Mathew McAllister, fifth child of Col. Richard McAllister, as before stated, was born May 4, 1758, and removed to Savannah. He left a number of sons and daughters who have not only scattered throughout Georgia, but their descendants may be found from New York to California.

4 Mathew Hall McAllister, was a son of Mathew McAllister and Mariah Gibbons, born and raised in Georgia, and educated in the best schools. He chose the law as his profession and soon forged to the front, both at the bar and in politics, but as he belonged to the old Whig party, which was then fast losing popularity in the South, it generally fell to his lot to lead a forlorn hope. He led his party in a number of campaigns in Georgia, and while he always acquitted himself creditably, no human power could withstand the current that had set in and that bore Democracy on to victory. Too firmly fixed in his political opinions to think of changing them and too conscientious to falsify his convictions, seeing no probability of a change in Georgia, he turned his face to the setting sun and the Golden Gate, and cast his lot in California. This was in 1850, when the gold fever was at its height. McAllister was no gold-hunter in the ordinary sense of the term; yet he knew full well that amid the flow of prosperity he would doubtless share his part.

Mathew Hall McAllister went to the front of the bar upon his arrival in California, for his reputation had gone before him, and he was soon elevated to the Supreme bench of the State. His career as an attorney and also as jurist, after going to California, was to say the least, brilliant, far outshining any political fame that he could have won in Georgia, even if he had been successful. He had four sons: one graduated from West Point and was an officer in the United States army; his other sons were lawyers; two of them were Supreme Court Judges in California, and the fourth, the eccentric Ward McAllister, came east and became a well known figure in New York society.

Ward McAllister needs no eulogy from me, much less does he stand in need of any introduction to the public. His reputation was public property for twenty years before he died. He made it so. He did not seek popularity or notoriety, but while he very successfully avoided the first he could not escape the latter. He was accused of toadying to the moneyed aristocracy of New York for gain; he neither toadied nor sought to profit by his connection with society. He was a man of ample means and his family the social equal of the wealthiest nabobs of Europe or America, but he loved the best in everything, and sought it among the wealthy. His book, "Society as I found it" doubtless gave him more notoriety than anything else, or everything else put together.

HUGH McALLISTER.

It is passing strange that ancestral lines, though of so much importance, often involving financial interests of vast proportions are so lightly esteemed and allowed to pass from the memory of the descendants, and sometimes to become entirely obliterated in so short a time.

Hugh McAllister came over from Scotland in 1732, the same year that Archibald came over, and like Archibald landed at Philadelphia. As the sequel shows, they both penetrated the forest, but cast their lots in different localities. There can be no doubt that these two Scotchmen were brothers, as undisputed family history says "two brothers came over together," but before the third generation had come upon the scene the descendants of each had entirely lost sight of each other. The descendants of Hugh did not know what had become of Archibald, and the descendants of Archibald only knew that their ancestor had a brother who came over from Scotland with him, and did not even know his name, but had a family tradition that he had "gone South," when in fact he had only crossed the Maryland line from Pennsylvania, and then two brothers had raised their families within less than one hundred miles of each other. It must be considered, however, that a hundred miles at that time meant five days of laborious travel, through dense forest, over which roamed hostile Indians and presented much greater difficulties than crossing the Atlantic now.

Hugh McAllister, as has been seen, came over from Scotland 1732, landing in Philadelphia and, as tradition says, "came South," but as the sequel shows, settled in western Maryland where the town of Cumberland now stands. Here he spent his entire life and raised his family, among whom were four sons: Hugh, William, John and James. While these sons doubtless participated in the Revolution, nothing is known of their war history, except John, and only the record of his enlistment and commission is known. Of John McAllister more will be said hereafter. William McAllister married and left descendants. General Robert McAllister of New Jersey, who was an officer in the Federal army during the war between the States, was a grandson of Hugh McAllister and son of William McAllister; a daughter of General Robert McAllister married Governor James H. Beavers of Pennsylvania and resides at Bellfont, Centre county, Pennsylvania, and another, Mrs. J. H. Baldwin, resides at Edgwood Park, Aleghenny county, Pennsylvania.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

2 John McAllister, son of Hugh McAllister, was born at Cumberland, Maryland, about 1745, and died in Campbell county, Virginia, 1821. In a list of officers in Col. Thomas Hartley's Pennsylvania battalion, dated Middlebrook, 17th June, 1777, captain Archibald McAllister's name appears; date of commission, April 18, 1777.

In the same list John McAllister's name is mentioned as quartermaster. His commission is dated April 17, 1777.

2 John McAllister came South at the close of the American Revolution and purchased lands in Campbell county, Virginia, as early as 1787, on what was known as Falling river. He married Miss Elizabeth McReynolds of that county, by whom he had five children, all sons: Joseph, John, James, William and Thomas. John McAllister's will, dated April 14, 1818, was probated at Campbell Courthouse, June 6, 1821.

3 ¹Joseph McAllister born 1783, married Miss Helen, a relative, and about 1830 emigrated to Western Kentucky. They had two sons, Shepard and William.

3 ²John McAllister married Miss Moors, emigrated to Indiana and then to Illinois. They had a family of four: Thomas Bell and Christopher, and two daughters. John McAllister was a lawyer of brilliant promise.

3 ³James McAllister married Miss Hopkins of Bedford county, Virginia. He died young. They had one son, John Hopkins McAllister. He was living in Virginia as late as 1872. His mother had died a short time previous to that time.

- 3 ⁴William C. McAllister, born 1789, died 1841, aged 52. He married Miss Sarah White Cobbs, daughter of Captain Robert Cobbs of Campbell county. Wm. C. McAllister was active and prominent both in political and judicial life. He represented his county in the Legislature from time to time. His will is probated at Campbell Courthouse, June, 1841. William C. McAllister and Sarah White Cobbs had only two children to reach adult age, Robert Cobbs and John Meriwether.
- 4 ¹Robert Cobbs McAllister was born May 3, 1830, in Campbell county, Virginia. He selected medicine as his profession, graduating from the Richmond Medical College 1857. He married Miss Moore of Appomattox county, Virginia. They never had any children. Dr. McAllister practiced his profession in Campbell and Appomattox counties, Virginia, until 1878, at which time he removed to Morgan county, Tennessee, where he had practiced with remarkable success for 26 years. He has been in active and successful practice for 47 years, and is now nearing his 75th birthday.
- 4 ³John Meriwether McAllister, born October 3, 1833, in Campbell county, Virginia, married Miss Frances Ann Dibrell, daughter of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell of Lynchburg, Virginia, August 18, 1857. He chose the law as his profession, attending the Lexington Law School, then Washington College (now Washington and Lee University), graduating in the class of 1856. But before he had fairly gotten settled down in his profession the rude hand of war changed all of his plans, and he drifted into railroad operations, making his headquarters at Atlanta, Georgia. John Meriwether McAllister and Frances Ann Dibrell had eight children, but only two lived to be grown, Frances Elizabeth and Robert Lewis Dibrell. [Mr. J. M. McAllister who assisted so materially in the compilation of "Genealogies of the Lewis and Kindred Families" died March 9, 1906, while the book was being printed.—L. B. T.] est magnitude, but with no physique to sustain it. She graduated with honors from the best schools in Georgia. She took to literature, wrote character and dialect stories successfully, and became widely and favorably known as a writer of short stories. She married Dr. Wm. H. Leyden, December 8, 1897, whom she survived several years. They left two children, Estelle Dibrell, and John McAllister, though his mother, after his father's death, added to his name "Wm. Herring." She died May 18, 1901.

- 5 Robert Lewis Dibrell McAllister was born in Atlanta, Georgia, December 2, 1872. Was educated in the Atlanta Schools, graduated from Auburn College, Alabama, and the University of Virginia, and chose the law as his profession, which he has followed, with varying success, since he left the University. He holds at present an official position with the Supreme Court of Georgia. He married Miss Sarah Elizabeth Smith of St. Louis, a lineal descendant of Professor Cooper, for a long time president of the University of South Carolina, who was favorably mentioned in English history, and was a personal and intimate friend of Thomas Jefferson. R. L. D. McAllister and his wife "Bessie" Smith have three bright children, Lesesne Meriwether, Dorothy Lee, and Robert Lewis Dibrell, Jr., aged respectively: seven, five and three; also, Cornelia, aged three months, a bright blue-eyed little cherub.

The McAllister family has been taken up in this volume only because of the intimate association and connection of one of its branches with the leading names which go to make up the record, as it would have been impossible otherwise to show intelligently what these connections were. No attempt has been made to give the genealogy of the family, except that of John McAllister, the son of Hugh McAllister, as any attempt to give a full genealogy would have been futile. Miss Mary McAllister, direct descendant of Archibald, who is thoroughly posted on that line, having published their genealogy, it would be needless to attempt to enlarge or improve on it, while the other branches seem to have utterly neglected all attempt to keep alive anything like a family history. Even Mrs. Governor Beavers and Mrs.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Baldwin, descendants of Hugh McAllister, through his son William, ladies of position and family pride, could not be induced to become interested in genealogical work.

While I have dealt with Hugh McAllister, the head of this branch, as the brother of Archibald, there is no record evidence of this fact, and Miss Mary McAllister in dealing with the line of Archibald does not accept Hugh as a brother of the latter, but the identity of the date of their arrival in America, the generally accepted tradition in the family of Archibald which has been accorded all the sanctity of family history, that he did have a brother who came over with him, all point unmistakably to Hugh McAllister as the brother of Archibald.

The identity of John McAllister, son of Hugh, has been definitely settled by the pension records, which locate him, at time of death, in Campbell county, Virginia..

BOULTON FAMILY.

The emigrant of the Boulton family came from near Birmingham, England, and settled in Virginia prior to the Revolutionary war. It is claimed on what is believed to be reliable family history, that he was of the same family as Matthew Boulton, the noted scientist and mechanic of Soho, near Birmingham, a younger brother or son of Matthew Boulton. This claim is strengthened by the fact that the spelling of the name is identical with that of Matthew Boulton, while there are other Boultons in the United States from Bolton, England, who spell their names "Bolton."

Matthew Boulton belonged to a very old family, entitled to coat armor, and was for some time high sheriff of Staffordshire. He was born September 8, 1728. The manufactory at Soho, near Birmingham, was erected by him, and in its operations he employed nearly a thousand persons. As the improver of the steam engine, of the apparatus for raising water and other fluids, and in the manufacture of our copper, and some of our silver coin, he has immortalized his name. He made nearly all the large pennies used in England, during the latter part of the reign of George III, known as "Boulton pennies," and were in size as large as a silver dollar. His life was an uninterrupted application to the advancement of the useful arts, and to the promotion of the commercial interests of the country. Mr. Boulton died at Soho, August 17, 1809, and was interred at Handsworth, being followed to the grave by 600 of his workmen who had each a silver medal presented to him, which had been struck for the occasion. The manufactory was sold many years ago, the present owners not being named Boulton, but the property is still known as the Boulton Estate. Andrew Carnegie, the well known philanthropist, said of Matthew Boulton in a piece printed in the Globe-Democrat of St. Louis, April, 1905: "It may be doubted whether there is on record so charming a business connection as that of Matthew Boulton and James Watt; in their own increasing close union for twenty-five years, and at its expiration, in the renewal of that union in their sons under the same title, in their sons' close union as friends, without friction, as in the first generation; in the wonderful progress of the world resulting from their works; in their lying down side by side, in death upon the bosom of mother earth in the quiet church-yard as they had stood side by side in life. In the sweet and precious influences which emanate from all this, may we not gratefully make acknowledgment, that in contemplation thereof, we are lifted into a higher atmosphere, refreshed, encouraged, and bettered by the true story of men like ourselves, whom, if we can never hope to equal, we may at least try in part to imitate."

The progenitor of the Boulton family in America, was presumably Rice.

1 Rice Boulton came to Virginia before the Revolutionary war and settled near Petersburg, where he married a Miss Talley of French descent. As did many of the early settlers of Virginia, Rice Boulton turned his attention to raising and shipping tobacco. He was also a splendid blacksmith. He was a man of great muscular strength, always coming out "best man," in any pugilistic encounter.

He was taken prisoner during the Revolutionary war by the British soldiers, and the causes leading up to his being taken prisoner, as related by his descendants, are as follows: "Several Red Coats came to his shop to have their horses shod; and while there began making use of profane epithets calling him a rebel, etc. One of them reached for the sledge-hammer and he seeing and realizing their intention, smote the side of the face and one ear off of one of them with the red-hot iron he had prepared to make the nails for shoeing their horses." This happened near the close of the Revolutionary war, so that he was soon released.

Although we have not obtained a complete record of his children, we will present the record of those we have, that others may add to them. They are as follows:

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

- 2 ¹William Boulton went south and settled in Mississippi, or Louisiana. We have no further trace of him.
- 2 ²John Boulton married in Owen county, Kentucky, name of wife unknown. They were parents of one child, Mary Boulton.
- 2 ³Robert Boulton, of whom we have no record except that he had his foot knocked off by a cannon ball in the war of 1812.
- 2 ⁴Mary Boulton married —— Morton and lived in Tennessee. They had a son, Robert Boulton Morton a dentist.
- 2 ⁵Joel Boulton married a lady of Owen county, Kentucky.
- 2 ⁶Rice Boulton, born near Petersburg, Virginia, December 23, 1787, served nine years apprenticeship as blacksmith, during these years, he spent his spare hours studying, thereby acquiring the rudiments of an education. He obtained the best education the schools of that day could give him and was afterwards taught mathematics by private teachers. He was a noted mathematician being often called upon to solve problems no one in his vicinity could solve. He emigrated to Mason county, Kentucky, in company with Ned and Jack Robinson where he married October 20, 1814, Eliza Pepper, born September 17, 1798, daughter of Jesse Pepper and Elizabeth (or Betsey) Lamkin. Elizabeth Lamkin's mother's maiden name was Munday. She was a sister to John Munday, who owned a grant of several thousand acres of land in Kentucky, which he bequeathed to his niece, Betsey (Lamkin) Pepper. Upon this land a silver mine was afterwards discovered. Her brothers were: Peter Lamkin, went to South Carolina, where he died unmarried, leaving a large estate; James Lamkin lived in Lynchburg, Virginia; Lewis Lamkin lived in Versailles, Woodford county, Kentucky, single; Jesse Pepper had two brothers named Elijah and William all from Virginia. Jesse Pepper's children were (1) Elkanah Pepper, born before 1798, married Miss King of Mason county, Kentucky, and had two daughters. Charlotte married Anderson, Elizabeth married Augustus

Their children were: Elizabeth married Dr. Bailey; Ann married Samuel Mannen; Fannie married Thomas Victor, brother to Dr. S. B. and William Victor late of Columbia, Missouri; Laura Pepper married Perry Bateman; Maria Pepper married Warder Victor. (4) Abner Pepper married Miss Murrell of near Washington, Mason county, Kentucky. (5) Alfred Pepper married Miss Snyder. (6) William Pepper, died in 1832, with cholera. (7) Amanda Pepper died young in Mason county, Kentucky.

2⁶Rice Boulton was a prominent educator having taught public school, composed and taught vocal music. He was sheriff of Mason county, Kentucky, for several years. He owned a farm bordering on the Ohio river in Mason county, Kentucky, and was engaged extensively in raising and shipping tobacco; in its cultivation he employed many slaves. His wife was a woman of fine executive ability, rare mental attainments and a devoted Christian. Rice Boulton and his wife left Kentucky for Missouri in March, 1853. He died in Boone county, Missouri, March 17, 1866 and his widow May 31, 1884. They were buried in the family burying ground on the farm then owned by their son Judge J. A. Boulton.

Children of Rice and Eliza Boulton all born in Mason county, Kentucky.

3¹Peter Lamkin Boulton, born September 14, 1815, engaged in shipping tobacco from Augusta, Bracken county, Kentucky, in partnership with his brother James, where he married June 13, 1839, Ann Eliza Baker, born in spring of 1823. He went from Kentucky to Caldwell county, Missouri, where he owned and cultivated a farm of 400 acres. He died in fall of 1883, and was buried near Cameron, Clinton county, Missouri. His widow, was living in Kansas City, Kansas

FRANCES ANN DIBRELL.

Frances Ann, the third and youngest daughter of Charles Lee and Mary Lambeth Dibrell, was born May 2, 1837, at Dibrell's Springs, Botetourt county, Virginia. Her early life was spent in Richmond and Lynchburg at which places her father was engaged in business at different times. She lost her mother at a very tender age, and spent her early womanhood with her relatives. On the 18th of August, 1857, she was married to J. M. McAllister of Campbell county, Virginia, and it is not overstepping the proprieties of a volume devoted to genealogy, to say that they have spent 44 years of a happy married life, a length of time rarely allotted to any couple, of a continued married life.

Under the head of the McAllister family a more extended account will be given of her and her descendants.

[Since the above was written, Mrs. Frances Ann McAllister has passed into the "Great Beyond." No language can do justice to her memory. Her life and character are written upon the hearts of those who knew and loved her in life, and can only be revealed, as the "Ages of Eternity Roll." A loved and loving wife, and devoted mother, a sincere and disinterested friend, a devout, pure-minded, blood-washed and life-long Christian, she has gone to her God.—AUTHOR.]

5 JAMES WATSON DIBRELL, JR.

James Watson Dibrell, Jr. ("Wattie Dibrell"), the third son of Charles Lee Dibrell, and Mary Jane Lambeth, was born December 25, 1842, at Dibrell's Springs, Botetourt county, Virginia. His early life was spent in Lynchburg, where he was for the most part educated. "Wattie Dibrell" was a wonderfully bright youth and attracted all with whom he came in contact. In 1856 a gentleman by the name of Church formed a very warm attachment for him and insisted that his father allow him to send him to his old home, Munson, Massachusetts, to be educated, but he fell a victim to a severe attack of typhoid fever which left the effects of its ravages upon him to such an extent that he was compelled to return home. The result of this spell was such that curvature of the spine followed which gave rise to a serious deformity from which he never recovered. In 1860 he went to Texas with a view to growing up with the country, but before he had time to settle squarely down to business, the war clouds burst forth with all their fury, and with all true Southerners he took the field, and though extremely delicate, being scarcely more than an invalid, he was in the saddle during the entire war.

When the war was over, having gone into the service with what was already believed to be a shattered constitution, having been the victim of a very severe affliction when a boy, he came out of the army, penniless, homeless, and as far as human sight could go, friendless; for whatever friends he had were either too far away to render him any assistance, or in the same sad plight as himself. And thus it was, with four of the best years of his early manhood spent in the service of the Lost Cause, and consequently lost, he began life in 1865 at the age of twenty-three; and as the sequel has shown, battled against adverse fate and proved himself a genuine hero. His success was not what the world would call brilliant, but it was truly wonderful, because it was in the face of apparently insurmountable difficulties, which were overcome by the most persistent energy of life and tenacity of purpose. He was in the United States Mail service from 1878 until his death, February, 1896, and during that time performed the duties of his position under physical difficulties which none but a hero in the fullest sense of the term would dare to undertake.

In 1871 James W. Dibrell was married to Miss Marza Dalton, a daughter of a truly historic Texas family, and resided in Galveston, Texas, up to the time of his death.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

James W. Dibrell and Marza Dalton had six children, two sons and four daughters: Mary Lee, James Watson, Geneva, Marsaline, Charles Granger, and Frances Zelma.

Mary Lee and Marsaline both married but died without issue. Geneva married Robert Sholes and resides at a railroad station between Houston and Galveston at which he is depot agent; they have one child, a daughter.

5 JOHN MEREDITH DIBRELL.

John Meredith Dibrell, the youngest of the sons of Charles Lee Dibrell and Mary Lambeth who survived infancy, was born in Richmond, Virginia, February 21, 1845. His early boyhood was spent in Lynchburg and vicinity. At the age of fourteen he went with his father to Texas, and spending a few years in the mercantile establishment with his relatives, Crockett and William Dibrell, the entire drift of his life was changed. The war between the states broke out at this time, and young Dibrell, like every one else of his age in whose veins coursed Southern blood, responded to the first buglecall. It is true that he was only sixteen, but nevertheless he entered the cavalry of Colonels Terry and Lubbock, and continued in the service until the close of the war.

When the war had ended, John M. Dibrell commenced business at Calvert, Texas, where he became established and made many friends. In 1874 he married Lella Preston, of Calvert, a descendant of the celebrated Virginia family of that name. He was very prominent and popular in his county, and as a consequence was entrusted with positions of honor and trust. At the time of his death he was sheriff of his county. In July, 1877, John M. Dibrell died suddenly at his home in Calvert, in the thirty-third year of his life. He left only one child, a daughter named Minnie Lee. His widow married a second time an excellent gentleman by the name of Bingham, by which marriage she has several children. They reside in Beaumont, Texas, about one hundred miles east of Houston.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

6 Minnie Lee Dibrell has developed into a beautiful woman, attractive and very popular. She married William Dixon, a resident of South Carolina, afterwards of Atlanta, Georgia, and more recently of Beaumont, Texas.

EDWIN DIBRELL.

4 Edwin Dibrell, third son of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson, was born September 19, 1794, in Buckingham county, Virginia. He married in Nashville, Tennessee, his cousin, Martha Shrewsbury, daughter of Drewry Shrewsbury and Elizabeth Dibrell. They had nine children: James Anthony, born August 15, 1817; Elizabeth Watson, born October 8, 1819; Richard Henry Lee, born April 30, 1820; Letitia Perkins, born December 20, 1824; Mary Jane, born June 6, 1828; Martha Sophronia, born May 7, 1831; Charles Drewry Shrewsbury, born September 30, 1834; Edwin, date of birth not obtained; and Virginia, born October 1, 1840.

Edwin Dibrell settled in Nashville, Tennessee, early in life, and during his residence there married, and it was there that all of his children were born. While he was not in politics, he was nevertheless an intimate friend of James K. Polk, and when Mr. Polk was advanced to the Presidency in 1844, and inaugurated March 4, 1845, he gave Mr. Dibrell an important appointment in Washington. This was something of a turning point in Mr. Dibrell's history. He never returned to Nashville.

When Mr. Polk's term of office had expired and he was succeeded by General Taylor, who was elected by the Whig party, Mr. Dibrell was superseded by one of Taylor's choice, after which time he made his home in Richmond, Virginia.

6 DR. JAMES ANTHONY DIBRELL

Oldest son of Edwin Dibrell and Martha Shrewsbury, was born at Nashville, Tennessee, August 15, 1817, and died at Van Buren, Arkansas, July 23, 1897, aged nearly 80 years.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

He married Anne Elizabeth Pryor, daughter of Nicholas B. and Sallie M. Pryor, of Van Buren, Arkansas, and had the following children: Angela Medora, born December 9, 1841; James Anthony, born August 7, 1844, who died July 9, 1845; James Anthony, born August 20, 1846; Thomas Henry, born September 19, 1849, died July 19, 1853; Anne Eliza ("Missie"), born January 1, 1852; Sarah Susan, born November 10, 1856; Edwin Richard, born October 21, 1858; Richard Griffith, born July 24, 1860; Mattie or Mathew Shrewsbury, born December 3, 1866.

Dr. James A. Dibrell, after graduating in medicine, settled in Van Buren, Arkansas, early in life, married and raised his family there.

Following will be found some of the notices of Dr. Dibrell's death, from the Van Buren Daily Venture and the Times-Democrat, of Fort Smith:

From the Van Buren Daily Venture: "'Earth to earth and dust to dust' has been said over the remains of Dr. James A. Dibrell, and his body has been consigned to its last resting-place in the city of the dead. Many were the tears that fell in grief at the loss of this venerable man.

"The funeral sermon was preached at the Presbyterian church by the Reverend Tucker, in which he spoke feelingly of the saintly life of the deceased. The sermon finished, the beautiful burial service of the Masons was read, and all that was mortal of Dr. James A. Dibrell passed from sight to be seen no more on earth."

Then follows a memorial of his Masonic lodge, delivered by the Worshipful Master, H. C. Johnson:

"My Brethren: I have called you to assemble in the character of Masons, to pay the last tribute of our esteem to an honored citizen, a devoted Mason, a devout Christian. And when we say that he shone with a lustre that marked his consequence among men, that as a citizen he was widely and well known; that he proudly unfurled the Christian banner in early life, and that he wore the badge of a Mason with credit to himself and ‘honor to the institution,’ there is little more to be said.

“What a glorious record to be inscribed to his memory! An honored and beloved citizen; a faithful and devoted Mason; a sturdy and devout Christian.

“And now, with sorrowing hearts, my brethren, let us lay to rest all that is mortal of our deceased brother, Dr. James A. Dibrell, and may we emulate his many virtues!”

From the Fort Smith News-Record: “Dr. James A. Dibrell died at his home in Van Buren this morning at the ripe age of 79.

“Dr. Dibrell was one of the most prominent citizens of this section of the state, and was likewise a man eminent in his profession. He came to this part of the state nearly sixty years ago, and with the exception of a brief period when he was absent in the army, has resided at his present home in Van Buren during the entire time.

“He at once took the foremost place in the medical fraternity, and held it without intermission. He was zealous in the performance of his professional duties, and was ever ready to respond to the call of those who needed his services.

“He practically died in harness, and died a martyr to the profession to which he devoted three-score years of his long, honorable and useful career.

“Dr. Dibrell leaves three sons and four daughters to mourn his death. His sons are Dr. James Dibrell, of Little Rock, and Drs. Edward and Matthew Dibrell, one of whom was associated with him in later years. His son, Dr. James Dibrell, of Little Rock, is a distinguished member of the medical fraternity, with a professional reputation nearly as widespread as that of his deceased father. His other two sons are likewise highly respected socially and professionally, and have inherited much of their father’s zeal, and have made enviable reputations in the practice of their profession. In short, the dead physician’s sons will do much toward keeping alive the memory of their deceased and worthy father.

“Three of Dr. Dibrell’s daughters reside in this city. They are Mrs. Dr. Duval, Mrs. George T. Sparks, and Mrs. Dr. Hines. The fourth daughter, Mrs. Irene Shipley, lives in Van Buren.

"Dr. Dibrell's death removes from the medical fraternity of this state one of its oldest and most distinguished members, and one whose loss will be lamented by thousands who knew the aged physician during the years of his long residence in Van Buren and the country tributary."

5 RICHARD HENRY LEE DIBRELL.

Second son of Edwin and Martha Shrewsbury Dibrell, born April 30, 1820, married his cousin, Mary Jane Jones, daughter of William D. Jones, a merchant of "New Store," Buckingham county, Virginia.

Mr. Dibrell went into business in Richmond, Virginia, early in life, and under the firm name of Dibrell & Jones, they were extensive and successful commission merchants for a number of years. They made tobacco a specialty, and commanded the trade of all lower Virginia. Mr. Richard Dibrell had four sons and three daughters. A son and daughter, James and Mary Lee, met death in a tragic manner. James, when a boy of about fifteen, was drowned while bathing in the Falls of James River, and Mary Lee, who had but recently married a gentleman by the name of Apperson, came to her death from burning, her clothing having caught fire from an open grate. His oldest son, William, was educated in Germany, and afterwards settled down in Richmond in the tobacco business with his father.

6 Alphonso Dibrell, second son of Richard Henry Lee Dibrell, and Richard Lewis Dibrell, a younger brother, engaged in the tobacco business in Danville, Virginia, under the firm name of Dibrell Brothers. Alphonso died unmarried, but the business was continued by Lewis Dibrell under the same firm name.

6 Lewis Dibrell is still in the tobacco business in Danville and has been successful in business, he married and has an interesting family.

Having met Mr. Dibrell, and having corresponded with him from time to time for several years, and having known his father and mother, brothers and sisters, for a number of years I have felt a peculiar interest in all of them, and take great pleasure in making this brief reference to Richard Lewis Dibrell, and only regret that I have not sufficient data to give the lineage of his wife and to refer intelligently to his children. This reference to them, however, will suffice to direct the attention of the searcher after genealogical history and enable them the better to reach a more extended data.

Mr. Dibrell had three daughters, the older Mary Lee, having come to a tragic end—having been burned to death. The other two daughters, Bettie Von Gronin and Kate Mieure, were bright and beautiful girls, and attractive and accomplished young ladies. The names that I have mentioned in regard to those young ladies, however, are names that are attached to them as children, and I do not know that they retained them after they were grown up. I think it doubtful that Bettie retained the name of Von Gronin, or that Kate retained the name of Mieure, as when I saw them later in life they seemed to have no recollection of either. They both made advantageous marriages, and one of them resides in Henderson, North Carolina, and the other, near Burkville, Virginia.

4 ELIZABETH NICHOLAS DIBRELL.

4 Elizabeth Dibrell was the oldest daughter of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson. She was born in Buckingham county, Virginia, March 16, 1798, and died at New Madrid, Missouri, October 16, 1861. She married Archibald Hatcher in May, 1818, in Buckingham county, Virginia. Archibald Hatcher was born in Bedford county, Virginia, March 15, 1789, and died in Lafayette, Indiana, March 1, 1845. He removed from Lynchburg, Virginia, to Lafayette, Indiana, in 1837, and became the first mayor of the city of Lafayette in 1838. Archibald Hatcher and Elizabeth Dibrell had nine children:

5 ¹Robert A. Hatcher the eldest, born in Lynchburg.

5 ²James Watson Dibrell Hatcher, born in Lynchburg, July 25, 1820, and died in Lafayette, Indiana, August 28, 1839.

5 ³Charles E. Hatcher born in Lynchburg, August 6, 1823, died in Lafayette, Indiana, September 7, 1839.

5 ⁴William Henry Hatcher born in Lynchburg, December 28, 1829, died in Lafayette, Indiana, February 25, 1869.

5 ⁵Richard Hatcher born in Lynchburg, died in Missouri.

5 ⁶Fanny Hatcher married Alphonse Laforgue, and was living at last accounts at New Madrid, Missouri.

5 ⁷Maria Hatcher married Edward Barroll, married a second time a Mr. Adams, and died in Missouri, 1869.

5 ⁸Elizabeth Hatcher married Morris Simons, and at last accounts they were living in Goliad, Texas.

5 ¹⁰William Henry Hatcher was married to Sarah Eliabeth Early, born at Terre Haute, Indiana, September 18, 1837, the marriage having taken place at St. Louis, Missouri, in St. Paul's church, by the Rt. Rev. Cicero Stevens Hawks, Bishop of Missouri, February 16, 1860. She died at Paris, France, February 3, 1883, leaving issue:

Robert Stockwell Hatcher is a son of William H. Hatcher, of Lafayette, Indiana, hence a grandson of Archibald and Elizabeth Dibrell Hatcher, and a nephew of Robt. A. Hatcher, above referred to. He was born February 15, 1865, at Lafayette, Tippecanoe county, Indiana; attended public school at LaFayette, Philadelphia and Boston; accompanied his family to Europe in 1877; remained five years and a half pursuing his studies in France, Italy and Germany, and acquiring the languages of those countries; student in 1878 at the Parisian Lycee de l'Ecluse; studied and traveled in Italy during 1879 and 1880; in later years lived in Munich, and was in 1881 pupil at private school for boys in Dresden, Germany. In 1882 received instruction from private tutors in Berlin; traveled in Germany, Austria and Switzerland, and returned to Paris, remaining there until February, 1883, when, owing to the sudden death of his mother in that city, he sailed for America. At Washington, District of Columbia, studied law in the office of Hon. Rudolph Claughten, and took a course in law at Columbian University. Admitted to the bar in Indiana in 1895. Married April 22, 1889, at LaFayette, Indiana, to Miss Georgia Hatcher Stockton, and in the same year revisited Paris, accompanied by his wife. After further travels in France, Belgium, Germany, Holland, England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, returned to the United States in September, 1890. In the following year was a member of the staff of the Chicago Tribune. In 1892, visited California. In 1893 was elected president of the Tippecanoe Republican Club, of LaFayette, Ind. Appointed in 1895 by the Secretary of State of Indiana as a member of the State Commission to confer with the naval authorities concerning the heraldic furnishing and decorating of the then newly commissioned United States battleship "Indiana." Elected in the same year reading clerk of the Indiana State senate, serving throughout the fifty-ninth General Assembly. By senate concurrent resolution number twenty, was appointed to investigate the origin and history of the seal of the State of Indiana, and directed to report to the Legislature as to the advisability of altering the same. (See Report of R. S. Hatcher, Com'r, spread of record in senate and ordered printed March 18, 1895). As special correspondent of the Indianapolis News in Central America, toured with his wife through British Honduras, Spanish Honduras and Guatemala. In December, 1895, was recommended by the entire Indiana Republican delegation of the United States House of Representatives, for reading clerk of the House; received the appointment, serving throughout the 54th Congress. (See Cong. Dict. 1897.) Upon the temporary organization of the Republican National Presidential Convention held in St. Louis in 1896, was recommended by the Republican National Committee for temporary reading clerk, and approved by the latter. Was unanimously elected permanent reading clerk of that body upon the permanent organization of the convention. (See official proceedings of the 11th Republican Convention, St. Louis, 1896.) Commissioned by Postmaster-General James A.

5 MARIA HATCHER BARROLL.

5 Maria Hatcher Barroll, daughter of Archibald and Elizabeth Dibrell Hatcher is thus sketched by United States Senator David Turpie, of Indiana, in a letter to Mr. Stockwell Hatcher, under date of September 29, 1902:

"Dear Sir: I enclose a slight sketch of recollection of your aunt, Mrs. Barroll. She was one of the finest characters I ever knew. Miss Maria Hatcher was a young lady of handsome appearance, of elegant manners, and of many graceful and useful accomplishments. She was a good musician, sang and played with much taste and feeling. Her voice was a contralto of singular sweetness and purity and of considerable strength and volume. In fair weather a great deal of her time was devoted to the garden and to the care and culture of plants and flowers. She was very fond of the rose—and, what was regarded as a little curious she gloried in having the largest sunflower and the most gaily tinted hollyhocks in the neighborhood. Her conversational powers were of the first order, very swift and brilliant in repartee, as a raconteur, quite remarkable. She was a constant reader, and that of books of the gravest characters—history, theology, mental and moral philosophy—though she also kept pace with the lighter literature of that time and was familiar with the contents of 'The Lady's Companion,' and what she called the 'cookery bookery.' Her gifts of wit, humor and fanciful invention were often used in the way of pastime and amusement. Walter Scott's novels were then in the full flush of fashion and favor. She used to playfully select from their pages sobriquets, which she applied to the young gentlemen of her acquaintance. One was Captain Waverly, another was Prince Charles, a third was Dominie Sampson, and yet another was County Guy.

"Once at an evening party she was requested to sing. She responded with the well known and then popular ballad in which the following words occur:

"The village maid steals through the shade
To greet her lover nigh,

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

The lark his lay, who trilled all day,
Sits hushed, his partner nigh
Bee, bird and bower confess the hour
But where is County Guy?"

"The young gentleman just named and known in her circle was present, and a listener. He was not an adept in literature, but was a man of easy fortune who lived in the county not far from town, much given to bee culture, and skilled in ornithology. When he heard, therefore, in thrilling musical tones, the mention of the bee and the bird, he somehow conceived the idea that Miss Hatcher had improvised these lines, by way of chafing him upon the subject of his favorite pursuits. He was somewhat offended until one of her friends led him up to the piano, and showed him in Scott's ballad the printed lines just as they were sung.

"Miss Hatcher was a general social favorite, frequently toasted as the belle of Lafayette. Yet with all her gaiety and cheerfulness she was a woman of deep religious feelings and convictions—a regular attendant upon the services of St. John's church, and a member of the Choir as punctual in the performance of her duties as the rector. We were glad to see her in her place knowing that the music under her charge could not be a failure. During the church festivals, Christmas and Easter, she was always very much in request, and she took also a large and generous part in work of private benevolence and charity. Often she left her father's house, and going to some neighbor's dwelling of her acquaintance, she watched for many hours over a sick child in the cradle while its weary mother rested and slept."

6 HARRY H. BARROLL.

Commander Barroll of the United States Navy, whose name heads this paragraph, is a son of Mrs. Maria Hatcher Barroll and, hence, grandson of Archibald and Elizabeth Dibrell Hatcher, great-grandson of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson, and great-great-grandson of Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee. He is a graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and has done regular service in the United States Navy having been promoted from time to time until he was retired as commander.

I regret that I have not been able to learn more of the life and services of Commander Barroll. As before stated I am informed that he had been retired for several years. I am not informed however, as to the grounds upon which his retirement was based. It is hardly possible that he was retired on account of age, as a comparison of dates would not bear out that conclusion, and, hence, the conclusion is almost inevitable that his retirement resulted from meritorious services.

5 ROBERT ANTHONY HATCHER.

Robert A. Hatcher was the oldest child of Archibald and Elizabeth Dibrell Hatcher, and should have been taken up in regular order in the list of their children. He was born in Lynchburg, Virginia, and early in life removed with his parents to Lafayette, Indiana, and subsequently, after his father's death, made his home in New Madrid, Missouri, at which place he practiced law successfully until the breaking out of the war in 1861.

Robert A. Hatcher was distinguished for his strict integrity, adherence to duty, and devotion to principle. He was emphatically a gentleman of the proverbial "Old Virginia" type. He never swerved from the traditions of his fathers. Of the scores of testimonials which have come from various sources we have only space for the following, written by General Alexander P. Stewart, on whose staff he served during the war between the States. We select this from among other testimonials because of the high character of its source, and the intimacy that existed between General Stewart and Major Hatcher. The testimonial is in the form of a letter written by General Stewart to Mr. Robert Stockwell Hatcher, a nephew of Maj. Robert A. Hatcher:

"Dear Sir: Yours of the second instant forwarded from Chattanooga, Tennessee, has been received, and it gives me pleasure to have an opportunity to bear testimony to the excellent qualities of your uncle Robert A. Hatcher of New Madrid, Missouri. He was a man of fine abilities and good common sense, faithful to every trust and duty, thoroughly reliable and of the highest order of honesty and integrity. He was an admirable soldier, brave as a lion, and apparently utterly devoid of fear both as a man and a soldier; and I may add, as a Christian he commanded the highest respect and the utmost confidence of all who knew him. In every way you could take him he was a man of unexceptional character."

The following is a notice of Major Robert A. Hatcher from the Congressional Directory, Forty-Third Congress, First Session, Washington, D. C., 1876:

"Robert A. Hatcher of New Madrid, Missouri, was born in Lynchburg, Virginia, February 24, 1819; was educated at private schools in Lynchburg; studied law and was licensed to practice in Kentucky; removed to New Madrid, Missouri, in 1847, and has there followed the practice of his profession ever since; was for six years circuit attorney of the Tenth judicial circuit of Missouri; was a member of the State Legislature in 1850-1851; member of the State Convention in 1862, and a member of the Confederate Congress in 1864-65; was elected to the Forty-Third Congress as a democrat receiving 13340 votes against 4,594 cast for his opponent. And was re-elected to the Forty-Fourth Congress as a Democrat, receiving 19,087 votes without opposition."

In the above notice from the Congressional Record Major Hatcher's Confederate service is not referred to except that he was elected to the Confederate Congress of 1864-65, when as a matter of fact, he left New Madrid in the service of the Confederate government in 1861, and remained in the field until he was elected to Congress in 1864. Indeed he was elected to Congress from the field and by the votes of the Missouri soldiers who were in the field.

It was in November 1864 that Major Hatcher stopped for a day's rest at my house in Virginia on his way from the army in Tennessee, to Richmond after he had been elected to Congress, only a few months previous to the collapse of the Confederacy, and this was the first respite that he had taken from field duty since hostilities commenced.

Extracts from columns of newspaper published in Charleston, Missouri, contributed by J. J. Russell, law partner of Mr. Hatcher:

"Robert A. Hatcher was born in Buckingham county, Virginia, February 24, 1819. He removed to Hickman, Kentucky, in 1841. He was married May 11, 1842, to Miss Mary E. Marr, the mother of his now bereaved children. His wife died on the second day of July, 1872, and on the 20th of January, 1875, he was married to Miss Eudora Forbes, who is now a grief-stricken widow. Major Hatcher died at Charleston, Missouri, December, 1886.

"Mr. Hatcher began the study of law under Judge E. I. Bullock in 1844, and soon afterwards entered into the active practice of his chosen profession. In 1848 he removed with his family to New Madrid, where he made his home until the year 1876, when he removed to Charleston, Missouri, where he resided until his death.

"During the late war Mr. Hatcher sympathized with the South and took up arms in the cause to which he believed duty called him. When once enlisted he showed the same qualities that have ever characterized him in private life, honesty of purpose, courage to do his duty, and fidelity to every trust. He was, during the greater part of the war, a major under General A. P. Stewart, and was with him in some bitter and hardfought battles. General Stewart, in his official report of the battle of Chickamauga, now published in book form, wrote in high praise of Major Hatcher as a good and valiant soldier, and for the valued assistance rendered him in that battle.

"Major Hatcher has also held many high offices of honor and trust in private life, and in no case has he ever violated any of them but has honestly, earnestly and faithfully done his whole duty.

"He was at one time a member of the State Legislature from New Madrid county. He was for several years circuit attorney of the Tenth judicial circuit, was a member of the Confederate Congress and for six years representative in the United States Congress from this district. He was for several years one of the curators of the State University.

"Major Hatcher may properly be counted among the pioneers at the bar in Southeast Missouri. He practiced in this circuit when it was more than 100 miles to travel to some of the courts, and on horseback the best means afforded for traveling. It was in the days of Judge Hough and when such men as General Watkins, General English and Greer Davis were his associates at the bar. He was then considered the peer of the best, and has ever since held a high place in his profession."

Major Robert A. Hatcher was twice married leaving issue only by his first wife. His first wife was a Missouri lady, and his second wife was of Glensfalls, New York. By the first marriage there were several children, among whom was Mr. James Hatcher, who followed his father during the stirring scenes of the Civil war, was with him in camp and on the march, and when Major Hatcher was elected to Congress his son James still followed the fortunes of the army, following Hood in his ill-fated attempt to cut off the supplies of the Federal army then enroute to Savannah, he was with Hood at Franklin, Tennessee, where the Confederate army was severely repulsed, and afterwards at Nashville, where the defeat was so decisive that General Hood was compelled to retrace his steps, as best he could into Dixie land.

A daughter, Miss "Florrie" Hatcher by the first marriage died in Washington, District of Columbia, a few years ago.

6 Mrs. Wilkie of Longwood, Florida, is a daughter of Mrs. Maria Hatcher Barroll, and hence a granddaughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Dibrell Hatcher. Major Hatcher died at Charleston, Missouri, and was buried at the home of his widow in Glensfalls, New York, in 1886.

4 JUDITH DIBRELL.

Judith Ann Dibrell, daughter of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson, born June 26, 1807, married also Archibald Hatcher, who was a nephew of the gentleman of the same name that married her sister Elizabeth. They had no children. After the death of Mr. Hatcher she married a second time—Judge Simons of Texas. There were no children by this marriage. Morris Simons, a son of Judge Simons by a former marriage, married Elizabeth Hatcher, who was a niece of his stepmother and daughter of Archibald and Elizabeth Dibrell Hatcher.

4 JAMES WATSON DIBRELL.

James W. Dibrell, son of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson, born September 19, 1794, married first Lettitia Perkins, second Sallie Brown. These ladies were respectively of Buckingham, and Amherst county, Virginia. There was no issue left by either marriage. Mr. Dibrell's first wife was a descendant of Leeanna Lee who married John Fearn, and as Mr. Dibrell was a descendant of her sister Elizabeth, he and his wife were consequently related.

The obituary of Mrs. Lettitia Dibrell, nee Perkins, was published in the Virginia Press, March 1, 1822, which stated that she departed this life on Monday night, February 25, in the twenty-third year of her age.

Mr. Dibrell married second Sallie Brown of Amherst county, Virginia; a lady of highest social standing and family connections. His second wife survived him several years, though the condition of her health was such that she had been an invalid for some time previous to his death.

4 MARTHA BROOKINGS DIBRELL.

Martha Brookings Dibrell, daughter of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson, born December, 1799, married Dr. Ezekiel

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Gilbert of Amherst county, Virginia, and with her husband settled near Peddlar Mills of that county where he practiced medicine successfully for about thirty years. They left two sons and three daughters, Dr. Charles Anthony Gilbert, Benjamin Rush Gilbert, Anna, Mattie and Kate.

Dr. Gilbert died comparatively young, and his son, Dr. Charles Anthony Gilbert succeeded him in the practice.

5 Dr. Charles Anthony Gilbert, born about 1825, married Miss Bettie Templin, who was a great-niece of Anthony Wayne, better known as "Mad Anthony of the Revolution." It was to this Anthony that General Washington gave the order to "storm Stony Point," and when asked if he could do it, replied that he would "storm hell" if General Washington gave the order.

Dr. Charles Anthony Gilbert removed to Missouri in 1870, where he again took up the practice of medicine with much success. His first wife died shortly after leaving Virginia, and he married the second time; the issue by the second marriage is unknown. By the first marriage of Dr. Gilbert with Miss Templin there were three sons and a daughter, Robert, Charles, William, and Fannie.

6 Robert and Charles Gilbert have married and raised families in Missouri. William is unmarried. He is quite a successful traveling salesman for a St. Louis drug house. He has visited Atlanta on business occasionally, and been a guest at my house. William Gilbert gives very positive evidence of being a successful business man, and withal a courteous, affable gentleman, who sustains well the character of the family from whom he is descended.

5 Benjamin Rush Gilbert, the younger son of Dr. Ezekiel Gilbert, born 1833, and educated at Emory and Henry College, Va., was a worthy scion of the lineage to which he belonged. It was not the fortune of Mr. Gilbert to be financially successful. He was too cautious and conscientious to engage in reckless speculation, too hospitable and generous to hoard his means, and dispensing as he did his charities with a liberal hand, there was not much left to make up a bank account; nevertheless, he provided comfortably for his family and raised his children in a way to command the respect of those around them. He was twice married, first to Miss Nannie Logwood of Bedford. There was no issue to this marriage; second, he married Virginia Rucker of Campbell county, Virginia. By this marriage there were three children, two sons and a daughter; Walter Bryan, Earnest, and Elizabeth Dibrell. Walter married and resides in Philadelphia; Earnest is also married and resides in Manchester, Virginia; "Lizzie Dibrell" married a druggist in Lynchburg, Virginia, and resides in that city. The gentleman she married was named Hale.

5 Anna Gilbert married Mr. George Phillips of Amherst county, Virginia. They had three daughters, one of whom died young, the other two at last accounts were not married. They were all very bright and highly educated. Kate Gilbert married a Mr. Bailey, and had one son, Mattie Gilbert, never married.

4 ANTHONY DIBRELL.

Anthony Dibrell, one of the younger sons of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson, was born August 19, 1805. He was married in 1832 to Miss Marietta Howlett of Chesterfield county, Virginia. They had nine children, six sons and three daughters: Edwin, born June 1833, and died 1834; Willie Anna, born June 1835, married to Thomas R. Moore of Petersburg, Virginia, in January, 1855, died February, 1872, leaving no children; Marietta, born June 1837, married E. S. McArthur November, 1856; Thomas Mieure, born June, 1839, died 1858; Anthony, born March, 1842, married to Miss Chambliss in 1870, and died April, 1893; Watson S., born June 1844, married twice, first, to Miss Hoages in 1870, then to Miss Saunders both of Norfolk; Edward, born 1847, married Miss Steinbach of Petersburg, and died March, 1877, leaving no children; Julia, born July, 1850, died October, 1874; James Anderson, born February, 1853, died August, 1864.

Marietta Howlett, resides in Leesburg, Loudon county, Virginia. She has five children; Estelle, born 1857, died 1861; Edwin D., born 1860, never married; Mary E., born 1862, married Dr. A. Penuelin in 1887, one child, a daughter born 1890; Minnie B., born 1865, died in 1899; Marietta, born in 1871, died in 1875.

4 Anthony Dibrell was graduated from the University of North Carolina, studied law and was admitted to the bar in Lynchburg, Virginia, but having embraced religion in 1828, the entire trend of his life was changed. He then studied for the ministry, and was received on trial in the Virginia conference in 1830. For a quarter of a century he was one of the brightest stars in that constellation of brilliant intellects where such men as Bascomb, Rosser, David S. Dogget and William A. Smith held spellbound admiring thousands by their inapproachable reasoning and eloquence. They were indeed the bright particular stars of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Mr. Dibrell had the reputation of making a specialty of the "Thunders of Sinai," the awful consequences of a broken law and an offended God; but this did not result from his lack of appreciation of a God of love and mercy. His line of thought and teaching was that God's love and mercy were shared by the obedient children, while the disobedient were banished from his presence by their disobedience, and choosing to wander into a far country away from God, they were permitted to feed the flocks of strangers and to live on the husks that the swine would not eat, but when they came to themselves and made the resolution "I will arise and go to my father," the Father was always ready to receive them with open arms.

The Rev. Anthony Dibrell was one of the delegates from the Virginia conference to the Convention of 1844 which met in Louisville, Kentucky. It was at this convention, which embraced all of the annual conferences in the Southern States, that the division of the church was effected, and all of the Southern conferences withdrew from the Methodist Episcopal Church and formed themselves into a separate organization, which has been ever since known as the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Mr.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Dibrell was a member of every succeeding general conference from that time until his death. At the general conference at Columbus, Georgia, 1854, he declined the nomination for bishop, and but for his untimely taking off, he would have doubtless been compelled to yield his objections and to have accepted the office.

4 Leeanna Dibrell, born October 2, 1801, married a gentleman by the name of Staples, in Amherst county, Virginia. They had sons and daughters, but little is known, however, of their descendants. One of their sons, George Staples, removed to Texas.

4 Frances Watson Dibrell, born June 18, 1803, married a gentleman by the name of Hendrix, and removed to Alabama. They left a number of sons and daughters, who still reside in that State and have descendants.

4 Catherine Dibrell, born July 8, 1809, married Thomas Mieure, of Richmond, Virginia, but left no children.

4 Wilmuth Watson Dibrell, born May 20, 1811, married a gentleman by the name of Gary. They removed to Alabama, and subsequently to Texas. They left a number of sons and daughters. Their oldest son, Thomas Anthony Gary, and one of his brothers, were successful merchants at different places in Texas. He was afterwards prominent in politics as a Democrat, and was appointed by Mr. Cleveland during his first administration postmaster of Galveston. He was succeeded by a Republican during Mr. Harrison's administration, and removed to Washington, District of Columbia, where he has remained ever since.

Mr. Gary, with his family, resided in Galveston for a number of years, and when I visited that place in 1885, I had the pleasure of spending a day at his house. He has an interesting family, which then consisted of his wife and one daughter. A son, who was at the military academy at West Point, was necessarily absent. A very singular incident in connection with the appointment of Mr. Gary's son to the military academy is that it was procured through the then representative in Congress of the Galveston district, Tom Ochiltree, a Republican of reconstruction proclivities, with whom Mr. Gary had been for years politically antagonistic; but while the political antagonism between the two was strong, their personal feelings were very kindly. I do not know whether young Gary graduated or not. I have had no information from him since that time. The daughter referred to, a bright and beautiful young woman, and very proficient in music, has since made her mark in Washington society. In correspondence with the family it has been learned that Mr. Gary is permanently, and believed to be prominently, located in Washington, in some government connection. Through Mr. Robert Stockwell Hatcher it is learned that he is yet in Washington and permanently located.

THE FEARN FAMILY.

This is among the older Virginia families, and also has an English history extending very far back.

Walker Fearn, who was minister to Greece during Mr. Cleveland's first administration, writes me that he found at Athens a marble slab with the name "William Fearn, Captain H. M. S. Unity, native of London, who died at Porto Leone 1687." Mr. Fearn adds that before leaving Athens, in 1889, he had the marble carefully fixed in the English church at that place.

From the church registry of Gloucester we learn that John Fearn was married to Mary Lee in that county, December 31, 1687, and that Thomas Fearn, son of John Fearn and Mary Lee, was baptized November, 1688.

In 1644, John Fearn was married to Leeanna Lee in Middlesex county, Virginia, December 31; and with the death of William Fearn in Athens in 1687, the marriage of John Fearn to Mary Lee in Gloucester county, Virginia, the same year the baptism of their son Thomas Fearn in 1688 and the marriage of John Fearn to Leeanna Lee, in Middlesex county, Virginia, December 31, 1744, we have three generations of the Fearn family, covering about one hundred years. While we have not the record proof of the direct line of descent from the first William Fearn, the facts go to show not only the existence, but the standing and importance of the Fearn name from a very early period of English history, and prove the descent from John Fearn and Mary Lee through their son Thomas.

It will be seen that John Fearn married Mary Lee, November, 1687; that his son, Thomas Fearn, was baptized in 1688, and that John Fearn married Leeanna Lee in 1744, which show them conclusively to be in direct succession. So we take John Fearn and Mary Lee, married 1687, as the progenitors of the Fearn family in Virginia.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Much has been said in regard to the descent of Leeanna Lee, and no little controversy has grown out of it. Dr. Edmund J. Lee, author of "Lee of Virginia," could not be induced to locate her or give to her a well-defined descent, but contents himself with saying that "there is a tradition in the families of Dibrell and Fearn that Leeanna was a daughter of Thomas and granddaughter of Charles, the youngest son of Colonel Richard Lee, the emigrant, but unfortunately, no authentic proof of this tradition has been discovered." He does not even recognize her as a member of the Lee family, but speaks of her as "an unconfirmed traditional sister of Elizabeth Dibrell," who is proven by the records to have been the daughter of Thomas Lee. He even refuses to admit her marriage to John Fearn, and indeed leaves her very existence in doubt, when as a matter of fact the records of Middlesex county, Virginia, prove most positively that she was married to John Fearn, December 31, 1744. The manuscript of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell shows beyond a doubt that she was a sister of Elizabeth Dibrell, and unbroken tradition through four successive generations confirms the same. Dr. Lee is undoubted authority when he makes an assertion, but he has the faculty of leaving the reader in doubt by declining to make an assertion, in which he certainly is overcautious, when the proofs are so well founded.

There is the most undoubted proof, as has been seen, that Leeanna Lee was a descendant of Colonel Richard Lee, the emigrant, through his youngest son, Charles; that she was the sister of Elizabeth Lee Dibrell; that she married John Fearn, of Middlesex county, Virginia, and was the ancestor of the Fearn family of America. As is shown under the head of the Dibrell family, and also that of Lee, by the most conclusive record evidence, Elizabeth Lee, who married Anthony Dibrell, was the daughter of Thomas Lee, and we now turn to the train of circumstances which inseparably connect Leeanna with her and prove them to have been sisters.

Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell, who was a grandson of Elizabeth Lee, in his manuscript, says that they came to Buckingham county together; that his grandparents were married at the house of Leeanna Fearn, and that they were sisters; that this was not a mere tradition but a recognized fact. Mr. George R. Fearn, of Dallas, Texas, who is a lineal descendant of John Fearn, in a letter to me confirms Mr. Dibrell's statement, and Mrs. Cole, of Alabama, in a letter to me in 1892, states that she recollects distinctly that her mother always spoke of Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth, his wife, as uncle and aunt. Mrs. Cole was born in 1810, while her mother's birth was as early as 1775, and was hence nearly thirty years old before either Anthony Dibrell or Leeanna Fearn died.

The exact date of the removal of John Fearn from Middlesex to Buckingham county is not known, but it was between 1744 and 1756, as on the first named date he was married in Middlesex, and on the latter date Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee were married at his house in Buckingham.

4 Thomas Fearn, oldest child of John Fearn and Leeanna Lee, was born October 24, 1745, and died October 4, 1805. According to two of his grandchildren, Mrs. Eliza Cole, of Gunter's Landing, Alabama, and Mr. George Fearn, of Dallas, Texas, he married three times, first a daughter of Chancellor Creed Taylor of Virginia; second, a widow Allen, nee Miss Coleman; and third, Mary Burton, daughter of Dr. Robert Burton, May 5, 1785. She was born in 1751 and died in 1845, aged 94 years. By the first marriage he had one daughter, who died unmarried. By the second marriage he had two daughters, both of whom married and left issue. Thomas Fearn by his third marriage had seven children, five sons and two daughters, as follows: John, Thomas, Robert, George, Richard, Leeanna Lee, and Mary. Of Richard, George and Mary we have partial data, which we trust will serve to give clews to many other members of the family, by means of which they will be enabled to complete their family history.

From all the data that I have been able to obtain, Thomas Fearn was the only son of John Fearn and Leeanna Lee, whose descendants are known. There were four daughters, however, concerning whom there is very little data. From an entry among the papers of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell, it appeared that John Fearn was married a second time to Eliza Winfree. From the parish register kept by William Douglas, rector of the parish from 1750 to 1797, this entry is found, but there is no further data in regard to the marriage.

5 Richard Lee Fearn was the youngest son of Thomas Fearn and Mary Burton. From his son, Mr. Walker Fearn of New Orleans, we obtained much valuable information. He says: "My father, Dr. Richard Fearn of Alabama, was the youngest of four brothers, Thomas, Robert, George and Richard, and was born near Danville, Spotsylvania county, Virginia, in 1804. He was a graduate of Chapel Hill University (the University of North Carolina), and afterwards in medicine at Philadelphia, with the highest honors of his class. He removed to Huntsville, Alabama, about 1830, and there married Mary Jane Walker, daughter of Hon. John William Walker, formerly of Virginia, who presided over the constitutional convention for the admission of Alabama into the Union, and was afterwards United States senator from that State. His sons, Pope, Richard and Percy, were respectively Confederate States secretary of war, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama, and members of Congress.

"Shortly after my birth, 1832, my father, Dr. Richard Lee Fearn, settled in Mobile, where he died in 1868. His oldest brother, Thomas Fearn, of Huntsville, Alabama, was also a distinguished physician. He died about 1864 at home. His wife was a Shelby of Tennessee. Dr. Thomas Fearn left a large family of daughters, two of whom, Mrs. Steele and Mrs. Garth, still live in Huntsville, as also Berenice, who never married. Another daughter, Mrs. Sarah Barrett, widow of Hon. W. S. Barrett, lives on her plantation at Shellmound, Sunflower county, Mississippi. My father's older brothers, George and Robert, are also dead."

6 Hon. Walker Fearn, from whom the foregoing quotation is taken, was born in Huntsville, Alabama, 1832. He married Miss Fannie Hewett, of Louisville, Kentucky, and wrote me in 1892 that he had three living children, the oldest, a daughter,

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Mary, was then with him in Chicago, where he was stationed as director of the foreign department of the Columbian Exposition. His two sons, Parey and Hewett, were civil and mining engineers, and were holding good positions in Costa Rico. It is a singular fact that among all the criticisms in regard to Mr. Fearn, the most formidable that has ever been brought to bear was that his scholarship was too extensive. There can be no doubt that he was one of the ripest scholars and most profound lawyers of his age and generation, and has held many positions of honor and trust. During Mr. Cleveland's first administration he was Minister to Greece, from 1885 to 1889. It was while in Athens that Mr. Fearn very strangely came across the tombstone of a hitherto unknown ancestor in the person of William Fearn, who had been in command of H. M. S. Unity, and having died, was interred in Athens.

6 Eliza Frances Coles of Alabama, under date of July 28, 1892, writes: "John Fearn and Leeanne Lee were my great-grandparents. Their oldest son, Thomas Fearn, was my grandfather. He married three times, first a daughter of Chancellor Creed Taylor, of Virginia; second a widow Allen, nee Miss Coleman, and third, Mary Burton, daughter of Dr. Robert Burton, May 5, 1785. My mother, Mary Fearn, daughter of Thomas Fearn and Mary Burton, married Dr. James Patton, of Danville, Virginia." Mr. Thomas Fearn Patton, of New Orleans, is a son of Dr. James Patton, of Danville, Virginia, and a brother of Mrs. Coles. A postscript to Mrs. Cole's letter, signed Paulina Fearn, speaks of Mrs. Coles as "our grandmother." The writer is evidently a young lady, but she does not say whose daughter she is, nor how she got to be Mrs. Cole's granddaughter. Evidently, some Fearn, "in search of a wife," married his cousin Coles.

5 Mr. George R. Fearn, a lawyer of Dallas, Texas, has given me much general information. He was a son of Thomas Fearn and Mary Burton. Mr. Walker Fearn speaks of him as his cousin, and he is most probably the son of George Fearn, who died in Jackson, Mississippi.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

6 Mary Lee Patton, daughter of Dr. James Patton and Mary Burton Fearn, granddaughter of Thomas Fearn and Mary Burton, and great-granddaughter of John Fearn and Leeanna Lee, married George Taylor Swann, and her daughter, Mary Lee Swann, married William Jasper Brown at Jackson, Mississippi.

Berenice Fearn forwarded me several years ago from her father's records the following list of the children of John Fearn and Leeanna Lee: Thomas, born October 24, 1745; Elizabeth, who married William Perkins; Sallie, who married a Bates, by whom he had two sons and four daughters; Jane, who married Hansford Young; and a daughter, who married Samuel Putney.

8 From Mr. John B. Cannon, of Franklin, Tennessee, I have the following: "I am the great-grandson of the late Governor Newton Cannon, of this State. My paternal grandmother was Miss Perkins, a daughter of Samuel Perkins, of this county, and a granddaughter of Elizabeth Lee Fearn and Col. Samuel Harding Perkins, and a great-granddaughter of Leeanna Lee, who married John Fearn." Brought down, we have Elizabeth Lee Fearn, daughter of John Fearn and Leeanna Lee, married Col. Samuel Harding Perkins. Samuel Perkins, son of Col. Samuel Harding Perkins and Elizabeth Lee Fearn, removed to Williamson county, Tennessee, married and had issue, and a daughter of Samuel Perkins, of Williamson county, Tennessee, married a son of Governor Cannon of that State, and Mr. John B. Cannon, from whom this data is obtained, is a grandson of this couple. From this and like data furnished in these pages, hundreds will be enabled to complete their genealogical line, if they will only avail themselves of the opportunity.

From Mr. Wm. J. Brown, of Jackson, Mississippi, the following is obtained: "Mary Lee Brown, daughter of William Jasper Brown, Jr., and Jane Lile (Swann) Brown, granddaughter of George Taylor Swann and Mary Lee (Patton) Swann, great-granddaughter of Dr. James D. Patton and Mary Burton Fearn, great-great-granddaughter of Thomas Fearn and Mary Burton, his third wife, and great-great-great-granddaughter of John Fearn of Buckingham county, Virginia, and Leeanna Lee."

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Brought down, we have Thomas Fearn, son of John Fearn and Leeanna Lee, born October 24, 1745, married (third wife) Mary Burton, May 15, 1785; Mary Burton Fearn, daughter of Thomas Fearn and Mary Burton, married Dr. James D. Patton, of Danville, Virginia; Mary Lee Patton, daughter of Dr. James D. Patton and Mary Burton Fearn, married George Taylor Swann; Jane Lile Swann, daughter of George Taylor Swann, and Mary Lee Patton, married William Jasper Brown, Jr., of Mississippi; Mary Lee Brown, daughter of the last named couple.

From the foregoing the Fearn family, so far as can be ascertained, may be summed up as follows: William Fearn, who died in Athens, Greece, 1685, probably born about 1635; John Fearn, who married Mary Lee in Gloucester county, Virginia, in 1687, born about 1665; Thomas Fearn, son of John Fearn and Mary Lee, born in Gloucester county and baptized 1688, and John Fearn, son of Thomas Fearn and Mary Lee, who married Leeanna Lee in Middlesex county, Virginia, December 31, 1744. These four names show the successive generations of the Fearn family, from about 1650 until the close of the eighteenth century.

Newton Cannon Perkins is in the regular line of succession from John Fearn and Leeanna Lee, through their daughter, Elizabeth Lee Fearn, who married Col. Harding Perkins. He is a cotton factor in Memphis, Tennessee. He was born January 31, 1865, and is much interested in the Fearn family. From him much valuable information may be obtained in regard to the history of the Fearns.

7 Helen Fearn Grace, of Yazoo City, Mississippi, is also a descendant of this line. She married Thomas Grace, Jr., of that place, and had issue as follows: Walter Anderson, born June 1, 1882; Thomas, born August 30, 1884; Mary Fearn, born July 14, 1886; Helen Grace, born September 11, 1888; Edward Lee, born February 16, 1890; Bessie Fearn, born August 2, 1892. All of these children were living August 29, 1902.

It will be seen, from the numbering of the generations, as stated above, that I have taken John Fearn and Mary Lee, of Gloucester county, Virginia, married December 31, 1687, as the progenitors of the Fearn family of Virginia, hence John Fearn, who married Leeanna Lee, would be third in line of descent.

THE COBBS FAMILY.

This is one of the oldest names known to English history, and while they were among the earliest emigrants to America, until the last few years their early history was wholly unknown. Burke's Heraldry gives the name of Cobbs from Devonshire, Lancaster, London, and northern England.

As early as 1613, only six years after the settlement of Jamestown, Joseph Cobbs is registered as landing at Yorktown on the "Treasurer." His wife with her two children, Benjamin and Joseph Jr., came over in the "Bonnie Bess" in 1624. The arrival of Ambrose Cobbs in Virginia is not definitely known, but he appears on the land books in 1635. Ambrose and Joseph Cobbs were no doubt brothers. Joseph came over 1613, and received land grants in 1635 and 1637. The time when Ambrose arrived is also doubtful, but he received land grants in 1635, or about the same time that Joseph did.

Robert Cobbs appeared in 1651, as church warden, and his name also appears on the records of York county in the same year. In 1667 Robert Cobbs appears as justice of the peace for York county, and in 1681 he appears as one of the county commissioners. In 1682 he is high sheriff of the county. He died intestate in the same year, and his son Edmund administered on his estate.

This Edmund Cobbs, who administered on his father's estate in 1682, died 1692 or 1693. He left a will, but no sons, and it would seem no living children. He mentions his son-in-law, Matthew Pierce, and makes bequests to him, but provides that his entire estate shall be divided among his three brothers, Ambrose, Robert and Otho.

It is not positively known whether Robert Cobbs, the father of Edmund and his three brothers, who died in 1682, was the son of Joseph or Ambrose, but as the name Ambrose is perpetuated in the line, and Joseph is not, we are led to conclude, almost necessarily, that he was the son of Ambrose, and must so take him up.

Ambrose, Robert and Otho Cobbs were sons of the first Robert Cobbs, as described in the will of their brother, Edmund, and we are again brought face to face with the three-brother theory, and left to select from these three, upon the best testimony, the head of the Cobbs families.

From the foregoing we reach the following conclusions as inevitable results: Ambrose Cobbs, emigrant, born about 1590, came to Virginia about 1613. Robert Cobbs, son of Ambrose Cobbs, born about 1620. Robert Cobbs, son of the above Robert and brother of Edmund, born about 1660.

Thomas Cobbs, John Cobbs and Robert Cobbs, who appear upon the records of Henrico and Goochland from 1736 to 1750, son of the second Robert Cobbs, were born about 1706, 1708 and 1710, respectively, and are heads of three lines of that name throughout the United States.

Goochland county was taken off from Henrico, which accounts for the three brothers appearing at different times on the records of the two counties.

4 JOHN COBBS, OF GOOCHLAND.

As this ancestor is the head of the most numerous branch of the name, his line will be first taken up. He appears upon the records of Goochland with his wife, Susanah, as early as 1736, and at different times thereafter until 1750, after which he appears on the books of Goochland as John Cobbs of Albemarle.

In 1750, John Cobbs of Goochland purchased five hundred acres of land of James Neville, said land being located in Albemarle county on the south side of Fluvanna, or James river.

The name of John Cobbs appears upon the records of Albemarle county at different times, until 1760, after which all trace of him is lost. In 1761, that portion of Albemarle lying on the south side of James river was cut off and the county of Buckingham formed out of it. The records of Buckingham were destroyed by fire in 1867, and, hence, all trace of John Cobbs of Goochland was lost. There is no doubt that his will was recorded in Buckingham, but was destroyed with the other records. It has been by the most patient and persistent labor running through a number of years that these record proofs have been brought out and this long-neglected name unearthed, as it were, and rescued from oblivion. John Cobbs had three sons, Samuel, Edmund and John.

The fact that Robert Cobbs, the second of the name in America, born 1620, was justice of the peace and high sheriff is proof that he was more than peer of his surroundings, as these positions could be held at that time by none but the best class of citizens. Justice of the peace in 1650 was a position equally as honorable and important as judge of the Supreme Court at the present day.

As persistent as the authors of these sketches have been in their search for information, it was not until within the last few years that they knew of the existence of any of the Cobbs name mentioned in the preceding line, and in reporting the lineage of the name to the American ancestry, he stated that Samuel Cobbs, his great-grandfather, was from Wales; while as a matter of fact, the great-grandfather of Samuel Cobbs was born in Virginia; but in this he was in advance of the majority of Americans, who at that time did not know who their great-grandfathers were. As much as has been ascertained in regard to the Cobbs name in the last few years, a volume of unwritten history doubtless lies yet undeveloped, hidden away, so to speak, in the archives of the country, or lost in extinct church registries and neglected graveyards.

Two of the oldest and most distinguished families in Virginia, Lee and Randolph, had each a branch that was known by the name of Cobbs. The estates which they owned had either been inherited from some one of the name or the manors named in honor of some intermarriage, the record of which has long since been lost and all of the events passed out of the memory of all the families.

Richard Lee came to Virginia in 1641, and Henry Randolph the head of that family in America, came to Virginia in 1643, so that it is clear that the Cobbs family had become settled in the colony before the Lee or the Randolph family came over. The Cobbs Hall Lees and the Randolphs of Cobb were as distinctive designations as Smith of Purton or Lewis of Warner Hall.

5 SAMUEL COBBS.

Samuel Cobbs and his two brothers, Edmund and John, are known from the best record evidence to have been residents of Louisa county, Virginia. Samuel was doubtless the eldest of the three brothers, and as he was the immediate ancestor of one of the authors of these sketches, his line will be first treated of.

Samuel Cobbs' will, written September, 1758, and probated November 20 of the same year, is recorded in the clerk's office of Louisa county, Virginia. From this will we learn the following facts: First, his wife, Mary Cobbs, survived him; second, he left three children, Robert, Jane and Judith; third, that he had two brothers, Edmund and John; fourth, that after providing for his wife and children, he bequeathed to his brothers jointly one thousand acres of land in Bedford county, Virginia; fifth, that from a special provision of the will disposing of such property as came to him from his wife, in the event of the death of his children without issue, the fact is established that his wife was Mary Lewis, daughter of Robert Lewis, for a long time a citizen of Louisa county, but more recently of Belvoir, Albemarle county. Samuel Cobbs was married about 1750, and left when he died as before stated, three children. His daughter Jane married a gentleman named Waddy. They had one child, who survived them both. This child has a son named Samuel, and was raised by his grandmother Cobbs; but there is no trace to be had of him after his maturity. Judith, the younger daughter, never married. She died in early life.

6 ROBERT COBBS.

Robert, so far as record evidence goes, was the only son of Samuel Cobbs and Mary Lewis. He was positively a unique character, in his day and generation. Descended from a distinguished line of ancestry, whose lives for centuries had been inseparably connected with that of their country's history, both in England and America, he was at the same time plain in his manners and unassuming in his bearing. The inheritor of large estates, and raised in wealth and luxury, he was among the first to take the field, though quite young, in defense of his country, and braving the hardships of war, he remained at his post until the close of the struggle. Calm and dignified at all times, yet positive in his convictions, and fearless in maintaining them, he steered clear of politics and never allowed himself to be drawn into its arena. Nevertheless, he was a positive Jeffersonian in political opinions. He belonged to the Church of England, as that expression is understood, but was emphatically a non-conformist. Scrupulously conscientious and always ready for every good word and work, he submitted to no earthly dictation and in the language of the immortal Crittenden, "bowed to none but God." As illustrative of his character, as well as what was supposed to be his eccentricities, an incident in his life, which was to become part of his history, may be mentioned. One of his most reliable managers, who had been in charge of his home plantation for a number of years, was taken sick with fever. Mr. Cobbs had been called away from home on business, and when he returned he ascertained that the doctor had given the patient up to die. He declared, however, that he could not give up Bosher—for that was his name—and hastening to the house of his faithful manager, he called them all to prayer. This was a new departure, for with all of his sterling virtues, he was not in the habit of praying publicly, and every one was struck with astonishment. He prayed most fervently, assuring the divine Master that Bosher was an indispensable factor in the general make-up of human society; as husband, parent and citizen, true to every trust and faithful to every pledge. His death would deprive the community of one whose place could not be filled; and he enumerated a long list, calling them by name, all of whom could be spared, and none of them missed, and presented them in a lump, as it were, as an offering, or sacrifice, in place of Bosher.

We have always regretted that a stenographic report could not have been taken of that prayer. It afforded much amusement to his best friends and most ardent admirers, and even to his children and grandchildren, who never had the slightest conception of its import. Nor will we say that he himself fully understood it; but whatever opinion may be entertained in regard to it, two things are certain: the author of the prayer was in earnest, and Bosher got well; and even now, after the lapse of more than a century, the story of the prayer of "Robin Cobbs" for the recovery of Bosher is told in many Virginia homes; and truly may it be said that the author of that prayer, without pretension or ostentation, put his trust in God.

This volume might be filled with anecdotes of this Revolutionary patriot, but the scope of the work is such as to render all historical or biographical references very brief.

Robert Cobbs was born in 1754, in Louisa county, Virginia. He entered the Revolutionary army from Louisa county, enlisting in the regiment of his uncle, Charles Lewis. The records show that he married in Louisa after the return of peace, and was a citizen of that county until 1788, when he removed to Bedford county, Virginia, where he inherited large landed property from his father's estate. His Revolutionary services have always been treasured as a sacred legacy by his children and grandchildren, and his widow was awarded a pension within the memory of the author, but, being a very young man, and his rank being only that of captain, no account is to be found of him in the condensed historical events of the war. The records, however, furnish ample testimony of his rank and services, and Brock's Historical Collections make frequent mention of him, and others, that together with Charles and Nicholas Lewis, he took the oath of allegiance to Virginia under the colonial government in 1776. His services were principally with Gates and Green in the Carolinas, and more conspicuously at the siege of 1781 and the battle of Guilford courthouse, at which place family tradition informs us, as senior captain he commanded his regiment.

About 1795, Robert Cobbs removed to Campbell county, Virginia, where he also owned valuable estates. He did not, however, part with his Bedford property, but owned it at the time of his death, after which, upon the division and settlement of his estate, it became the property of his son, Charles Lewis Cobbs. He gave to his Campbell county home the name of "Plain Dealing," indicative of his methods of doing business, and at this place, about twenty-five miles nearly due south of Lynchburg, about two miles from the Durham railroad, six miles from Brook Neal, and a few miles from "Red Hill," the home of Patrick Henry, on the Staunton, or upper waters of the Roanoke, Robert Cobbs spent the remainder of his days.

Robert Cobbs died 1829, and the records of Campbell county show the settlement and disposition of his estate. His widow survived him about twelve years, spending her entire widowhood with her daughter, Sarah White, who married Captain William C. McAllister, where she died in 1842, and was buried by the side of her husband at the old homestead. This old burying ground has proved an exception to most of the private cemeteries, which fall into disuse and neglect, and are lost sight of. Although it has passed into the hands of strangers, it has been kept enclosed, and while the graves of these old people are not marked, they are not forgotten, their grandchildren having arranged to reclaim them.

Robert Cobbs, married Anne G. Poindexter, daughter of John Poindexter, of Louisa county, Virginia, and to this couple were born nine children:

7¹John Poindexter Cobbs married Jane Garland, daughter of David S. Garland, of Amherst county, Virginia, who was for many years a member of Congress from his district.

Dr. John Poindexter Cobbs, oldest son of Robert Cobbs and Anne Poindexter, was born May 27, 1785. He graduated from Hampden-Sidney college in 1808, and from the medical college at Philadelphia in 1810. Commenced the practice of medicine at New Glasgow, Amherst county, Virginia, immediately after his graduation. This was a small town about twenty miles northeast of Lynchburg, which at the time was the center of wealth and learning, the home of the Garlands, the Crawfords and the Pendletons; and it was here that he married Miss Jane Garland, the daughter of David S. Garland, who then represented the district in Congress. She belonged to one of the most distinguished families in Virginia, at a time when that State embodied the great bulk of the distinguished names of the country. The Garlands had been more than a century distinguished in the leading professions, and had held positions in colonial history and subsequent to the Revolution. Her mother, a Miss Meredith, a name no less distinguished, was the niece of Patrick Henry.

Dr. Cobbs subsequently removed to Nelson county, Virginia, which county he represented in the Legislature for a number of years. He also continued the practice of his profession while he remained in this county, but in 1836, foreseeing the great wealth to be developed in the Northwest, he made investments in the northern part of Indiana, Milwaukee, and other places, preparatory to removing from Virginia.

Dr. John Cobbs had five children, three sons and two daughters: Jane, married a gentleman by the name of Thwing; Robert, never married, was born in Nelson county, Virginia, about 1818, and died in Atlanta, Georgia, about 1895; John, married, but whom is not known, and died in Colorado; Garland, never married, born about 1830; Mary, married (1) Thomas Stewart, one of the proprietors of the Chicago Times-Herald, and (2) Dr. Fravel.

8 Jane, oldest child of John Cobbs and Jane Garland, was born 1813, and about 1830 was married to a gentleman named Thwing, as above mentioned. She lived to a very old age, having died about 1895, at the home of her son, Franklin Thwing, in Chicago. She had four children: Franklin, Jane Henry, Virginia Garland and Sarah Florence.

9 Franklin Thwing, son of Jane Cobbs Thwing and grandson of Dr. John P. Cobbs, married Miss Elizabeth Ogden Smith, and resides in Chicago. They have three children: Franklin Thwing, Jr., Harriet Ogden and Ellen.

9 Jane Henry Thwing, oldest daughter of Mrs Jane Cobbs Thwing married Horace G. Smith and resides in Denver, Colorado.

9 Virginia Garland married S. J. Peterson Halstron of Sweden. They do not retain the latter part of the name in ordinary use, as it is so strongly foreign, but in legal transactions, and in all matters of record they perpetuate the full name. They are known socially as Peterson, legally they are known as Peterson Halstrom. They have five children: Jane Garland, Virginia Garland, Charles Henry, Mary Lewis Loring.

10 Virginia Garland Peterson great-granddaughter of Dr. John P. Cobbs, born 1863, married Arthur St. M. Clafin, formerly of Boston, but now of Chicago. They have two children, both boys: Henry and Aubrey. Mr. Clafin is a great-nephew of President Pierce.

7 Mary Lewis Cobbs, born June 11, 1787, and married

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

William Armistead, 1806. She married second, John McClean, M. D., D. D., about 1820. By her first marriage she had three sons, and by the second marriage she had two, but no daughters.

8 Dr. John O. Armistead, born 1807, died 1873. He married Miss Elizabeth Jennings of Charlotte county, Virginia, about 1830. They had five daughters, no sons: Mary Susan, Sarah Ann, Emma, "Bettie" and Henrietta.

9 Mary Susan Armistead married Frances Thornton of Buckingham county, Virginia. They had several children.

9 Sarah Ann Armistead married a relative, James Armistead, of Charlotte county, Virginia. They removed to Bedford county. Mr. Armistead left her a widow, and her oldest son having died, she removed to San Francisco, where an uncle, Samuel McLean, resided.

9 Emma Armistead, born 1837, married a gentleman named Scott. They had several children. They removed to Palestine, Texas.

9 "Bettie" and Henrietta never married. "Hettie" died young.

8 William B. Armistead, after varied business ventures settled in Nashville, Tennessee. He married Miss Woods of that city and merchandised there successfully for a number of years. They had three sons and several daughters: Robert married Miss Hunphous of Clarksville, Tennessee; William, who is engaged in the insurance business in Nashville, and James who married Miss Washington of that city. One of Wm. B. Armistead's daughters married Dr. Hughes of Birmingham, Alabama, who was postmaster of that city for eight years. Another married a man named Johnson who is a large business operator of that city.

8 Robert Armistead never married, he died young.

Robert Lewis Cobbs was born December 25, 1789. He graduated with distinction from Hampden-Sidney in the class of 1809, and from the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia in 1811. He practiced medicine with his brother, Dr. John P. Cobbs, in New Glasgow, Amherst county, Virginia, and in January, 1813, he traveled on horseback across the mountains to join Jackson at Nashville, Tennessee, who was then preparing for his campaign against the Indians and British. He was United States surgeon in all of the campaigns, up to the close of the war at New Orleans, after which he returned to Nashville, studied law with his relative, General Wm. White, which profession he followed for 25 years. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of Tennessee of 1834, and was at one time attorney-general of the State. In 1827-8 he revised the laws of the State. He never married. He retired from practice in 1843, and spent the remainder of his days in quiet, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Sarah White McAllister in Virginia. He died 1856 on presidential election day, Tuesday after the first Monday in November. His last words were: "I must get up and vote for Filmore."

7 Samuel Cobbs was born in Campbell county, Virginia, July 14, 1796. When the war of 1812 broke out he was 16 years old. He obtained the appointment of first lieutenant and was ordered to the northern frontier. He was in all of the principal engagements along the lakes, and was severely wounded at the battle of Lundy's Lane and reported among the dead. He was mourned as such at home, and preparations for his funeral were being made when he appeared in person and stopped the proceedings. He afterward joined an expedition against the Indians in Florida, fell a victim to fever, and died in South Georgia 1817, aged 21 years.

7 William Cobbs was born in Campbell county, Virginia, March 2, 1792, and died about 1852, aged about 60 years. He married Miss Marianne Scott and only one child, a girl, blessed their union. Wm. Cobbs fell into bad health early in life and, hence, was very little known to the public. He purchased the home of Thomas Jefferson in Bedford county, "Poplar Forest," where he spent his entire life.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

RICHARD LEE.

The first Richard Lee of American history was born in Shropshire, England, towards the end of the sixteenth century. He was member of the privy council of Charles I, and during the reign of that monarch, 1641, he emigrated to Virginia. He was first attorney general of Virginia, he was secretary of the colony with Sir William Berkley, and was conspicuous in all colonial affairs.

After the death of Charles I, and during the Protectorate of Cromwell, Lee was conspicuous in his adherence to Charles, though sufficiently cautious to avoid a conflict. Berkley and Lee declared allegiance to Charles II, and invited the fugitive royalist to come to Virginia and live; more than a hundred of his adherents did come, and Charles was ultimately invited to Virginia as its ruler. Upon the death of Cromwell, Berkley and Lee declared in favor of Charles II, as King of England, Scotland, France, Ireland and Virginia, whom they had proclaimed king two years before, in consequence of which the motto was added to the Virginia Arms, "En dat Virginia quintum." Until after the union of England and Scotland it was changed to "En dat Virginia Quartum," and from this incident in colonial history Virginia became known as the "Old Dominion," which proud distinction she still enjoys.

This Richard Lee had six sons and two daughters, John, Richard, Francis, William, Hancock, Charles, Betsy and Anne. Only three of these sons, Richard, Hancock, and Charles, left descendants in Virginia. Nothing is known of the marriage or descendants of the daughters.

The maiden names of very few of the wives and mothers of this period of our history have been retained, and like General Robert Lewis, Augustine Warner, and many others contemporaneous with them, the maiden name of the wife of the first Richard Lee has been lost to history and tradition, except that her given name was Anna; and until very recently, there was nothing known of the history of any of his sons except Richard and

Hancock, but in the last few years, through the persistence of some of the descendants and family connections, with the aid of wills and other court records, church registers and tombstones, many of the descendants of Charles, the youngest son, have been traced, and two families, the Fearns and Dibrells, known to have belonged to the Lee family, have been enabled to trace themselves directly from this Charles Lee.

As the Lee family has been taken up wholly with reference to the Fearns and Dibrells, only that branch from which they descended will be considered.

The three sons of Richard Lee, who left descendants in Virginia, Richard, Hancock and Charles, and who established families, were known respectively as the Shropshire or Stratford, Ditchley, and Cobbs Hall lines, these names having attached to their respective estates.

COBBS HALL.

This was the name of the residence located on the estate bequeathed by the first Richard Lee to his son Charles. The history of this estate is not known, nor is it known how the first Richard Lee came into possession of it. It is known that the name of Cobbs was one of the earliest of the colonial names, that they were in Virginia more than twenty years previous to the arrival of Richard Lee, and it is quite certain that this ancestral mansion was built by some one of the name and came into possession of Richard Lee, either by purchase or some matrimonial alliance, almost certainly the latter, as Lee in all probability would not have retained the name of strangers to be handed down to his descendants if it had come into the family by purchase.

Cobbs Hall stands to the Lee family identically as Warner Hall does to the Lewis family, and the Lees who have descended from that branch, are known as "the Cobbs Hall Lees," as the Eastern Virginia Lewises are known as those of "Warner Hall."

Leading up to the history of the Fearn and Dibrell families

it becomes necessary to publish the wills of several members through three generations of the Cobbs Hall Lees, as it is in the will of the first Charles Lee that we obtain the first and only clue to the respective heads of the Fearns and Dibrells, Leanna and Elizabeth Lee.

WILL OF THE FIRST CHARLES LEE,

"Youngest son of the first Richard Lee, and grandfather of Leeanna Fearn, and Elizabeth Dibrell.

"Northumberland county, Virginia, July Ye 13, 1700. I, Charles Lee, being in perfect health and strength of memory, do make this my last will and testament. Test, I give and bequeath my soul to my blessed Redeemer Jesus Christ, assuredly trusting, in and by His meritorious death and passion, to receive salvation, and my body to be disposed of as my loving wife shall . . . not doubting, but at last both body and soul will be renovated and glorified. Next, I give to my son Thomas all my land on Rappahannock riverside, had by my wife, as also five hundred acres left me by Walter Jenkins, to him and his heirs male. One featherbed, and further a child's part of my negroes, cattle and household stuff, and in case of his death without heirs, to be divided among my other children. Next, I give and bequeath to my son Charles the six hundred acres whereon I now am, a featherbed and furniture, a child's part of my negroes and cattle with other household stuff, and in case of his death before age, to be equally divided among the other children. Next, I give and bequeath to my daughter Leeanna Lee, that two hundred acres of land had out of brother Hancock's tract, a child's part of my negroes, with cattle and other household stuff; the sheep of her mark, which is two crops, and a slit in one ear, and in case of her death before age, to be divided amongst my other children. Next, I give and bequeath to my daughter Elizabeth, a child's part of my negroes and cattle, with other household stuff. The half of my white servants, and in case of her death before age to be equally divided among my other children.

"Lastly. I give and bequeath to my loving wife all my bedding not set down, and an equal part of my negroes and cattle, the half of my white hands, with a child's part of my other household stuff. My part of the mill, and all my sheep and hogs. Whom I make executrix of this, my last will and testament.

"As witness my hand and seal the day and year above written.
CHARLES LEE."

"Die. December, 1701. Then Mr. John Tuberville, for Mrs. Elizabeth Lee, executrix of Captain Charles Lee, deceased, motioned the county court of Northumberland, for a probate to be granted of this will, and the court perused the will and were of opinion that, as well ye words of as the subscription to the said will, are his own hand, written by himself, and doe therefore grant to her, the said Elizabeth, probate of ye said will.

"Test.

"THE HOBSON, Clerk of Court."

"Die. January 21, 1718. The original will attested of Captain Charles Lee, was presented to ye court by Richard Lee (ye records where it was recorded, being burnt with the office). On the said Richard Lee's motion, it was again admitted to record.

"Test.

"RD. LEE, Clk. of Court."

From the foregoing will it will be seen that Charles Lee, youngest son of the first Richard, had two daughters, Leeanna and Elizabeth. These names in connection have never before been known in the Lee family, nor is it known from whence they were derived. It is presumable, however, that Elizabeth was named for her mother, Elizabeth Medstand, but as to the combination of Leeanna, we are left to conjecture. It will be noted that the name is a combination of two separate and distinct names, Lee and Anna, and it is doubtless from the name of the wife of the first Richard Lee, who was named Anna, that the name was derived. Charles Lee evidently sought to perpetuate the memory of his mother in the name of his oldest daughter, which he could not do by merely calling her Anna, as she would then have been only Anna Lee, but he conceived a thought much more comprehensive and called her Leeanna, and prefixing it to his own name, made it Leeanna Lee.

In my search for the ancestry of Leeanna and Elizabeth Lee, I had opened correspondence with all of the genealogists of the Lee family. Mr. Cassius F. Lee of Alexandria, Virginia, being recognized as authority, I was persistent in my search through him. We differed very widely as to the proper method of obtaining the desired information, in consequence of which our correspondence ended rather abruptly. It transpired, however, that Mr. Lee was in very poor health and died soon thereafter. Dr. Edmund J. Lee of Philadelphia, administered upon his effects and succeeded him as family genealogist. Dr. Lee was a brother of Mr. Cassius Lee, and as executor of his brother came into possession of all his effects and correspondence, my letters being among the latter.

Finding from my correspondence with his brother that I was inquiring very anxiously for the history of Leeanna and Elizabeth Lee, Dr. Lee thought that he had found the ladies for whom I was inquiring in the daughters of the first Charles Lee, and, as he was preparing for publication a history of the Lee family, he opened correspondence with me, but the information he had was only what I was already in possession of from "Hayden."

It will be seen that the will of the first Charles Lee was written July 13, 1700, and that his daughters, Leeanna and Elizabeth, were born previous to that time, and from other records it is shown that they were several years old when their father died; so that it followed as a matter of necessity that they belonged to a generation preceding the Leeanna and Elizabeth for whom I was searching, as Leeanna Lee had married John Fearn, in 1744, and Elizabeth Lee had married Anthony Dibrell in 1756, and both of them had raised large families of children; therefore it became necessary to make further search.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Up to this time nothing had been ascertained except that Leeanna and Elizabeth were family names in the Cobbs Hall line, and although Charles Lee of Cobbs Hall left but two sons, and Leeanna Fearn and Elizabeth Dibrell necessarily belonged to the same generation as their children, these names could not be found in their wills.

"WILL OF THE FIRST THOMAS LEE,

"Oldest son of the first Charles Lee, and grandson of the first Richard Lee, and father of Leeanna Fearn and Elizabeth Dibrell.

"In the name of God, amen. I, Thomas Lee, being in good health, mind and memory, do make and appoint this my last will and testament.

"I give and bequeath my soul to God who gave it, hoping in and through the merits of my blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ to receive remission of all my sins. My body to the ground, to have a Christian and decent burial.

"I give my son William Lee all my land where William Rankins and Richard Weaver now live, to him, and the heirs of his body forever.

"I give unto my sons, Thomas, Richard and Charles, all the tract of land whereon I now live, to be equally divided between them, to them and the heirs of their body lawfully begotten, forever.

"I give and bequeath to my son John, all that tract of land on ye head of Currotomson river, which I had of my wife, where Harvey now lives, to him and his heirs forever. Provided the child my wife goes with be not a boy, which if it be, then my will is that the said land be equally divided between them and the heirs of their bodies forever.

"I give and bequeath unto my wife one-fourth part of my personal estate, during her natural life or widowhood, but if she should intermarry, then to have but one child's part, also my will is, that she have the liberty to dispose of her fourth part to such of her children as she shall think proper, at her decease, provided she lives unmarried.

"My will is that my estate be kept together until my children come to lawful age or marriage.

"My will is that my loving brother, Major Charles Lee, my good friend, William Nicholas Martin, and my loving wife, be executors of this, my last will and testament, and that my son, William Lee, when he arrives at the age of one and twenty, be allowed to be one of my executors.

"My will is that my present estate, after my wife's part it taken out, be equally divided between all my children.

"I give and bequeath unto my son, William Lee, my Phillips' English Dictionary.

"I do ordain and appoint this my last will and testament, revoking all previous wills by me heretofore made. As witness my hand and seal, this 16th day of June, 1733.

"THOMAS LEE.

"WILL OF THE SECOND THOMAS LEE.

"Son of the first Thomas, grandson of the first Charles, great-grandson of first Richard, and brother of Leeanna Fearn and Elizabeth Dibrell.

"In the name of God, amen, December 1, 1758. I, Thomas Lee of the colony of Virginia, in the county of Lancaster, and Parish of Christ Church, being very sick and weak in body, but a perfect mind and memory, thanks be to God for it however, calling to mind the mortality of my body, and knowing that it is appointed unto all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last will and testament, that is to say, principally and first of all, I recommend my soul into the hands of God that gave it, and my body to the earth, to be decently interred, at the discretion of my executors hereafter named, not doubting but that at the general resurrection I shall revive again by the mighty power of my blessed Redeemer. And as to such worldly estate as it has pleased God to bless me with in this life, I give and dispose of the same in manner and form following:

"After my just debts and funeral charges are fully paid and satisfied, then I give and bequeath to my daughter Mary Lee, one negro boy named Dick, that I had from my brother Richard Lee, to her and her heirs forever.

"I give and bequeath unto my brother John Lee, one negro woman named Cate, that I had by my brother Richard Lee, to him and his heirs forever, and as I owe Richard Blade some money it is my will and desire, that it shall be paid out of the money that William Griggs owes me, and the remainder of the money derived from William Griggs, I give and bequeath to my brother John Lee, to him and his heirs forever.

"Then I give and bequeath unto my two children, Mary Lee and George Lee, to them and the heirs of their body forever, all the rest and residue of my estate, both real and personal, of what nature or kind soever, but in case my children should die without heirs lawfully begotten of their body, then I give and bequeath to my loving wife, Lucy Lee, all the estate I had by her and the increase, and one negro woman named Felicy, and likewise my chair, and two horses, and the explanation of the testament. And in case of the death of my two children, Mary Lee and George Lee, without heirs lawfully begotten of their body, I give and bequeath to my brother, Charles Lee, all the tract of land I now live on, to him and his heirs forever.

"I give and bequeath unto my brother John Lee, all of the land I have in White Chapel Parish, to him and his heirs forever, in case my two children, Mary Lee and George Lee, should die without heirs lawfully begotten of their body.

"I give and bequeath unto my brother Charles Lee, one negro fellow named Aaron, in case my children should die without heirs, lawfully begotten of their bodies, to him and his heirs forever.

"I give and bequeath unto my loving wife, Lucy Lee, one-half my stock, and household furniture, in the case of the death of my children without heirs lawfully begotten of their bodies, and in the case of the death of my two children, Mary Lee and George Lee, without heirs lawfully begotten of their bodies, I give and bequeath all the rest of my negroes not before mentioned, to my brother John Lee, to him and the heirs of his body forever, and my will and desire is that my brother John Lee may work the negroes he now has upon the land I now live on, as long as he lives single, and have the profits of the land I now live on and the negroes, as long as he lives single, and in case of the death of two children Mary Lee and George Lee, without heirs lawfully begotten of their bodies, my will and desire is, that my estate be kept together until forty pounds current money of Virginia be raised, and that money I give and bequeath to my sister Elizabeth Dibrell's eldest son to him and his heirs lawfully begotten of his body forever, and in case he dies without such heirs, then the forty pounds, current money to be equally divided between my two brothers, Charles Lee and John Lee.

"I do hereby nominate, constitute and appoint my loving wife, Lucy Lee, executrix, as long as she lives a widow and no longer, also Charles Lee, Eppa Lawson, and George Currell, executors of this my last will and testament, revoking and disannulling all other will or wills, by me heretofore made. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal the day and year first above written. "THOMAS LEE.

"Signed, sealed and delivered, in presence of Benj. Kelly, James Sarasty, Charles Lee, G. Currell."

"At a court held for Lancaster county, on the 16th day of March, 1759, this will was proved in open court, by the oaths of Charles Lee, George Currell, and Benj. Kelly, witnesses thereto, and ordered to be recorded.

"Teste.

"THOMAS EDWARDS, Jr., C. Clk."

A train of ideas may be traced from the foregoing wills. For the first time in the history of the Lee family, the names of Leeanna and Elizabeth appear in combination in the will of the first Charles Lee. These were the names of his only daughters, and from that fact it was almost a matter of necessity that the names should be traced in this line.

The will of the second Charles Lee has not been published in these pages, as there was nothing in it, or in any of the records growing out of it that could possibly shed light upon the names that we were in search of.

The will of the first Thomas Lee, however, opened up new thought for reflection. He names his five sons and provides for them specifically but makes no mention of his daughters. It is clear, however, that he had daughters, as he mentions in a general way, that his personal estate shall be divided equally among "all my children." Had there been no daughters this provision would have been unnecessary, as his personal estate, as well as his real estate, would have been divided among his sons.

It is a well-known fact that testators at this period of the country's history, gave their lands to their sons as also an equal proportion of their personal estate, and hence the names of the daughters were rarely ever mentioned; but in this will of the first Thomas Lee we have proof conclusive that he had at least one daughter and almost certainly several others.

The second Thomas Lee, son of the first Thomas, aforesaid, mentions his sister Elizabeth Dibrell in his will, and Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell in his MSS. which are the highest record authority, mentions Leeanna who married John Fearn, and still another sister who married a gentleman by the name of Bates, whose descendants are not known.

A singular coincidence occurs in connection with the will of the first Thomas Lee, written July 16, 1733. At that time he refers to an unborn child, whose name, of course is not mentioned in the will, but about twenty-two years thereafter, Elizabeth Lee married Anthony Dibrell, and the second Thomas Lee refers to her as his sister, Elizabeth Dibrell.

Taking all the foregoing circumstances into connection, together with names and dates, there can be no doubt that the unborn child mentioned by the first Thomas Lee in his will, was Elizabeth Lee who married Anthony Dibrell in 1756.

LEEANNA AND ELIZABETH LEE.

These names form a separate chapter in "Lee history." There is no doubt that the genealogists of the Lee family had lost sight of these two ladies, but Leeanna and Elizabeth had not lost sight of the Lees, nor did the country lose sight of them or their descendants.

When Napoleon Bonaparte was inquired of in regard to his ancestry, he replied that he himself was the head of his own ancestral line, and the ancestry of the Bonapartes dated from his advent upon the stage of history. The same may be said of Leeanna and Elizabeth Lee. They were not heroines in the common acceptation of the term, but they were heroic mothers, who, like the Spartan mothers, bid their sons go forth and fight the battles of life and make a history for themselves.

As has been seen, Leeanna Lee married John Fearn, and Elizabeth married Anthony Dibrell, and for four generations these names have left their impress upon the history of the times. As jurists, diplomats, scholars, masters of the various professions, or in whatever capacity they have been called to act they have proven themselves equal to the occasion, and at all times the peers of their fellows.

That Elizabeth was the daughter of the first Thomas Lee, referred to in his will as then unborn, is conclusively proven. That she married Anthony Dibrell about 1756, is also proven by the reference made to her in the will of her brother Thomas in 1758, and that she was married to Anthony Dibrell at the house of John Fearn, in Buckingham county, Virginia, in 1756, is proven by the MSS. of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell.

That Leeanna Lee was a sister of Elizabeth Lee, and consequently a daughter of the first Thomas Lee, is proven by the MSS. of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell, the concurrent history of both the Fearn and Dibrell families, and the generally accepted and unbroken traditions for four generations.

The records of Middlesex county, Virginia, show that Leeanna Lee was married to John Fearn, December 31, 1744. The Manuscripts of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell shows that John Fearn and his wife, Leeanna, removed to Buckingham county previous to 1756, and that Elizabeth and another sister accompanied them, and that Elizabeth was married to Anthony Dibrell at the house of John Fearn, in the above named year. So that nothing can be more conclusively proven than that these ladies were sisters, and that they were the daughters of the first Thomas Lee, granddaughters of Charles Lee of Cobbs Hall, and great-granddaughters, of Richard Lee, secretary of the colony, and first attorney general of Virginia.

As set forth in the outset, reference to the Lee family was taken up as an interlude to the Dibrell family, as it was necessary to show the descent of the maternal head of this family, and therefore it will be pursued no further.

Dr. Edmund Jennings Lee, author of "Lee of Virginia," has published a very exhaustive history of the Lee family, and from that volume may be derived all necessary information in regard to the Lees. Dr. Lee, however, knew nothing of the Fearns and Dibrells, and for this reason we have inserted this sketch of the Lee family from which branch they were descended. We will now return to the Dibrell family proper.

ANTHONY DIBRELL.

We now return to Anthony Dibrell, the first of the name in America, and so far as is known, in the world; indeed, it is believed to be a fact that he was the author of the name as well as its first possessor, the general change of names on the part of the Huguenot exiles having given rise to almost every conceivable variety, resulting from translation, similarity of sound or peculiar fancy.

Having already laid the foundation of his fortune which was added to by his marriage, he became a large land holder, in Buckingham, where he continued to live and raise his family, his home being on what is known as Walton's fork of Slate river.

Four children were born to Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee, two sons and two daughters; Charles, Leeanna, Judith and Anthony.

In 1770, Mrs. Elizabeth Dibrell, first wife of Anthony Dibrell, died at the age of 36, having been married only 14 years. After the death of his first wife, Anthony Dibrell married the second time, Miss Magdaline Burton. There were no children by this marriage. Anthony Dibrell died in 1800, aged 73 years. His second wife survived him, having died in 1806.

CHARLES DIBRELL.

Charles Dibrell was the oldest son of Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee. He was born in Buckingham county, October 24, 1757. He married first Miss Burton of Buckingham, and second, Miss Patterson of the same county. He had eight children by the first wife; John, Elizabeth, Polly, Leeanna, Anthony Judith, Charles and Joseph. By the second marriage he had four children; Patterson, Panthea, Elvira, and Agnes. This Charles Dibrell born 1757, is the "oldest son of my sister Elizabek Dibrell," referred to in the will of her brother, Thomas Lee, written 1758. This son, Charles Dibrell, oldest son of Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee, removed to Madison county, Kentucky, in 1782, where all of his first wife's children were born, except John and Elizabeth, who were born previous to his removal.

Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell says of him: "After his first wife's death he moved to Wayne county, Kentucky, and settled on the Cumberland river, ten miles from Monticello, where I visited him in 1810, when on my way to Nashville. His first wife was amiable and affectionate, and breathed her last in his arms."

Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell does not state it as a fact that this Charles Dibrell came back from Kentucky to Virginia in after life, but the trend of his article is such that the conclusion is inevitable. He says he married first Miss Burton of Buckingham, and removed to Kentucky; that all of his first wife's children except two, were born in Kentucky. He certainly came back to Buckingham to marry the second time, and his return to Kentucky is not noted. Besides Mr. C. L. Dibrell's wife, who was never in Kentucky, knew him well, and loved him very much, and her acquaintance with him was necessarily in Virginia. There is no doubt, however, that he returned to Kentucky, where some of his older children resided, and ultimately to Tennessee, as we find him in 1832 at Sparta, Tennessee, the home of his son Anthony.

Like his brother, Anthony, he was a Revolutionary soldier, as shown by the records in the war office at Washington, by the Pension records, and numerous affidavits.

A partial history only of the descendants of this Charles Dibrell has been obtained, as we have found it next to impossible to secure information in regard to them.

I have found them in almost all of the Southern States and some of them scattered North, and their lives have invariably proven their superiority, but strange to say, nothing like a complete line of them has ever been obtained by anyone so far as is known. Charles Dibrell had five sons and seven daughters, and doubtless there are hundreds of his descendants scattered through the country who have been lost to genealogists, and know nothing of their antecedents, and are almost unknown to each other. Of course, there are exceptions to this general statement. The descendants of this Anthony Dibrell, son of this Charles, and the Shrewsburys who married his daughters Elizabeth and Polly, are to some extent traceable, but there are so many breaks even in those lines that it would be impossible to construct a family tree.

Of the children of Charles Dibrell, we have found it impossible to obtain record evidence or even reliable tradition of all of their marriages.

His son Anthony, born June 4, 1788, married Miss Millie Carter and settled at Sparta, Tennessee. Another son Charles married Miss Mitchell, and died in the Indian Territory. Another son married Miss Lee Haley. Panthea Dibrell, daughter of Col. Charles Dibrell, by his second marriage, married Nathaniel Bramlett. Polly, another daughter married Nathaniel Shrewsbury and Elizabeth married Drury Shrewsbury. Leeanna Dibrell, daughter of Col. Charles Dibrell, married George G. Gibbs, and Judith Dibrell married a gentleman by the name of Poston.

4. ANTHONY DIBRELL.

Anthony Dibrell, second son of Col. Charles Dibrell by his first wife, Miss Burton, was born in Madison county, Kentucky, June 4, 1788, and died in Sparta, Tennessee, January 25, 1875, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. He married Millie Carter, by whom he had ten children, six sons and four daughters. The oldest son Edwin, died in infancy. Montgomery C. Dibrell, born March 6, 1813, married first, Mary E. Carter, second, Mary E. Eastland; Charles Crockett Dibrell, born September 15, 1817, married Miss Mary E. Jenkins; Joseph Dibrell born July 20, 1820; George G. Dibrell, born April 12, 1822, married Miss Mary E. Leftwich; William C. Dibrell, born July 2, 1829, married Margaret E. Jenkins; Elizabeth N. Dibrell, born March 18, 1815, married Charles J. Sullivan; Lucinda A. Dibrell, born August 28, 1824, married James G. Hood; Sarah B. Dibrell, born February 20, 1827, married John W. Whitfield; Martha F. Dibrell born October 21, 1834, married Jasper N. Bailey.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Anthony Dibrell was among the earlier settlers of Tennessee having settled in White county at a very early period in the history of the State. He was one of the sturdy citizens of that section, and for a long time was clerk of the court. He raised a large family, and his sons and grandsons have proven themselves worthy of their ancestry.

5 GEN. GEORGE G. DIBRELL.

General George Dibrell was a son of Anthony Dibrell, grandson of Col. Charles Dibrell, and great-grandson of Anthony Dibrell and Miss Elizabeth Lee. He was born April 12, 1822, married Miss Mary E. Leftwich, to which marriage was born nine children, seven sons and two daughters: Waman L., December 3, 1844; Joseph A., November 3, 1845; James, January 8, 1852; Jefferson, 1856; Frank, 1858; Stanton William Crockett, May 7, 1864; Mary Lou, and Emily died in infancy.

Waman L. Dibrell married Evelyn Morgan; Joseph Dibrell married first, Bertha Brewster, second, Dora Taylor; James Dibrell married Dora Jett; Jefferson Dibrell married Cora Taylor; Frank Dibrell married Louisa Rhea; Stanton Dibrell married Lizzie Cary; Mary Lou Dibrell married James T. Officer. William Crockett Dibrell married Catherine Stratton.

6 WILLIAM CROCKETT DIBRELL.

William Crockett Dibrell is the son of General George Dibrell and is a merchant in Nashville, Tennessee, of the firm of Murray, Dibrell & Co. He was born May 7, 1844, and married Catherine Stratton, of that city. Their oldest son, George Stratton Dibrell, born August 22, 1870, married Bessie Murray,

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

November 11, 1897. Mary Leftwich Dibrell, daughter of William Crockett and Catherine Stratton Dibrell, was born May 14, 1876. Catherine Stratton Dibrell, daughter of George Stratton and Bessie Murray Dibrell, and granddaughter of William Crockett Dibrell, was born 1898.

General George Dibrell was one of the leading men of Tennessee covering the period preceding the war between the States, as well as during the war and for twenty years thereafter.

When the stormclouds of civil war burst in 1861, George Dibrell, true to his antecedents, was found upon the Southern side. East Tennessee did not present an unbroken front at that time, but owing to political complications, the leaders were very much divided. Andrew Johnson and Thomas R. R. Nelson, two of the most prominent men of the day, opposed secession bitterly. Johnson had been governor of the State, and was then in the senate of the United States. Nelson, one of the greatest lawyers of his time, while he did not hold an office, swayed a powerful influence. Johnson went over, horse, foot and dragoon, to the Federal side, and while Nelson did not do so, he accepted a parole of honor under the pledge of remaining at home and taking no active part on either side.

William G. Brownlow, editor of the Knoxville Whig, and a Methodist preacher withal, who swayed the riff-raff of East Tennessee illiteracy and preached a mixture of politics and religion to the mountain element from Chattanooga to Bristol and from the North Carolina to the Kentucky line, also espoused the Federal cause. With these three leaders, two of them old-line Whigs, and the other, Johnson, a leading Democrat, East Tennessee was the scene of contending factions, so that it was but little less than martyrdom for an East Tennessean to espouse the Southern cause. There were, however, many brave spirits who, regardless of financial interest or personal safety, chose to fight under the Southern flag, among whom was George Dibrell.

Raising a regiment of cavalry from among the yeomanry of the Cumberland mountains, after having served some time as a private, he offered their services to the Confederate government, and pitching, as it were, into the thickest of the fight, he rose steadily by promotion until he was made brigadier-general of cavalry. General Dibrell's command played a conspicuous part in many of the active engagements of the war, and when at last the fates had doomed the failure of the Confederacy, it fell to their part to act as a body guard of the Confederate government when Richmond was evacuated.

What has been said of East Tennessee at the breaking out of the war, and the consequences which followed during the war as a result of contending political factions and a deep-seated difference of opinion in regard to secession, conveys but a faint idea of what followed after the war had closed. Brownlow, with all of the intensity of hate that could possibly possess the soul of a political preacher, was made military governor, and the Confederate soldier who dared to go back home when the war was over, took his life in his own hands. It is a fact, strange and contradictory as it may seem, that fighting was going on in East Tennessee among local factions two years after the war had closed. It was no crime, in the opinion of Brownlow's followers, to kill an ex-Confederate. The courts consisted entirely of South-haters, and juries were made up from among the ignorance of the mountains, so that it was next to impossible to obtain the conviction of any one charged with committing an outrage against an ex-Confederate. But if a conviction was obtained, William G. Brownlow hastened to pardon the convict.

The state of affairs in East Tennessee at this time reads like a romance, and is difficult to believe. James W. Sheffy, a distinguished Virginia lawyer, in a speech delivered at Bristol, on the Virginia side of the town, with impassioned eloquence, "thanked God that he was in Virginia, but as much as he thanked God that he was in Virginia, he thanked Him more that he was not in Tennessee, and still more that he was beyond the reach of Brownlow."

In this state of affairs it fell to the lot of George Dibrell and other leading men to rescue that section from the grasp of what was no less than a lawless element. East Tennessee was composed of three congressional districts, the First, Second and Third, all of which were solidly Republican and solidly lawless in their tendencies, while the remainder of the State, though differing very much, was virtually under the heel of the lawless element.

When the crucial time came, when it was an absolute necessity to break this power, it fell to the part of every law-abiding citizen to play his full part in the effort, and it was at this juncture that George Dibrell proved himself, in peace as he had in war, equal to the emergency, and broke the backbone of the Republican party in the Third district of Tennessee.

General Dibrell was the standard-bearer of the Democratic party in the congressional race of 1874, and led the party to victory. He was elected to Congress for five successive terms, and might have represented his district indefinitely, but voluntarily retired from politics. At the time of his death (May 9, 1888), he was most prominently mentioned for the Democratic nomination for governor of Tennessee, which he would doubtless have received had he lived, but he died a few weeks before the convention met. In the preceding gubernatorial convention he received five hundred votes.

Remarks of Rev. Dr. Kelly at memorial meeting on the occasion of the death of General Dibrell, from the Nashville American, May 10, 1888: "Tennessee to-day mourns the loss of one of her noblest sons.

"General George G. Dibrell died at his home in Sparta, White county, yesterday afternoon, full of honors and in his sixty-seventh year.

"He was a man among men, the soul of honor, one whose word was never lightly given, but once passed, was to be relied on as the unchangeable truth. . . . He joined the Confederate army at the beginning of the war as a private, served as lieutenant colonel of the 25th Tennessee Infantry one year, and then organized the Eighth Tennessee Cavalry, of which he was colonel. He was promoted to be brigadier-general, and served under Generals Forrest and Wheeler, surrendering his division at Washington, Georgia, on May 9, 1865. After the war he again engaged in farming and mercantile pursuits, until 1874, when he was elected to Congress, and served five successive terms, after which he declined to allow the use of his name again.

"He was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in 1886, receiving at one time more than five hundred votes. He was also a member of the constitutional convention of 1870.

"No man had more friends than General Dibrell, and none deserved them more. His friendship was of that enduring kind which Shelly describes

"A star
Which moves not 'mid the heavens alone,
A smile among dark frowns—a gentle tone,
Among rude voices, a beloved light,
A solitude, a refuge, a delight.'

"An honored and honorable citizen is gone; a brave soldier is at rest; a loving father has left the home circle to mourn his irreparable loss. By his bier the people of his beloved State stand uncovered and say in reverent tones, 'Peace to his ashes.'"

Crockett and William Dibrell were two other sons of Anthony Dibrell, and like their brother, George Dibrell, were staunch Southern men, having linked their fortunes with the Confederacy. I mention these brothers together because they were so long associated together in business. Previous to the war they were merchants and partners at different places in Texas, and after the war they were wholesale boot and shoe merchants in New Orleans and Galveston. William Dibrell has long since been dead, and Crockett, if living, is a very old man.

5 ELIZABETH DIBRELL.

This daughter of Col. Charles Dibrell married Drewry Shrewsbury, and had issue in part as follows: Anne, married

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Joseph Gingry; Mary, married Hezekiah Bradbury; Charles, never married; Judith, married Charles J. Love; Martha, married her cousin, Edwin Dibrell, who was a son of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson, of whom more will be said under the proper head.

Polly Dibrell, another daughter of Col. Charles Dibrell, married Nathaniel Shrewsbury, who was most probably a brother of Drewry. Their marriage took place in Madison county, Kentucky, but we have no account of their descendants.

4 JUDITH DIBRELL.

Daughter of Col. Charles Dibrell by his first wife, Miss Burton, married a gentleman by the name of Poston, about whose descendants, however, nothing is definitely known, except one son, Charles Dibrell Poston, and his identity seems to have been one of the casualties that appear to bid defiance to fate, and perpetuate names in spite of adverse fortune.

Charles Dibrell Poston, one of the most remarkable characters of his age, was born in Hardin county, Kentucky, and died in Phoenix, Arizona, the latter part of June, 1902, when nearing his eightieth year. Extracts from the Washington Evening Times, written at the time of his death, give some idea of the character of the man, the life that he led, his rare attainments and eccentricities. A press dispatch from Phoenix, Arizona, dated July 2, 1902, in that paper, is as follows:

"One of the noteworthy men of the West died here the other day, after a career with many remarkable characteristics. Charles D. Poston, pioneer, traveler, poet, author, diplomat, breathed his last here where he had made his home during the latter years of his life. He had nearly attained his eightieth birthday. For twenty years his life had been a solitary one, though his bent figure was well known in Phoenix.

"The Legislature of Arizona had voted him a pension of $35 per month, he being the only beneficiary of that nature. The reasons for this bestowal were enumerated by the last Legislature. The act recites:

"Charles Dibrell Poston, January, 1854, prospected the A. J. O. mines in what is now Pima county, Arizona, and in the same year, organized in said mines the first mining company to invest capital, and to do development work on mines in what is now Arizona after its transfer to the United States under the Gadsden purchase, and was from 1856 to 1861 deputy clerk and recorder of Dona Anna county which then embraced all Arizona, and in 1863 gave Arizona her name, and obtained President Lincoln's signature to the act, that, together with the then delegate to Congress from New Mexico, he had drawn and obtained congressional enactment thereof, creating the Territory of Arizona, and in 1864 was elected the first delegate to Congress from Arizona, and from 1867 to 1880 was register of the United States land office of Arizona, and from the above and many other well known facts, Charles Dibrell Poston, among all other pioneers was pre-eminently the moving spirit, and in fact, may be truly said to be the father of Arizona." The last check from the Territorial auditor was found in the pocket of the stricken pioneer.

"Notwithstanding his loneliness and everything that might have marked him as a recluse, there were evidences of a time of mental vigor and ability. There were heaps of papers mainly comprising matter descriptive of Arizona's early days, and evidently prepared for the Arizona Historical Society, of which he had been founder and first president. There were a few copies of a volume of poems, several small volumes he had written upon his travels in Europe and in the Orient, and many references to magazine and newspaper articles, one of them of considerable length, on 'The Building of a State in Apache Land,' having been published in the Overland Monthly. He had written voluminously, as well upon philosophical and religious subjects. He had his own modified form of Theosophy, and had conceived the idea that it was the same form of religious worship practiced by the prehistoric Toltecans inhabitants of Arizona. Near Florence,

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Arizona, rises a conical hill of considerable height, solitary on the plain, not far from the ruins of CasaGrande, and itself covered with potsherd, and with the ruins left by a forgotten people. For more than thirty years this hill has been known as 'Poston's butte.' Around and up the butte, at considerable expense, Poston had built a road. Upon the summit it was his dream to erect a temple, from which the deity should be worshipped with solemnity on the uprising of the sun, to him the glorious manifestation and representative of Celestial Omnipotence.

"Poston was a native of Hardin county, Kentucky. At twenty-two he was admitted to the bar and practiced for several years in his native State, and in Washington. He outlived the wife and several children of an early union. A daughter married Dr. Benjamin F. Pope of the regular army. Pope won distinction as the chief surgeon of the Fifth army corps in the advance on Santiago, and died at his post in the Philippines, with the rank of deputy surgeon general. Mrs. Popedied on the Pacific while returning home with her husband's remains. After several years in Washington, Chas. Dibrell Poston went to California as a gold seeker, and later from Guaymas, he headed a party into the land acquired by the Gadsden purchase. He was back again soon, conducting operations for a mining company he had organized in New York. At the outbreak of the civil war the Union forces abandoned the Southwest. Poston was compelled to leave mining property on which $1,000,000 had been spent, and joined the Federal army as an aide on the staff of General Heintzelman. A couple of years later he was sent back to the Southwest with a commission from President Lincoln as superintendent of Indian affairs. At the same time he served as recorder of the region which embraces Arizona. After securing the organization of the new Territory and serving as its first delegate in Congress, he went abroad. For a while he was associated with several New York papers. One of his experiences was a trip to China, with his friend J. Ross Browne, as accredited agent of the United States, bearing despatches to the Chinese Emperor. Again he turned towards the Sunset land, to take charge of the United States land office at Florence. Later he had an appointment as special agent of the government along the Mexican border. His last official place was that of agent of the Agricultural Bureau of the Interior Department of Arizona.

"It was Poston's wish that his last resting place be the summit of the butte that bears his name. It is not improbable that the Historical Society will some day remove his remains to the site of the projected temple of the Sun."

3 LEEANNA AND JUDITH DIBRELL.

3 Leeanna Dibrell was the oldest daughter of Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee. She was born 1759 in Buckingham county, Virginia, and previous to 1780, she married Michael Jones of that county, and had ten children; Anthony, Elizabeth, Mary or Polly, Michael, Judith, Charles, Sarah or Sally, Martha and Margaret.

Very little is known definitely of the descendants of Michael Jones and Leanna Dibrell. It is a fact, however, that the name of Jones, in Buckingham and surrounding counties, who have descended from this couple, is legion, to say nothing of the descendants of the daughters who have intermarried with other names.

William D. Jones of Buckingham, one of the children above named whose home was at the historic yet unpretentious village of the New Store, left a number of descendants. One of his daughters, Mary, married a cousin, Richard Dibrell of Richmond, Virginia, of whom more will be said under another head, and a son, Mr. Monroe Jones, was for a long time associated with Mr. Dibrell in business under the firm name of Dibrell & Jones.

As will be seen there are at this point two branches of the Dibrell family united, and under the head of Anthony Dibrell, brother of Leeanna Dibrell Jones, more will be said of Richard and Mary Jones Dibrell.

It is to be regretted that so little has been collected of this branch of the Dibrell family. Every effort has been put forth and every means exhausted to obtain data in regard to them, but it has been in this as in many other cases utterly impossible to obtain information.

Between the lack of interest, loss of data, and a still more objectionable feature, the idea that genealogy is undemocratic and hence unpopular, genealogy is made a difficult task from start to finish.

I do not mean to suggest that this last charge applies to this branch of the Dibrell family, as I have never found any of the name or connection that were not proud of their ancestry or who did not delight in perpetuating their lines of descent, but it is nevertheless a fact that men and women, whatever their antecedents or preferences may be, are more or less under the influence of a class of humanity that delights to sneer at anything that rises above the level of the common herd, to which, as a general rule, they themselves belong.

3 JUDITH DIBRELL.

Judith Dibrell, second daughter of Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee, was born in Buckingham county, 1760, married David Patterson of that county, about 1780. David Patterson and Judith Dibrell, had twelve children; Samuel, Thomas, Peter, John, David, Charles, James, William, Agnes, Elizabeth or Betsy, Sarah or Sally, and Judith.

David Patterson and his wife, Judith Dibrell, both lived to a very old age, their married life having run through a period of more than sixty years. There was very little difference in the dates of their deaths.

As in the case of Leeanna who married Michael Jones, very little is definitely known of the marriages or descendants of this large number of children, but as there were eight sons it can be readily seen that the name of Patterson who have descended from this marriage are very numerous.

In this as in every other instance, I have employed every effort and exhausted every means of obtaining information, but for the reasons suggested in the case of Michael Jones and Lee-anna Dibrell, I have been unable to follow the different lines. I have, however, obtained through the assistance of Mrs. Abraham, whose first husband was Dr. Lafayette Dibrell, and who married secondly Mr. John Abraham of Buckingham county, Virginia, and who now resides in Richmond, the descendants of Elizabeth Lee Patterson, daughter of David Patterson and Judith Dibrell.

4 ELIZABETH LEE PATTERSON.

Elizabeth Lee Patterson, better known in her girlhood days by the pet name of "Betsy," as noted above, was among the children of David Patterson and Judith Dibrell, married William Lewis, son of Owen Lewis of Nelson county, Virginia, and grandson of Planter John Lewis of Albemarle, of the Zachary Lewis line. They had three children, all daughters, Judith Dibrell, Sarah and Elizabeth Lee.

5 Judith Dibrell Lewis married Edward H. Mosely of Buckingham county, Virginia, Sarah Lewis married a Mr. Morris, and Elizabeth Lewis married a Mr. Thomas of Nelson county, Virginia.

5 JUDITH DIBRELL LEWIS.

Judith Dibrell Lewis, daughter of William Lewis and Elizabeth Patterson, married Edward H. Mosely of Buckingham county, Virginia. Mr. Mosely was a brother of Alexander Moseley, who, for so many years was editor and proprietor of the Richmond Whig. They had three children, all daughters—Sarah Ann Lewis, Mary Elizabeth, and Virginia Edward.

6 SARAH ANN LEWIS MOSELY.

Married first, Dr. Lafayette Dibrell, a son of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell and consequently a relative of Miss Mosely. Dr. Dibrell, who was in very poor health at the time of his marriage, lived but a few months thereafter; they left no children. Miss

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Mosley married the second time, Mr. John Abraham of Buckingham county, Virginia. By this marriage there was one son—Rev. W. Y. Abraham of Richmond, Virginia. Mrs. Abraham also lives in Richmond with her son.

A more extended notice will be given Dr. Dibrell under the head of his own immediate line, and also of Mrs. Abraham, under the head of the Lewis family.

7 The Rev. Wyckliffe Yancy Abraham, only son of Sarah Ann Mosely, by her second marriage, was born in Rockbridge county, Virginia, whither his parents had removed from Buckingham, about 1850 or 1851, and is hence the rise of fifty years of age. He was educated at Richmond College, graduated in a theological course at the Baptist Theological seminary, located first at Greenville, South Carolina, but afterwards removed to Louisville, Kentucky. He married first, Miss Annie Broadus, daughter of Dr. Broadus, President of the Seminary at that time. Mr. Abraham's first wife died about 1895, and he married the second time, Miss Laura Christian of Buckingham county, Virginia, December, 1900. He had by the first marriage, two children—John a young man, twenty-five or six, in business in Richmond, Virginia; and Annie Louise, eight or ten years of age.

6 MARY ELIZABETH MOSELY.

Mary Elizabeth Mosely, daughter of Edward Mosely and Judith Lewis, married the Rev. Thomas N. Johnson, a distinguished Baptist divine of Virginia, who filled some of the most important stations within the bounds of the State, was a power, so to speak, in Baptist circles, and wielded a religious influence which but few men ever did. He lived to a ripe old age, was minister of the gospel for more than half a century, and was above eighty when he died. They had five children, Sarah Louisa, Thomas Edward, Ella, Lafayette Dibrell and Mary Lewis.

7 Sarah Louisa Johnson, daughter of the Rev. Thomas N. Johnson and Mary Elizabeth Mosely, married the Rev. William Shipman, of Nelson county, Virginia. Mr. Shipman was also a Baptist minister, who has filled many important stations in the State, among others, Salem, Virginia, Halifax Court House, Virginia, and one of the Richmond churches. Among their children are the Rev. Thomas Shipman, a bright light in the galaxy of Baptist divines, and Miss Ella, a young lady of rare attainments, and a graduate of Hollins Institute.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

7 The Rev. Thomas Shipman, though barely out of the twenties, has risen rapidly in his denomination, has filled important stations, one in Kentucky, one in Savannah, and when last heard from, was in Roanoke, Virginia.

In tracing genealogy it is strange to note how different families will run into each other, but we are compelled to note at the same time the old adage, "that birds of a feather will flock together," and while there is sometimes a contradiction of this adage, where emotional and erratic young people fly off at a tangent and defy the natural laws of affinity, the exceptions are very rare.

We find in the foregoing lines where the name of Lewis, Lee, du Breuil and others of equal rank and distinction have become almost indiscriminate by intermarriages.

SECOND ANTHONY DIBRELL.

3 Anthony Dibrell, the second of that name in America, was the son of the first Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee. He was born in Buckingham county, Virginia, May, 1763, being the youngest of four children, before mentioned. Although a boy at the breaking out of the Revolution, being only 13 years old, he enlisted in the army in 1778, at the age of 16, and was actively engaged until the close of the war, doing much military service, and actively participated in the battles of Guilford Court House and Yorktown. We have no record of his life between the close of the war and the date of his marriage, an interval of seven years. He died 1816.

In 1790 Anthony Dibrell married Miss Wilmuth Watson, of Amherst county, Virginia, daughter of James Watson of that county. For about a year the young couple remained in Amherst, where the first child, Charles Lee Dibrell, was born, after which, Anthony with his young wife, just 16 years old, returned to his native county of Buckingham. To this couple were born 13 children, six sons and seven daughters, as follows:

Charles Lee, born October 3, 1791; James Watson, February 9, 1793; Edward, born September 19, 1794; Elizabeth Nicholas, born March 16, 1798; Martha Rookings, December, 1799; Leeanna, October 2, 1801; Francis Watson, born June 18, 1803; Anthony, born August 19, 1805; Judith Ann, born June 26, 1807; Catherine, born July 15, 1809; Wilmuth Watson, born May 20, 1811; Matthew Watson, born October 22, 1813; Collins died in infancy.

Following is a brief record of the boy career of Anthony Dibrell as a Revolutionary soldier, and as brief as it is it contains volumes when the dates are considered. It will be considered that he was born in 1763, and his first enlistment being in 1778, he was only 15 years old, and was only 19 years old when Cornwallis surrendered.

As the result of a correspondence with the War and Interior Department, I received the following from the Commissioner of Pensions.

"Department of Interior, Washington, D. C., April 26, 1892.

"Sir: In reply to your request for a statement of the military history of Anthony Dibrell, a soldier in the Revolutionary war. You will please find below the desired information as contained in application for Pension, on file in this bureau, by his widow.

"He enlisted twice, 1778 and 1781, and was a private in Captain John Mosely's company, and his regimental commanders at different times, were Colonel John Cabell and Colonel John Harper.

"The last service is not clearly stated and may have been more than one enlistment. He was engaged in removing stores and was in North Carolina part of the time.

"He was engaged in the battle of Guilford Court House, and at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

"His residence at the time of enlistment was Amherst county, Virginia.

"Remarks: Widow's maiden name was Wilmuth Watson to whom the soldier was married in November, 1790.

"Very respectfully,

"D. D. MURPHY,

"Acting Commissioner."

From the sworn statement of David Patterson, John Thomas and others on file in the Pension office, Anthony Dibrell served three months under Captain John Mosely of Buckingham county, Virginia, at Albemarle Barracks, as a lieutenant or ensign guarding prisoners taken at the defeat of Burgoyne at Still Water in the State of New York. This service begun in February, 1778, before Anthony had completed his fifteenth year.

John Thomas of Buckingham county, made oath that he was a captain in Colonel Taylor's regiment of guards at Albemarle Barracks, and at the expiration of that service which was three months, "I made out the pay roll for Captain Mosely myself."

David Patterson and John Patterson, both of Buckingham county, Virginia, made oath that in addition to the foregoing service, "Anthony Dibrell and many others were ordered by Colonel John Cabell to remove the military stores from Scott's Ferry to New London, Bedford county, Virginia, and that he was also sent to Cumberland Courthouse, Pr. Edward, and Louisa counties to meet the enemy. Further; that said Anthony marched from the county of Buckingham early in the month of February, 1781, to the State of North Carolina and was in the battle of Guilford Court House, March 15, 1781; that he continued in General Green's army some time after the battle of Guilford. I also distinctly remember that in the month of September, 1781, the said Anthony Dibrell went to Yorktown, where he remained until the surrender of Lord Cornwallis and the British army."

It is a matter of family history related by Anthony Dibrell to his sons and many friends, that he was brought off the battlefield of Guilford, wounded or exhausted, by the celebrated Peter Francisco.

Peter Francisco was doubtless one of the most celebrated private soldiers of the Revolutionary war. His antecedents are unknown and were doubtless very little known to himself. He was, however, believed to be of Portuguese origin, and was a protege of Judge Edmund Winston, of Buckingham county, Virginia.

This incident of Francisco in connection with Anthony Dibrell gives the author an opportunity, as it is also a pleasure, to make a brief reference to this grand old hero, who seems to have almost passed out of history, and indeed to have been lost to memory. This phenomenal character and brave patriot seems to have been specially fitted for the age in which he lived, and to have filled a niche which, but for him, would have remained a vacuum. A reference to Peter Francisco at this point is by no means a digression from the history of Anthony Dibrell; it will be remembered that Judge Edmond Winston and the first Anthony Dibrell lived in the same county, attended the same court, and were on terms, not only of friendship, but intimacy. Peter Francisco was a protege of Judge Winston, and young Anthony the boy soldier, not fifteen years old when he left the paternal roof in defense of his country, was a son of Judge Winston's special friend. Anthony, a mere strippling, strong alone in a brave heart and unswerving patriotism, Francisco fully developed, of wonderful physical ability and herculean strength, it was to be expected that young Dibrell, as far as could be among soldiers, should be the special charge of Peter Francisco.

Owing to his wonderful prowess, dauntless courage, and superhuman strength, Francisco was allowed by his commanding officers to play the part of a "Free Lance." He was indeed an independent command, solitary and alone by himself. Wherever he went he crippled the enemy and his blows were of the more telling than those of a whole regiment. The sword that he wielded could not be handled by an ordinary man, and its length was such, that, single handed he was invincible, and he often proved an overmatch for two or three. Frequently overpowered by numbers and captured, he invariably escaped, and the theory that two armed men are sufficient to guard one man who is not armed, in his case, was contradicted, for on more than one occasion he disarmed one, killed the other, and walked away free.

On the return of peace Peter Francisco returned to his home, the old Winston homestead, one mile east of the New Store, a village in Buckingham county, Virginia, situated on the old stage thoroughfare between Lynchburg and Richmond. He was as remarkable in peace as he was in war. As a soldier he loved to fight, as a citizen he was not only peaceable, but a "peacemaker." Among the many anecdotes related of Francisco is that of a man who was ignorant of his character and who had become offended with him. This man in his haste and heat of passion, early one morning before breakfast, hastened to Francisco's home to demand satisfaction. The mansion and its surroundings like most residences of that period of Virginia history, had very spacious grounds. The house set back from the main thoroughfare nearly a hundred yards, while the inner inclosure gave ample space for a smaller yard. The irate visitor had ridden inside the larger inclosure and called Francisco out, who employed every possible means to pacify his visitor, enticing him away from the house in the meantime, so as to avoid disturbing the family. When they had gotten to the outside inclosure and all pacific means had failed Francisco took his visitor at arm's length and lifted him from his horse and set him over the fence. Bewildered at the way in which he had been handled, in his amazement, he stood silent for a few moments, then told Francisco if he would hand him over his horse he would go home; with some assistance from the horse he was landed on the same side of the fence with his rider, and the difficulty was settled.

Peter Francisco married a widow West (whether he had previously married is not known), and so far as is known he left no children. One of his stepsons, John William West, formerly of Buckingham county, Virginia, and afterwards of Bedford, was personally known to the author. From this source much information has been obtained of the life and character of this Revolutionary patriot. Mr. West always spoke in the most affectionate terms of his stepfather.

Late in life he was appointed sergeant-at-arms to the Virginia House of Delegates, in which position he remained until his death in 1836. He was buried with military honors in the public cemetery at Richmond, Virginia, and thus he continued in death as he had been in life, "guest of the State."

There is little known of the history of Anthony Dibrell after the close of the Revolution, as his life subsequent to that time was strictly that of a private citizen. We have no record of him from 1781, until 1790, at which time, as we have before seen, he married Miss Wilmuth Watson of Amherst county, Virginia, and during the short life that he spent thereafter in agricultural pursuits, he transferred to a large family of children the duties and privileges of perpetuating family history. He died in 1816, aged 53 years.

4 CHARLES LEE DIBRELL.

Charles Lee Dibrell was the oldest son of Anthony Dibrell and Wilmuth Watson. He was born October 3, 1791, in Amherst county, Virginia and was raised in Buckingham to which county his father returned soon after his marriage. Here he was educated and spent the first few years of his early manhood. About 1820 he commenced business in Lynchburg, Virginia, where he was quite successful as a merchant and large operator in the tobacco trade, and in 1823 married Miss Mary Jane Lambeth of Campbell county, Virginia. About 1835 Mr. Dibrell purchased a popular watering place as a summer resort in Botetourt county, Virginia, which had been previously owned by a German by the name of Dagguer, and hence known as Dagguer's Spring, but after the property was purchased by Mr. Dibrell they became known as Dibrell's Springs, which name they still retain. These springs are about sixty-five miles west of Lynchburg, near James river and the Richmond and Allegheny railroad which has been recently built; and it was here for about ten years, at this beautiful mountain resort, hedged in by peaks on every side, a bold and beautiful sulphur spring, gushing from the base of Garden Mountain, that Mr. Dibrell entertained from lower Virginia, and States farther south and north those who were in search of health among the mountains. Among the distinguished visitors at Dibrell Springs, I have often heard Mr. Dibrell describe in his own language, the visit of Van Buren and party, in 1838, which was quite an event in those days, when a trip from Washington to Virginia Springs would require as much time as it would now to visit the Valley of the Congo.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Having acquired interests in the Warm Springs of Bath county, Virginia, and subsequently in Richmond, he sold Dibrell Springs in 1842, and after spending one season at the Warm Springs, he opened the Powhattan House in Richmond, Virginia. This house was located on Broad street adjacent to Capitol square, and owing to its surroundings, its location was one of the most desirable in the city, but owing to gross mismanagement, however, it had been allowed to fall into disrepute. Under the management of Mr. Dibrell the Powhattan House was restored to its former prestige and became again one of the leading hotels of Richmond.

Having spent five years in Richmond as proprietor of the Powhattan, he returned to Lynchburg, where he first commenced his business career, and it is a very singular coincidence that, after an eventful business life running through more than thirty years, and at different localities, several hundred miles apart, he should have closed active business life at the same place that he begun it.

In 1847 Mr. Dibrell took possession of one of the best known houses in Lynchburg, which had been kept by the venerable Robert Morris, who belonged to a preceding generation, and subsequently by Paul Jones, who died in Atlanta in 1876. It is said to have been in this house that the gifted and erratic Maj. Tom Rudd, for many years the representative from Campbell in the Legislature, sang "Show pity, Lord" when the stars fell in 1833. This house was opened under the name of Dibrell's Hotel, and it is yet a landmark in Lynchburg, though it has ceased to be a hotel for more than forty years.

It was at this house that a new epoch in Mr. Dibrell's life took place. On the 23d of December, 1850, Mary Jane Dibrell, consort of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell, breathed her last. It is not too much to say that she was the mainspring of Mr. Dibrell's life; she was in the habit of saying jocularly, that she had kept him alive for thirty years, and in this there was more truth than poetry. There is no doubt that she was indispensable to his vitality, and in her death he not only lost his right arm, but lost the vital force which gave activity to his very being.

Mrs. Dibrell was a woman of rare characteristics, possessing at one and the same time the most tender, affectionate and womanly traits, and yet the rare power to command obedience and respect. Gen. John Echols of the Confederate army, who was afterwards vice president of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, was a nephew of Mrs. Dibrell, and from him it was my pleasure to hear the highest encomiums paid her character. As a culmination of what he had to say, "not even his own mother had been so true and disinterested in her friendship or had more to do in shaping the better traits of his character than Mrs. Dibrell."

In 1853 Mr. Dibrell retired from active business life, and in 1859 went to Texas. Two of his married sisters, Mrs. Simons and Mrs. Gary, settled in Texas in early life and raised their families there. The three surviving sons of Mr. Dibrell, Charles Lee, Jr., James Watson and John Meredith also cast their lots in the Lone Star State. Mr. Dibrell was not a stranger in Texas; as has been seen two of his sisters had preceded him and their families had grown up with the country, while three of his sons were already there. Sam Houston a native of Rockbridge county, Virginia, who was afterwards governor of Tennessee, the leader in the Texas struggle for independence and hero of San Jacinto, was governor of Texas, at that time.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

Houston was an old personal friend of Mr. Dibrell of bygone days and welcomed him, as it were, with open arms, and gave him an appointment in the State Department. At the close of the war, however, with Houston dead, and Texas in the hands of unscrupulous adventurers, Mr. Dibrell found himself without a position, and as almost all the southern people, without money.

In the dilemma above described, Mr. Dibrell instinctively turned his face eastward and sought the scenes of his early manhood. His older son had left Texas with the army and after the war had not returned, and his only surviving daughter was still a resident of Virginia. For a man of his age, then 74, and the country all torn up by the wreckage of war, this was no small undertaking. Fifteen hundred miles of travel over roads that had been torn up by military operations, and through a country that had not been restored to business methods, is indeed a task that would command all the strength and energy of a much younger man, but there is nothing that so buoys the human mind as the hope of returning to the scenes of its childhood.

About the first of October, 1865, Mr. Dibrell started upon this homeward journey, and in his enfeebled condition made the trip as it were, by relays. Coming first to Galveston, he rested for some time with his nephew, Mr. Thomas A. Gary, then with a desperate effort he came on to Huntsville, Alabama, where his relative Mrs. Moore, took charge of him and detained him for several weeks, thence he came on to Virginia, where with another nephew, Mr. Edward Echols of Balcony Falls, he remained some time.

It was at the house of Mr. Echols, twenty-eight miles from Lynchburg, at the point where James river passes through the Blue Ridge, that I found Mr. Dibrell on my way from Baltimore in January 1866. He was but a few miles from my home at that time, as I was merchandising at Buffalo Forge, in Rockbridge county, Virginia, but he was too feeble to travel. After resting a few days, however, Captain Echols brought him to my house in his carriage, but he did not survive many weeks after his arrival. Having accomplished the one object most dear to his heart, the return to the home of his childhood, the land he so much loved, and being surrounded by those who loved him most, being with two of his children, my wife and his oldest son, Charles Lee Dibrell, Jr., the latter having been left in Virginia by the war, it seemed that he regarded his mission as completed, and quietly passed away February, 1866, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. Owing to the difficulties in transportation, there being no railroad between that point and Lynchburg, the water-way being closed by ice, and the mountain roads impassable, it was impossible to carry out the wishes of his children, in taking his remains to Lynchburg, and he was therefore buried at Falling Springs Cemetery, ten miles from Lexington, Virginia, full in sight of the Blue Hills of his nativity, among which he delighted to roam in his boyhood days.

Charles Lee Dibrell, and his wife, Mary Jane Lambeth, had eleven children, four of whom died in infancy. Those who survived, were Lafayette, Elizabeth, Mary Jane, Frances Ann, Charles Lee, James Watson and John Meredith.

5 DR. LAFAYETTE DIBRELL.

Lafayette Dibrell was the oldest child of Charles Lee Dibrell and Mary Jane Lambeth. He was born in Lynchburg, Virginia, in 1824. The circumstance attending the visit of Gen. Lafayette to America about this time, bringing more vividly to mind the patriotic services of that officer in our struggle for independence, gave rise to the naming of many hundreds of children for him, and this accounts for the name of the oldest son of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell. Mr. Dibrell's father, the second Anthony Dibrell, had seen service with Lafayette, had been with him at Yorktown, and the name of the "Marquis De Lafayette," had been a household word in the Dibrell family for nearly half a century, and hence it is not strange that they should have perpetuated his name.

Lafayette Dibrell was principally educated in Richmond, Virginia, and was graduated from the Medical College of that city in the class of 1845, carrying off the honors of the institution. He was valedictorian of his class, and few men ever entered the medical profession with brighter prospects. In 1846 Dr. Dibrell married Sarah Ann Moseley of Buckingham county, Virginia, and established himself in the practice of medicine at Mount Vinco, in that county, but consumption had marked him for a victim and he was compelled to retire from the practice a few months after his marriage. Leaving Buckingham he came to Lynchburg and spent the last weeks of his life at his father's house, "Dibrell's Hotel." He was buried at the Presbyterian Cemetery in that city.

5 ELIZABETH DIBRELL.

Elizabeth was the oldest daughter of Charles Lee and Mary Lambeth Dibrell. She was born in New London, Virginia, March 23, 1833. Her early life was spent in Richmond, where her father resided for a number of years, and later in Lynchburg to which place he removed in 1847. She was a lady of rare gifts and attainments, with a disposition at once attractive and lovely, but like her older brother, Dr. Lafayette Dibrell, consumption had set its seal upon her early life, and after battling with the fell disease for twelve years, she finally fell a victim to it in the summer of 1862, in the twenty-ninth year of her age.

Being the oldest daughter at the time of her mother's death, she became in every essential sense of the word, a mother to her younger brothers, and was to them indeed everything that a mother could be. She was not so situated that she could have them at all times with her, but she saw to it that they always had a mother's care and attention. For five or six years previous to her death, and up to within a few months of that sad event, she had been engaged in teaching both academics and music, and it is rarely ever that one is found who gave such general satisfaction in this most difficult position, to both pupils and parents, and in many a Virginia family is to be found a "Lizzie Dibrell" in token of the ardent love and affection borne for her while living and in perpetuation of her memory after death.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

5. MARY JANE DIBRELL.

Mary Jane Dibrell was the second daughter of Charles Lee Dibrell and Mary Jane Lambeth. She was born March 11, 1835 at Dibrell's Springs, Botetourt county, Virginia. Her early childhood was spent at this place and in Richmond, and her early womanhood in Lynchburg, Virginia. Her early life was very bright and promising; beautiful, vivacious and intellectual, she was the center of attraction. It fell to the lot of but few to be so fortunately and advantageously situated as was Molly Dibrell, but, "all things sweet are fleeting, the sweetest still the fleetest," and thus it was in the life of Molly Dibrell. To one without philosophy, and to whom religious thought was a stranger, it would have seemed that "unmerciful disaster had followed fast and followed faster" upon her footsteps, and to one to whom philosophical training and religious conceptions had not been the predominant feature of life, her song might have been like that of Poe, and her hope might have been one melancholy dirge. But Molly Dibrell was of a very different cast of mind from that of Edgar Allen Poe; she was no less poetical, but much less erratic. She was imaginative but not a victim of vagaries. While Poe dreamed of a "Distant Aiden where he should clasp a radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore," she had a sure anchor of hope that she would in a "Distant Aiden" meet and clasp all of her loved and lost, and above all meet him who had redeemed and saved her. As confidently and as hopeful as she looked upon the hereafter, life was bright and beautiful to her. Bereft of her mother at a very tender age, and seeing a delightful household scattered as a consequence, hers was a religion that repined not at adverse conditions, but wrested victory from defeat, and enabled her in the darkest hours, to see by faith the silver lining of the cloud which for a moment obscured her vision. She died in the autumn of 1856. For some time previous to her death she had been betrothed to a Lynchburg gentleman, prominent in business and social circles, who at the time of her death was absent in New York, in the interest of his firm. I know that the cold world cannot understand and does not appreciate, such devotion, and will give a smile of incredulity at the bare mention of the fact, but it is nevertheless true that this gentleman never left his room after returning home and learning of her death, until he was carried to his grave.

5. CHARLES LEE DIBRELL, Jr.

Charles Lee Dibrell, Jr., was the second son of Charles Lee Dibrell, Sr. He was born the 19th of July, 1840, at Dibrell's Springs in Botetourt county, Virginia. His early childhood was spent in Richmond, and later in Lynchburg. His early education was obtained in these cities. After the death of his mother, and the retirement of his father from business, he obtained a position in Blacksburg, Montgomery county, and afterwards in Christiansburg, the county site. In 1859 he turned his face to the southwest and cast, as he believed, his fortune, in the "Lone Star State," entering active business life in mercantile pursuits, but the rude hand of war was destined to change all of his plans, and before he had become well settled in his new home, the bugle blast called him to the field. As Virginia was destined to be the battleground between the sections, the Southern troops were hastened forward to the front, and Mr. Dibrell, with what was afterwards known as the Fourth Texas Regiment, under command of the gallant John B. Hood, contrary to all his preconceived ideas or plans, found himself back in Virginia.

During 1861, and until the latter part of 1862, Mr. Dibrell followed the fortunes of the Fourth Texas Regiment, anxious for the fray and fearful, lest the war would be over before they reached Virginia. They were permitted to know very soon something of its realities, and before a year had passed they were fully convinced that they had not been slighted by the authorities, but that they had been allowed a full participation in passing events, indeed, to their entire satisfaction. In the series of battles from June 26th to July 2d, inclusive, Mr. Dibrell's regiment was constantly engaged; its Maj. Bradfute Warwick was killed, Captain Bain commanding his company was severely wounded, and, indeed, the entire regiment, under command of the brave but reckless Hood, was cut to pieces.

After this series of battles had been fought and the siege of Richmond raised, Mr. Dibrell's military services underwent a change. His captain who was severely wounded was taken to the house of Mr. Edwin Dibrell, an uncle of Mr. Charles Dibrell, and the latter detailed to attend him. The operations of the army were changed in another direction, and the main body under Gen. Lee proceeded north by way of Burkville, Orange Courthouse and Culpepper to meet Gen. Pope who had started on another "on to Richmond," by the same route that McDowell first undertook.

Mr. Dibrell obtained a transfer from the Fourth Texas Regiment to the Partizan Rangers under command of "Harry Gilmer," and during the years 1863, 1864, 1865, to the close of the war, was in all of the partisan warfare of Northern Virginia, the operations of which frequently extended into Maryland and Pennsylvania, and more than once under the very spires of Washington City. He was with the Southern troops at Magnolia Station, on the P. W. & B. road between Baltimore and Philadelphia, in 1864 when Gen. Patterson was captured. He was with the army at the burning of Chambersburg, and the entire detachment under command of Gen. Bradley T. Johnson barely escaped capture from the pursuit of Averill's cavalry which followed. The Federal cavalry continued to pursue and harass the Confederates through the valleys of Virginia, when at Mount Jackson bridge the Confederates took a stand and gave battle repulsing the Federals, and gaining time by this means to fall back in better order. It was at this engagement that Mr. Dibrell was severely injured, having received a gunshot wound through the lungs. Maj. Gilmer carried Mr. Dibrell to the nearest farmhouse on his own horse and under his immediate supervision, not knowing but that he was leaving him with strangers. He requested that special care and attention be given him at his own expense, and that the enemy be warned, should they advance, that whatever treatment was meted to Dibrell would be received by their prisoners which had fallen into his hands. As a matter of fact, however, the enemy did not advance; they had gotten enough in their engagement at Mount Jackson Bridge.

Major Harry Gilmer was very fond of Mr. Dibrell who came up to the full measure of his idea of a dashing cavalry officer, and at no time did he fail to give full expression of his appreciation. His charge, however, to the people in whose hands he left Mr. Dibrell, was needless, though Maj. Gilmer was not aware of this. Mount Airy is the most celebrated body of land in the Shenandoah valley, embracing a thousand acres of bottom land in one body on the Shenandoah river seventy-two miles northeast of Staunton. On an elevation overlooking this vast estate and at the base of Massanuttin mountain was the palatial home of John G. Meem of Lynchburg, Virginia, whose son, Gen. Gilbert Meem married a sister of General Jordan who was chief of Gen. Beauregard's staff. At the time spoken of Mount Airy was occupied by the family of Gen. Meem, while the wife and sister of Gen. Jordan, were among the visitors at the home. These were all intimate friends of the Dibrell family in Lynchburg, Virginia, and Mr. Dibrell so far as being left among strangers was in the house of his friends. There was no surgeon at hand nor was there any doctor nearer than five miles across Massanuttin mountain. The battle occurred after eight o'clock at night in December, 1864, and by the time Mr. Dibrell had been carried to Mount Airy, it was after ten o'clock at night. Notwithstanding the hour of night, nor the fact that the thermometer was hovering around zero in this mountain pass, Miss Betty Jordan and Kate Riley of Winchester, crossed the mountain having to wade several swollen streams to get a doctor to attend Mr. Dibrell. This is only another instance of the self-sacrificing devotion of Southern women when the needs of the Southern soldier required it. Mr. Dibrell recovered from his wounds in time to return to his post before the collapse of the Confederacy. When the surrender took place he was in the mountains of Virginia very far removed from the base of operation and therefore he did not hasten to some nearby headquarters to obtain a parole or to seek the benefits of amnesty, but like Jubal Early, Bob Toombs and a few others, he enjoyed while living the rare distinction of "never having surrendered."

After the close of the war Mr. Dibrell returned to his friends in Campbell county, Virginia, who were delighted at the privilege of having him back alive. In 1871 Mr. Dibrell formed an association with the Pullman Palace Car Company, and was assistant superintendent of the lines between Lynchburg and Vicksburg, and was subsequently assistant superintendent and receiving cashier for that company at New Orleans. Subsequently Mr. Dibrell was general southern agent for the Richmond & Danville railroad, with headquarters at Augusta, Georgia, and it may be said that this was the turning point in the life of Mr. Dibrell. It is proper to say, however, in this connection, that no single individual in the soldier life or in the discharge of the duties thereof, ever commanded a higher regard from his superior officers than did Mr. Dibrell. Major Harry Gilmer, in his account of his military operations in the valley of Virginia and elsewhere, pays him the highest commendation for gallant services.

In 1878, Charles Lee Dibrell, Jr., married Sally Lou, daughter of the Hon. Henry Russell of Augusta, Georgia. They have only one child, a daughter, Mary Lee Dibrell, a bright and beautiful young lady of about sixteen years, who is now nearing graduation in the Nashville schools.

For a number of years Mr. Dibrell was connected with the Southern Express Company at Augusta, Georgia, of which he was auditor up to the time of his death, with headquarters temporarily at Memphis but afterwards at Chattanooga. He died October, 1895, and was buried in the Russell burying ground in Augusta, Georgia.

MISS SALLY R. DIBRELL.

Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell, Jr., married Sally Russell of Augusta, Georgia, November, 1878. Miss Russell was a daughter of Mr. Henry Russell, one of the most prominent citizens of that city, who was at one time its mayor, and at all times a leader in its affairs. Miss Russell was one of a large family of daughters noted for their beauty and accomplishments. One of the sisters married Mr. Gregg Wright, son of Gen. Wright of the Confederate army, and up to the time of his death was editor of the Augusta Chronicle; and the older daughter married Col. E. W. Cole of Nashville, Tennessee, one of the leading railroad magnates of his day who was withal a capitalist who engaged in the largest ventures; possessed of a fine executive ability and of a large fortune, he was a recognized leader in financial affairs. Some of the most important railroad schemes were worked out as a result of his rare abilities. The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis system as also the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia, it may be said, were his handiwork. He was president of both of those companies.

Col. Cole was twice married. By the first marriage he left descendants and by the second marriage with Miss Russell he had two children, a son and a daughter. The son, Mr. Whiteford Russell Cole, is a young business man of Nashville, he has recently married and has bright prospects before him; and a daughter, Miss Anna Cole, who is just blooming into womanhood.

RUSSELL.

It is proper that I should briefly note at this point a sketch of the Russell family. I do this for several reasons. First, it is a family that has made its mark and left its impress upon the times covering the period of its history; second, its individual members have led lives and played a part which entitle them to special notice; and, third, it is a family to which Mr. Dibrell was specially endeared, and which entertained for him the highest appreciation.

The Hon. Henry Russell, as has been before stated, was a landmark in the history of Augusta. He was not a politician by profession or even by preference, but drawn into the maelstrom by the force of circumstances and what was believed to be the best interest of the city, he accepted the situation, and without being sullied in the dirty stream, he did much to rectify and overcome the practices which render politics odious.

Mr. Russell very early in life married Martha Danforth, and commenced business in Augusta, Georgia, as cotton factor. They had but two sons, William and James. William married Miss Fullen of Lagrange, he fell into bad health early in life and was compelled to retire from business. James for a long time associated with his father in the cotton business, subsequently removed to Atlanta where he has been engaged as commission merchant for ten or twelve years. He resides with his family on West North avenue in Atlanta. One son, and a beautiful and accomplished daughter, contribute to the happiness of the household.

I omitted to mention the name of their oldest son, who had been so long dead that he had passed for the time out of my memory.

Maj. Whiteford Russell, oldest son of Hon. Henry Russell and Martha Danforth, married in early life, and when the war between the States broke out, leaving a young wife and two small girl children, he marched to the front and into the thickest of the fight. He was killed in one of the early engagements leaving a widow and two little children.

Mr. Henry Russell left seven daughters, all of whom were estimable and accomplished. They were social leaders in Augusta society, and their father's house might be said to have been headquarters for social gatherings. Their oldest daughter married Col. Cole of Nashville, another married Mr. Gregg Wright of the Augusta Chronicle. The third daughter Ella Russell, was perhaps the best married young lady of her age and generation, having been wooed and won by a young Hebrew banker, prominent in social and financial circles by the name of Cohen. The parents of both parties opposed the union, hence they took matters into their own hands, and crossed the river into South Carolina where they were married by a justice of the peace, and when they had returned to the home of the bridegroom's father, it was ascertained that the proceeding did not meet the approval of the old Hebrew, hence they were conducted down to the Synagogue where the marriage ceremony was performed by the Rabbi; then returning to the home of the bride's father it was found that neither of preceding marriages met his approval, and in true Methodist style they were accompanied by their friends to St. John's Church where they were married by a Methodist preacher in accordance with the regulations of the church. By this time the young people had gotten somewhat used to getting married, and doubtless settled down to the belief that they were well married. They have spent their married life in Augusta, Georgia, where they have reared a large and interesting family.

The marriage of Miss Sallie Lou Russell to Charles Lee Dibrell, Jr., has already been noted.

Another daughter, Miss Nodie Russell, married, first, a Mr. Davies, and, second, a Mr. Hammond; they reside in Augusta.

The youngest daughter, Miss Irene Russell, while traveling in Europe met among the Alps an adventurous young man of wealth and position by the name of Washburn, from Chicago. It is not known whether this was a case of love at first sight, but be this as it may, their acquaintance and friendship at least ripened into love, and upon the return home to America, they were married. One little boy has blessed their union, and it does by no means overdraw the subject to say that they give every evidence of a happy life.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

as follows: William, John, Harding, Howell, Nicholas, and Zachary, and Mr. Zachary Lewis of Nelson county, Virginia, furnishes me with the name of an additional son, Robert, and a daughter, Sally.

5 William Lewis, oldest son of Owen Lewis, born between 1775 and 1780, married about 1800, Miss Elizabeth Lee Patterson, daughter of David Patterson and his wife Judith Dibrell of Buckingham county, Virginia, by which marriage he had three daughters: Judith Dibrell, Sarah, and Elizabeth Lee; and by a second marriage, with Mrs. Glover, he had three other daughters: Susan, who married a Mr. Hooker; Mary, who married a Harris; and Caryann, who married a Mr. Christian. He had no sons by either marriage. The three first named daughters of William Lewis and Miss Patterson, Judith, Sarah, and Elizabeth, married, respectively, Edward H. Moseley of Buckingham, a Mr. Morris, and Mr. Thomas of Nelson county, Virginia; of the descendants of the two latter nothing is definitely known.

6 Judith Dibrell Lewis, daughter of William Lewis and Elizabeth Lee Patterson, married Edward H. Moseley of Buckingham county, Virginia, about 1825. The issue of this marriage was three daughters and no sons. Their daughters were: Mary Elizabeth, Sarah Ann Lewis, and Virginia Edward.

7 Mary Elizabeth Moseley, daughter of Edward Moseley and his wife Judith Dibrell Lewis, born 1826, married Reverend Thomas N. Johnson, one of the most distinguished Baptist ministers in Virginia, who for more than half a century, was in the forefront of his profession and filled some of the most important stations within the bounds of the state. They had five children: Sarah Louisa, Thomas Edward, Ella, Lafayette Dibrell, and Mary Lewis.

8 Sarah Louisa Johnson, daughter of Rev. Thomas N. Johnson and Mary Elizabeth Moseley, married Rev. William Shipman of Nelson county, Virginia, a gentleman of fine family and high standing, both as a man and a minister, having filled some of the most important stations in the State, having been stationed at one time at Richmond.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

9 Rev. Thomas Johnson Shipman, oldest son of Rev. William Shipman and Sarah Louisa Johnson, is yet quite a young man, only recently married. He has been called to appointments in Virginia and Kentucky, and has also served a charge in Savannah, Georgia. He is a young man of rare ability and promise, and is in demand with Baptist congregations.

7 Sarah Ann Lewis Moseley, daughter of Edward Moseley and Judith Dibrell Lewis, married first, Dr. Lafayette Dibrell, oldest son of Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell, then of Richmond, but afterwards of Lynchburg, Virginia. Doctor Dibrell was a young man of rare attainments and deep piety. He had graduated with distinction in his chosen profession, and gave promise of a brilliant success, but consumption had fastened itself upon him and claimed him as its victim. He lived only eight months after his marriage. He died in Lynchburg, Virginia, February 1847, aged 24 years. He left no issue. After the death of Doctor Dibrell his widow married Mr. John Abraham of Buckingham county, Virginia, but moved soon thereafter to Rockbridge county, near the Rockbridge Alum Springs. Mr. Abraham was a man of high character and sterling qualities, and of him it may be said that the world, so far as he come in contact with it, was the better by his having lived in it. One son was the issue of this marriage, Wyckliffe Yancy Abraham, born about 1850.

About 1880, Sarah Ann Moseley was left a widow a second time and in the long interval, has followed her son, for the most part, in his various homes as Baptist minister, and now still lives at the advanced age of 77 years, in Richmond, Virginia.

8 Rev. Wyckliffe Yancy Abraham married Miss Anna Broadus, daughter of Rev. John A. Broadus, formerly of Virginia, but for a long time, and up to his death, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, located first at Greenville, South Carolina, but subsequently removed to Louisville, Kentucky. Two children blessed this union: John Abraham, now married and doing business in St. Louis, Missouri, and Annie Louise who is about 12 years old and at school in Richmond, Virginia. Mrs. Abraham died about 1895; and the Rev. Mr. Abraham died 1903.

7 Virginia Edward Mosely, youngest daughter of Edward Mosely and Judith Lewis, married Mr. John Armstrong of Rockbridge county, Virginia. Issue: William Mosely Armstrong, Alexander Lewis Armstrong, Percy Stanly Armstrong, Lelia Jordan Armstrong, Sallie Ann Armstrong. Mrs. Armstrong when a young lady possessed rare beauty and was very much admired and very much courted. I remember seeing her at home, Goshen, Virginia, soon after she was married, when she was indeed a picture for a painter; having been left a widow she removed to Staunton, Virginia, about 1885; where she spent the remainder of her days. She died soon thereafter.

Judge Hocker married a Miss Venable of Virginia, and his oldest son, Wm. Hocker, Jr., graduated in the law class of 1894 at the University of Virginia.

A daughter of Mrs. Susan (Lewis) Hocker married Howell Venable of Virginia. He also removed to Florida.

5 Zachary Lewis, son of Owen Lewis, and grandson of Planter John Lewis of Albemarle, was born about 1780. His name first appears on the record of Albemarle February 6, 1804, as one of the Executors of the will of his uncle John Lewis. The perpetuation of the name Zachary in this family is sufficient proof of the line to which they belong and if this was not sufficient proof of itself, the perpetuation of the name in other branches would be sufficient corroboration. Mary, daughter of Planter John Lewis, who married a Neville, named her oldest son "Zachary Lewis Neville." The fact that Planter John did not perpetuate the name is doubtless owing to his having only two sons. The older named after himself, and the other, Owen, no doubt, after his father; but as we have seen, the name was very promptly revived and has been very faithfully perpetuated by his descendants.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Zachary Lewis, the subject of this sketch, married Sallie Patterson of Buckingham county, Virginia, and sister of Elizabeth Lee Patterson who married William Lewis an older brother. These sisters were granddaughters of the first Anthony Dibrell and Elizabeth Lee, and will be more fully noticed under the head of the Dibrell family.

5 Zachary Lewis and his wife Sallie Patterson had six children as follows: Agnes Lewis, Sarah Lewis, John Lewis, David Lewis, Leannah Lewis Zachary Lewis. Nothing is known of any except John and Zachary, and very little is known of them, although there are many of the name and kin that can not be traced, but it is to be hoped that information contained in these sketches will enable others to trace their lines.

6 Zachary R. Lewis, fourth in line from Planter John Lewis, is the youngest child of Zachary Lewis and Sallie Patterson. In a letter to me about twelve years ago (1893) he said: "My mother died when I was a baby and I am now 76 years old." No doubt he has been gathered to his father's ere this. On account of his advanced age he has ceased to write. This letter was an answer to my inquiries in regard to his branch of the family, and gave more information than I have been able to obtain from all other sources. I have also had very interesting and valuable letters from his youngest daughter, Miss Mary Lewis, who has been especially kind in answering my letters. The latest that I had from her was a "Richmond State" containing an account of her marriage to Mr. W. D. Patterson, no doubt a relative. Mr. Patterson is a member of one of the leading law firms of Scottsville, Virginia.

6 Mr. Lewis married Miss Mary Garth of Albemarle, one of the wealthiest families of that county. Issue: Howell Lewis, William Lewis, Zachary Lewis, John, Sallie, Mary and Henry Lewis. Their postoffice address is Howardsville, Nelson county, Virginia.

6 John Owen Lewis, son of Zachary Lewis and Sallie Patterson, and hence brother of the last named Zachary, married twice and left ten children. This much we learned in a general way from his brother, but we have not been able to obtain any thing definite, either in regard to his marriages or his descendants. It is to be hoped, however, that this reference will meet the eye of some of them, and serve the purpose, at least, of directing their attention to their ancient and honorable as well as distinguished ancestry.

JOHN LEWIS OF HENRICO.

This is another distinct head of the Lewis families in Virginia, and is so distinctively designated. Every circumstance by which he was surrounded goes to show that he had no connection, or even intimate association with any of the name who came to Virginia in the seventeenth century, or with Irish John Lewis who came later. This John Lewis first appears on the records of Henrico in 1660 and, as subsequent events show, was quite a young man at that time; therefore he could not have been a brother of Robert of Gloucester who was more than forty years older, nor could he have been a son, as Robert's son, John, his marriage and descendants, are fully accounted for; So is John the brother of Zachary and John, of Hanover, while Irish John is too remote to be taken into consideration.

Whatever may be said of the identity of the different branches of the Lewis family, or of their relationship, one thing is certain: so far as their American history is concerned, there is no means of tracing this identity or of establishing the relationship. Nearly one hundred years intervened between the arrival of General Robert Lewis and Irish John, while the arrivals of the other occurred at such intervals, as to preclude the idea of identity of interest or concert of action on the part of any of them.

It is a generally conceded fact, or at least, proposition, that all of them sprung from the same stock, but this doubtless had its foundation in a generally accepted tradition, but while tradition is valuable to the extent that it gives rise to inquiry and investigation; with no confirmation of this tradition, we shall continue, as we have started out, to treat them separately.

However distinct these respective families or their respective heads may have been when they first set out on their American life, or how long they may have remained so after settling down in their new homes, it is nevertheless true that, in the lapse of time, the intermarriages between the respective branches have been so numerous as to largely merge them into each other.

John Lewis of Henrico seems to have been entirely lost sight of not only by other genealogists, but by his own descendants. Like "Planter" John Lewis of Albemarle, I claim "John of Henrico" by right of discovery, for I virtually dug him out from among a mass of Henrico records where he had been lost to his own posterity for more than one hundred years. When in 1892, I was in search of Lewis history among the Virginia records, I very naturally, when in Richmond, repaired first to the rooms of the Secretary of the Virginia Historical Society. Doctor Brock, who was then secretary, and who had just spent years in reviving Virginia genealogies, and to some extent, made a specialty of the Lewis family, although his office was within six or eight squares of the Henrico Court House, where the clerk's office containing the records, was open to his inspection, did not know of the existence of this John Lewis. The records show, and the character and standing of his descents confirm, that John Lewis of Henrico was no obscure man in his day and generation. He died, however, at the age of forty-five in the prime of his usefulness. He is described on the records as being from Wales, and was therefore a direct emigrant.

The records of Henrico shows that the estate of John Lewis was finally wound up in 1689 and that his widow married a second time, hence, it follows that he died about 1686. They also show that he died intestate; that he left two children—son and daughter—William and Sarah; that Sarah was a minor at the time of her father's death and that her brother William qualified as her guardian in 1689; that the widow of John Lewis married a second time, Samuel Trottman in 1688, which no doubt accounts for William Lewis qualifying as his sister's guardian in 1689. Nothing further is known of the widow of this John Lewis, or of his minor daughter Sarah, as they appear no more on the records.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

2 William Lewis, only son of John Lewis of Henrico, was born 1660, as shown by a deposition made by him in 1679 in which he describes himself as nineteen years old and as shown by his nuncupative will, made December 24, 1706, and proven May 1, 1707, upon the evidence of George Payne and Elizabeth Johnson. He died December 25, 1706.

"NUNCUPATIVE WILL OF WILLIAM LEWIS.

"At a court held at Varna for ye County of Henrico. The first day of May, 1707. Present Her Majesty's Justices:

"That upon ye 24th day of December in Ye year of our Lord 1706, Wm. Lewis did, lying very sick, but of perfect mind and memory, declare the manner and form of will in disposing of his worldly estate viz.: He allotted to his eldestson, John Lewis, the plantation whereon he lived, one hundred acres of land purchased of Wm. Porter, Jr., one hundred acres of land upon the north side of Whiteoak Swamp. He allotted to his two sons, William and Joseph Lewis, two hundred acres of land upon a place known by the name of the 'Runs,' with a parcel of land lying upon the 'Whiteoak swamp' and 'Deep Run' to be divided between them, but withall, would wish that his son John should have the privilege of carrying and keeping a stock of hogs and cattle, and of getting timber for his own use, upon the said William and Joseph's land lying upon the Whiteoak 'Swamp and Deep Run.'

"He disposed of all the residue of his estate to his wife, adding concerning his children, that they were her children as well as his, and for that reason doubted not but that she would do as well for them as he would do if in her place; therefore he would give nothing from her, but leave all to her disposal. The words or the same in effect, were declared and publicly spoken by the deceased the day and year abovewritten in the presence of George Payne and Elizabeth Johnson who are ready to evidence and testify the same if required, in behalf of the deceased's wife.

"Teste.

"JAMES COCKE,
"Clerk of Court."

Of the many "Quaint and Curious Volumes of Forgotten Lore," through which I have had to search in quest of genealogical information, this is the only specimen of its kind that has fallen under my observation. Nuncupative wills were recognized by the English law for hundreds of years, and as a matter of learning in the pursuit of the law, we have been familiar with them through a lifetime of literary pursuit, but this is the only one that I have even found on record.

This will shows that Wm. Lewis left three sons, John, William and Joseph, but while he may have left daughters to be provided for out of property left to his wife, no daughters are mentioned.

John Lewis, oldest son of Wm. Lewis, appears on the records of Goochland, but there is no record evidence that he married in that county. He disappears, however, from the records of Goochland and reappears at different times on the records of Loudon, Berkeley and the border counties of Maryland. His identity is unmistakable and the best evidence is that he married a daughter of Jacob Woodson of Goochland. He had a son Jacob and this Jacob Lewis had a son who was an officer in the Revolutionary army from Berkeley county, Virginia, or it is more than probable that Jacob himself was an officer in the army.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

3 William Lewis, the second son of Wm. Lewis and grandson of John of Henrico, had his residence in that county, while John and Joseph are shown to be residents of Goochland. It is not known whether the last two removed to Goochland, or were simply cut off from Henrico by the formation of Goochland, that county having been cut off from Henrico; most probable the latter. Nothing further is known of him than that he was the second son of William, Sr., and is found on the records of Henrico in the transfer of titles to lands. It is not known that he ever married, or if he did he left no descendants that are known.

3 Joseph Lewis, youngest son of William Lewis Sr. and grandson of John of Henrico, and his descendants have firmly planted him in the minds of posterity and in the history of the country. The will of Joseph Lewis, of record in Goochland county Virginia, 1783, shows that he had seven children. Three sons and four daughters as follows: John Lewis, William Lewis, Joseph Lewis, Elizabeth RoBards, Sarah Bedford, and Ann Moseley; and grandchildren named Cocke—Susan Cocke and James Cocke. It will be seen that all of his daughters had married and one had doubtless died. Of all of these children no definite trace of any of the descendants can be found, except one or two of John and Elizabeth RoBards.

4 John Lewis of Goochland, great-grandson of John Lewis of Henrico, and son of the above Joseph Lewis, born about 1735, married about 1755, Mildred Lewis, daughter of Robert Lewis of Belvoir, Albemarle county, Virginia, and is the Major John Lewis, mentioned in the will of Robert Lewis as "the husband of my daughter Mildred."

So completely had John Lewis of Henrico been lost to the Virginia genealogists that, notwithstanding, one of his great-granddaughters had married a member of the distinguished Cocke family and another a RoBards, two of the wealthiest and most influential families of Virginia all previous genealogists have utterly failed to locate Major John Lewis, who married Mildred of Belvoir. They persisted in claiming that he was a son of Zachary Lewis and Mary Waller, but when it was proven that this John had married Ann Lewis, another daughter of Robert of Belvoir, they turned us loose being compelled to give up the claim, and if they did not accept our solution, they at least withdrew their objections.

It was not because John of Henrico was not a man who was fully the peer of his fellows, nor because his descendants did not measure up to the full standard of their surroundings, but because the Gloucester family owing to a combination of circumstances, and an overpowering concentration of conditions, simply overshadowed all of the other Lewises. It is true there was no such thing as keeping them down, but whenever a Lewis did anything to attract attention of the public, or distinguished himself in any way in the departments of life, no one made any attempt to locate him, or stopped to ask any questions about him, but without making any inquiries, assigned him at once to the ranks of the Warner Hall family.

Whether Robert Lewis of Gloucester was an officer in the English army, with the rank of general, or not or whether he had a grant from the Crown for 33,333 1-3 acres of land such was his reputation, and such was the wealth, influence and success of his immediate, and many of his more remote descendants, in all of the departments of life, they, and the public generally were prepared to accept his reputation at face value; and when his grandson and Lawrence Washington had married the daughter of the speaker of the House of Burgeses and member of the Royal Council, and John Lewis had himself become a member of the Royal Council, the early history of Robert Lewis of Brecon, Wales, was readily accepted; and when his descendants became identified with Washington and Jefferson, and the leading men of the country generally, and indeed had become leaders themselves, all of the Lewises, if not swallowed up were, at least overshadowed by the Warner Hall family. It is true that many of the name in Virginia, who were in no way related to that family, or to each other, were equally distinguished in civil and military affairs, but the public did not stop to draw the distinction, and so the Virginia Lewises, were all bunched together under one general head.

Major John Lewis, son of Joseph Lewis of Goochland, was the great-grandson of John of Henrico, as shown by the records of that county and of Goochland. Robert Lewis of Belvoir mentions Major John Lewis in his will as "husband of my daughter Mildred," and I find him on the records of Albemarle with his wife Mildred, described as John Lewis of Goochland. The will of this John Lewis is of record in the county of Goochland, 1796. His wife had evidently died previously, as no wife is mentioned. He mentions three sons: John, William, and Joseph. William, however, had previously died. His daughters had all married previous to the making of the will and are as follows: Ann Mosely, Elizabeth Halsy, Mary Atkisson, and Sarah Mann.

We have no definite account of the descendants of Major John Lewis and Mildred of Belvoir. Enough, however, is known to establish the fact that, for the most part, they emigrated to Kentucky. Mr. Thomas M. Green is authority for the assertion that Joseph, their youngest son, removed to Kentucky and was the ancestor of Judge Joseph Lewis of the Supreme Court of that State. Mr. John Lewis RoBards of Hannibal, Missouri, confirms this statement.

Elizabeth Lewis, daughter of Joseph Lewis of Goochland and sister of John who married Mildred Lewis of Belvoir, married a RoBards as shown by her father's will.

Mr. John Lewis RoBards of Hannibal, Missouri, with whom I have corresponded, has given me much valuable information. From him I learn that Elizabeth Lewis, who was his great-grandmother, was married September 6, 1781, and that her husband, his great-grandfather, was William RoBards, Jr., and that the later generation of their family had chosen to employ a capital B in the second syllable of their name in order to preclude the possibility of its being confounded with "Roberts," which he considered commonplace, to say the least. From him I also learn that Captain George RoBards of the Revolutionary army was a son of Elizabeth Lewis RoBards, and was his grandfather. He also says that his grandmother was Elizabeth Barbour Sampson, daughter of Anne Sampson, so that it appears that Captain George RoBards of the Revolutionary army, married Elizabeth Barbour Sampson, and that all through this remarkable family, the most conclusive proof of the highest family alliances are to be found.

READE, WARNER, WASHINGTON.

The three names which head this page are taken up at this point in connection with the Lewis family of Warner Hall because of their intimate association with that family, and a short review of them is important to a better understanding of these associations.

The first clue to the English ancestry of George Reade was the fact, shown by several letters in the first volume, English Calendar Colonial State papers, that he had a brother, Robert Reade, who was private secretary to Sir Francis Windebank, secretary of State during the reign of Charles the first; from which it was ascertained that George Reade was a descendant of the Reades of Facombe in the county of Southampton.

Andrew Reade of Facombe married Miss —— Cook and had five sons; Henry, Robert, George, John, and Andrew, and four daughters, names not given.

Robert Reade, the second son of Andrew Reade and Miss Cook who lived at Lenkenholdt, married three times. His third wife was Mildred, daughter of Sir Thomas Windebank, of "Haines Hill," Parish of Hurst, Berkshire, who was clerk of the signet of Elizabeth and James.

George Reade, as is seen, was a grandson of Andrew Reade and Miss Cook and son of Robert Reade and Mildred Windebank. The will of Andrew Reade, grandfather of George Reade, bears date October 2, 1619, with a codicil November 15, 1621, and was proved October 24, 1623.

Robert Reade and Mildred Windeband had five sons: Andrew, William, Dr. Thomas, Robert who was secretary to his uncle, Sir Francis Windebank, and George who came to Virginia in 1637. Robert Reade's will was dated September 23, 1626.

George came to Virginia in 1637, and is mentioned several times in vol. 1, Calendar of Colonial State papers. He was a friend and adherent of Governor Harvey and secretary Kemp. Mr. Thomas M. Green of Danville, Kentucky, one of the best informed genealogists in the country, says of George Reade: "Among others of the younger sons of the English nobility who sought to improve their fortunes in the Colony of Virginia, was George Reade whose sole importance to history consisted in the fact that he was probably the first ancestor of General Washington who ventured to cross the Atlantic, and that it was from him that the first and greatest of Americans derived his given name. This George Reade was brother to Robert Reade who was private secretary to Sir Francis Windebank, secretary of State to the first Charles of England. The fact appears from letters written to him by Edward Norgate, dated from the king's army at Berwick, May 29, 1639, and published in the 'Life and Times of Charles the first,' and from several letters to him in Sarnsburg's Calendar of State papers, 1654-1660.

The exact year of Reade's departure from England is not known, but letters written by him in 1637 state that he was still at the governor's house, and that he had received many favors from him, from which it is clear that he had been in America some time previous to that. The governor referred to was John Harvey, and while Harvey's secretary (Richard Kemp) was absent in England, Reade was secretary of the Colony. And Harvey, either having been called to England or finding it to his interest to go without being called, went to England before Kemp's return; and, hence, during this interregnum, so to speak, Reade was acting governor of the colony and whether appointed by the Crown or not, he was recognized for the time. The histories of the times, loosely thrown together make no mention of Reade, but the data is amply sustained by the records and borne out by Hennings Statutes at large. George Reade was member of The House of Burgesses from James City county, 1649, and for York 1656, and member of King's Council from 1657 to 1671, or until his death. (Hennings Statutes at Large, vol. 1, pp. 358, 414, 421, 429, 432. He married Elizabeth Martian (pronounced Marchen), daughter of Captain Nicholas Martian, and had five children, four sons and one daughter: Robert Reade, Benjamin Reade, Francis Reade, Thomas Reade married Lucy Gwynn, Mildred Reade married Speaker Augustine Warner. George Reade, as has been seen, died in 1671 and his will was admitted to record at Yorktown in November of the same year.

Thomas Reade, youngest son of George Reade, married Lucy Gwynn, granddaughter of Col. Hugh Gwynn, left a large family of children, only six, however of whom are known to history: Col. Clement Reade, born January 1707; Thomas Reade, born 1697 died 1739; John Reade, born at Munster, in King and Queen; Lucy Reade, born 1701, married John Dixon; Mildred Reade, married Major Phillip Roots; Mary Reade married Mordica Throckmorton.

Colonel Clement Reade, or Read was born in Virginia, January 1, 1707. Was left an orphan before he was twelve years of age. John Robinson of King and Queen county, known as "President" Robinson, was his guardian and superintended his education, which was completed at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Virginia. He was given a legal education and qualified as an attorney in Brunswick, Goochland and Albemarle counties. On May 5, 1746, he was appointed clerk of Lunenburg county. The county had just been formed and he was the first clerk, which office he held until his death, seventeen years later. He was a member of the House of Burgesses from 1748 to 1758. He married Mary Hill, daughter of Wm. Hill and granddaughter of Governor Edmund Jennings, and they had eight children; five sons and three daughters. His eldest son Clement, Jr., was born in 1736. He married 1757, Mary Nash, eldest daughter of Judge John Nash, who was chairman of the Safety Committee.

Clement Read, Jr., and his wife, Mary Nash, had five children—Clement, who was a lieutenant in the Revolutionary Army, died in Richmond, Virginia, at the age of 21 years; Mary, who married Robert Bedford, moved west and died in 1803. John Nash who served under General Green at Guilford

Court House, Cowpens, etc, married three times—his first wife, Elizabeth Julia Spencer, first cousin to President Jefferson, eldest daughter of Sion and Mary Spencer. By this marriage he had twelve children, nine of whom died early in life. His son, Sion Spencer, married 1819, Hardenia Spencer and had eight children, four of whom died without issue. His daughter Laura married Harrison Barksdale of Yazoo City, Mississippi, and had a large family. His son, John Thomas, married Laurena Caroline Rankin, daughter of David Rankin of Jasper, Tennessee, and had five children: Laura, who married Samuel McCall and had one son, Alpheus Wright; Mary, who married W. W. Frazer and had four children—Mary, Caroline, Hannah and Elizabeth; Hallie, married Rev. H. H. Sneed and had John, Nellie, Samuel, Carrie, Harrison, William and Robert; Samuel Robertson of Chattanooga, Tennessee, married Lizzie H. Sims and had four children—Mary Hill, Elizabeth Nash, Margaret and Sims: Carrie Rankin, married Letcher Pickens and had John and Henry.

Harriet, daughter of Sion Spencer Read, married Samuel Pennybaker and had several children.

Dr. Cronin Read, son of Sion Spencer Read, married Ada Sally and had John and Eulerah. Is now living in Arkansas.

Dr. Thomas Hill Read, son of Sion and Mary Read, married a Miss Allen of Decatur, Illinois, and had two sons and five daughters.

Elizabeth Julia, daughter of Sion and Mary Read, married David E. Allen and left one daughter, Laura, now living in Chicago.

John Nash Read, by his second marriage (Elizabeth Fisher Nash), had two children, one of whom died early and the other, James Allen, married a Miss Lannon and had nine children.

John Nash Read married, for his third wife, Mary Barksdale and had ten children the greater number of whom died early in life. One son, Nathaniel Barksdale, married Margaret Jane Bryan and had a son, Edwin Randolph, now living in Texas, who married and had a large family.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Col. Clement Read's second son, Thomas, married Elizabeth Nash, and they had a daughter, Peggy, who died about the year 1815, unmarried. A third son, Isaac, married Sarah Embrey. This son, Isaac Read, built a home in Charlotte county, Virginia, and called it "Greenfield." He was a colonel in the Revolutionary War. They had three children, Clement, Priscilla and Isaac. Clement was a minister, married a Miss Edmunds and they had eleven children; Priscilla married Captain Charles Scott and had eight children; Isaac, the youngest son, married Anna Mayo Venable and had nine children.

Edmund, the fourth son of Col. Clement Read, was a major in the Revolutionary War and married, first, a Miss Lewis, and second, a Miss Cabel. He died without issue.

Jonathan, the fifth son of Col. Clement Read, married Miss Jane Lewis daughter of John Lewis and Jane Meriwether Lewis of Warner Hall and left a large family in Virginia.

Margaret, the eldest daughter of Col. Clement Read, married Judge Paul Carrington and left a large family. Mary, second daughter, married Thomas Nash; Annie, third daughter, married, first a Mr. Jamieson, and second, Richard Elliott.

It is claimed however by the best genealogical authority, including Dr. Lyon G. Tyler, editor of William and Mary Quarterly, that Col. Clement Reade, first Clerk of Lunenburg county, Virginia, born 1707 was a son of this Thomas Reade. Mr Thomas M. Green says of the three other sons of George Reade, of whom less is known than of Thomas, that they were of local prominence, and their descendants numerous and noteworthy. He says that Benjamin owned the land on which the Assembly in 1601, ordered the town of York to be built, and that his sons were conspicuous in church matters in Gloucester county.

Scotch Tom Nelson, the first of that name so celebrated and so highly honored in Virginia, married a lady of this family and name. But it is with the daughter of George Reade, Mildred by name, who married Augustine Warner, that this sketch has to do, that is to say, with her descendants more especially.

Augustine Warner of Gloucester county, who married Mildred Reade, was a son of Captain Augustine Warner of the English army, whose name first appears on the Virginia records, in connection with that of Mary, his wife, as entering a tract of 2,500 acres of land about the branches of old Chesscaketown, South side of Pianketank river, October 26, 1652. They had however, lived in Virginia some years previous to that time, as the young Augustine Warner was born in Virginia 1642. It was a fashion as well as a necessity with the wealthier Virginians to send their oldest sons to England to be educated, and thither went the younger Augustine Warner, who, in 1657, was entered on the books of the Merchant Tailors School, London, as Augustine, eldest son of Augustine Warner, gentlemen, born in Virginia, October 20, 1642. Matriculating at Cambridge and returning to Virginia, he was elected to the House of Burgesses from Gloucester as early as 1666, whence he passed to the Royal Council under Sir Wm. Berkley in 1676. He was Speaker of the House of Burgesses, of the assembly which had succeeded the one that had been in existence from 1666 to 1676 which Berkley was forced, by Bacon's Rebellion, to dissolve, and to issue writs for a new election. It was at the bar of the assembly presided over by this Augustine Warner that Bacon knelt, confessing himself "guilty of unlawful and mutinous practices, and promised, if pardoned, to demean himself dutifully, faithfully and peaceably." The military title of Augustine Warner, was, "Colonel Commanding the Militia of Gloucester," but he is better known in history as "Speaker Augustine Warner," from the fact that he was so long speaker of the House of Burgesses.

Col (or Speaker) Augustine Warner and Mildred Reade had three sons and three daughters. None of the sons ever married. The daughters, Mildred, Mary and Elizabeth, married respectively Lawrence Washington, John Smith "of Purton," and Councilor John Lewis, who was the son of John Lewis and Isabella Warner and the grandson of General Robert Lewis of Brecon, Wales. These were the immediate ancestors of the Lewis family of Warner Hall, and their three sons, John of Warner Hall, Charles of the Byrd, and Robert of Belvoir, were the respective heads of that numerous family which now numbers many hundreds and are scattered over many States. The descendants of Elizabeth Warner Lewis, or at least many of them, will be found in this book under the three respective heads mentioned above.

Mildred, oldest daughter of Speaker Augustine Warner, as seen above, married Lawrence Washington and hence was the ancestor of General George Washington and others of that distinguished family.

Later than George Reade and Captain Warner there came to Virginia two brothers, John and Lawrence Washington. They were sturdy Royalists, men of education, fair estates, and excellent social connections in England. This was about 1657. At the date of the emigration they were men of middle age and both widowers, Lawrence, having a daughter who had married in England. By his will, February 26, 1675, and proved January 10, 1677, Lawrence Washington bequeathed his whole estate in England to his daughter, Mary, she being the child of the first wife that he had buried there, while to his American wife, and to John and Ann, his children by her, he left all the handsome property he had accumulated in Virginia.

Henceforth, all that can be traced to this Lawrence Washington directly, disappears from history. Yet General Washington, in his letter to Sir Isaac Heard, states that his descendants were numerous.

From this Lawrence Washington came Bailey Washington, whose son was the gallant cavalry officer of the Revolution, Col. Wm. Washington and probably Robert and Lawrence of Chatank Stafford, whom the General mentions in his will, without claiming them as relatives, as "friends of his juvenile days," and also many other Washingtons in Virginia and elsewhere, who assert their relationship to the General without being able to trace it.

Far more conspicuous, however, in every respect was the other brother, John Washington, for whom the Parish in Westmoreland, in which he lived, was named. His military talents entitled him to the command of all the forces of the "Northern Neck." His successful campaign against the Indians in Maryland and elsewhere, culminated in the murder of the Chiefs of the Saranacs, after they had surrendered and led to reprisals for which Bacon marched against the hostile Indians, contrary to Berkley's command, and thus inaugurated Bacon's rebellion. As Burgess and Magistrate for the county, standing high in the confidence of Berkley in the suppression of this rebellion, in which he took an active part, Col. John Washington became prominent in all public affairs, and amid the universal complaint, "the happy land of Westmoreland" alone reported to the king's commissioners, that it had no grievances to be redressed.

In Virginia Col. Washington did not fail to add largely to the patrimony he had left in England. A widower, he took unto himself a second wife in the person of Ann Pope, the daughter of a wealthy planter, and sister of Thomas Pope, from whom the celebrated John Pope, territorial Governor of Arkansas, and his namesake nephew, who lost the second battle of Manassas, descended. By this marriage he gained the handsome property on which they lived, between Brydges and Pope's Creek, near the Potomac. They had three children, Lawrence, John and Ann, among whom, by his will, proved on the 6th of January, 1677, his property in England as well as in Virginia, was divided, the homestead on Bridges falling to the portion of Lawrence.

The second son, John married and had many children, but the maiden name of his wife is unknown. Among the children was Mildred, who married a gentleman named Brown, and after his death became the wife of Col. Henry Willis, the founder of Fredericksburg. This is the Mildred Washington concerning whom Mr. M. D. Conway is in so much doubt as to her identity and relationship to the other Washington. Mr. Thomas M. Green from whom the main facts of this sketch has been obtained says this Mildred Washington was the Mother of Mary Willis who married Captain Hancock Lee, and also of the wife of Howell Lewis, but as "Old Henry Willis" had three wives (as good authority as Mr. Green undoubtedly is), it would be difficult to settle, with any degree of certainty the maternity of two children whose births were twenty years apart. The wife of Hancock Lee was born 1716 and the wife of Howell Lewis about 1736, and in that interval Col. Willis no doubt married once or twice. He had three wives in rapid succession.

Lawrence Washington, son of John Washington and Ann Pope as has been seen, married Mildred Warner, the oldest daughter of Speaker Augustine Warner and Mildred Reade. He was born at King, England, baptized, June 23, 1635. As he was cotemporaneous with Councilor John Lewis, who married a younger sister of Mildred, the approximate date of Lawrence Washington's marriage may be safely placed at 1660. Not much is to be learned from the records concerning this Lawrence Washington. That he was a Burgess, a magistrate by a sort of hereditary right, a "Colonel" and a prominent man in Episcopal vestries, is nearly all that is known.

In the more peaceful times that followed Bacon's rebellion less opportunity was afforded Lawrence Washington for improving himself upon his generation, than fell to the lot of his father, "The sturdy Col. John." Inheriting the larger share of the paternal estate in England and Virginia, dispensing a liberal hospitality, albeit, a trifle pompous, after the manner of educated and wealthy Virginia planters of the day, a devout believer in the Apostolic succession and a sturdy Royalist, not failing to add to his acres and increase his stores: This is about all that one can learn or imagine of Lawrence Washington. He died 1697 and was interred in the family vault near the Potomac. His widow married a second time, George Gale, but nothing is known of her second marriage after it occurred; the records are silent.

Lawrence and Mildred (Warner) Washington had three children: John, Mildred, and Augustine.

John Washington, oldest son of Lawrence Washington and Mildred Warner, and the third in this line of the name in Virginia, married Catherine Whiting, a wealthy heiress of Gloucester county, Virginia, and his daughter Catherine was the first wife of Fielding Lewis of Fredricksburg; and the descendants of this marriage, and other children of John Washington, have intermarried with the Nelsons, Fairfaxes, Throckmortons, and others of the "Northern Neck."

Augustine Washington, second son of Lawrence Washington and Mildred Warner was born 1694 and died 1743, at the age of 49. He married first Jane Butler, of Westmoreland, and second, Mary Ball, "Belle of Lancaster." In both marriages he exhibited the family characteristic of seeking good alliances. Prudent, industrious, energetic, and conservative, punctual, discreet and decided, he was a man of mark in the colony. A burgess, a magistrate, a zealous churchman, fond of company, and maintaining the state that belonged to his degree; in his social relation, aristocratic in a quaint way, and yet Augustine Washington was a lover of liberty. His second wife, Mary Ball, was the granddaughter of Col. Wm. Ball, whose rank entitled him to armorial bearings. This Col. Wm. Ball settled at the mouth of Corotoman river in 1650, and died in 1669, leaving two sons, Wm. and Joseph, the latter being the father of Mary, before named, the wife of Augustine Washington.

According to Mr. Paxton, Augustine Washington had four children by his first marriage with Jane Butler, but he does not give their names. By his second marriage with Mary Ball he had several children, General George Washington and other sons, but only one daughter, Bettie, who became the second wife of Fielding Lewis.

It is not the purpose of this sketch to give a history of the Washington family, for that would be foreign to the scope of this work. Nor is it intended to give their genealogy, as that would involve more space than is allotted to us. Their history belongs to the country, and their genealogy would require a separate work.

It is only because of the association of the name with the Lewis family and others connected with them that the Washington name has been brought in.

Bettie Washington, as has been seen, was the second wife of Col. Fielding Lewis of Fredricksburg, his first wife having been

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Catherine, daughter of Col. John Washington, and first cousin of Bettie; and it may be added that Col. Lewis was second cousin to both of his wives.

General George Washington, son of Augustine Washington and Mary Ball, is too well known to history to have any thing more than a passing notice here. He married the widow Custis, nee Martha Dandridge, one of whose sisters was the wife of Col. Burwell Bassett, and was the ancestress of Delia Claiborne, the beautiful and accomplished young wife of Simon Bolivar Buckner of Kentucky, one of the leading generals of the Confederate army, who has redeemed his promise to her that she should reside in the governor's mansion at Frankfort.

Mildred Washington, daughter of Lawrence Washington and Mildred Warner, and hence an aunt of General Washington, was born about 1696. The Rev. Phillip Slaughter, author of St. Marks Parish, is authority for the statement that the first husband of this Mildred Washington was a Lewis, one of the Warner Hall family, but General Washington does not mention this marriage in any of his letters to Sir Isaac Heard; and yet it is a fact that the name of Lewis obtains among her descendants, even with those who did not afterwards marry into that family. This fact would go far to confirm that statement.

Whether as the first or second husband, Mildred became the wife of Roger Gregory, one of the wealthiest land owners in the colony, by whom she had three daughters: Frances, Mildred and Elizabeth. These three daughters married three brothers, Col. Francis Thornton, Col. John Thornton and Reuben Thornton, all of Spottsylvania county and sons of Francis Thornton, an English emigrant.

Col. Francis Thornton, who married Frances Gregory, was the proprietor of "Fall Hill" near Fredricksburg where seven generations of the same name have lived in succession. Their daughter Mildred married Charles Washington, half-brother of the General. Col. Francis Thornton and Frances Gregory had several sons among whom were Col. William Thornton of Montpelier, and Col. John Thornton of the Revolution. The latter married Jane Washington, daughter of Augustine Washington, who was the eldest half-brother of the General.

Col. John Thornton, who married Mildred Gregory, had four daughters, Mildred, Mary, Elizabeth and Lucy.

Mildred Thornton became the second wife of Samuel Washington, brother of the General, and was the mother of Thornton Washington, from whom the Washingtons of Newport, Kentucky, are descended.

Mary Thornton married General Woodford of the Revolution and was the ancestor of the countless Woodfords and Buckners of central Kentucky.

Elizabeth Thornton married John Taliaferro of Dессington.

Lucy, daughter of Col. John Thornton was one of the five wives of John Lewis, son of Fielding Lewis and Catherine Washington.

About 1733, Mildred Washington, daughter of Lawrence and Mildred (Warner) Washington, who had been previously married twice, first to a Lewis, and second to Roger Gregory, became the third wife of Col. Henry Willis of Fredricksburg. Col. Willis had himself been previously married twice, one of his wives having also been Mildred Washington, daughter of John Washington and first cousin of this Mildred. Their residence was on the heights near Fredricksburg, now known historically as "Mayrees Heights."

At this point arises a very decided dilemma as to the maternity of one of Col. Henry Willis' children, the wife of Howell Lewis. As has been seen, Col. Henry Willis was married three times. His first wife was Mildred, daughter of John Washington, his third was Mildred daughter of Lawrence Washington, who, as has been seen, had been twice married before. Mildred, daughter of John Washington, having been the first wife of Col. Henry Willis, she could not have been the mother of Howell Lewis' wife, as she was necessarily born within a short time of the third marriage, as her husband Howell Lewis was born in 1732. It is therefore impossible, in the absence of positive record proof to tell whether, Mary or Isabella Willis who married Howell Lewis, was the daughter of the second or third wife of Henry

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Willis, as the death of the second wife, the birth of this daughter, and the third marriage, were so close together that nothing short of record proof could settle the question. It is more than probable that Howell Lewis' wife was the daughter of Henry Willis' third wife, as it is fair to conclude that she was younger than her husband, and hence born about 1734, which would make her descendants of the Washington line; but when it is remembered that she had a daughter married 1769, only 35 years after the date we give for her birth, there is rather a narrow margin left for the events which occurred.

Col. Lewis Willis, oldest child of Col. Henry Willis by his third wife, Mildred Washington, whose birth Mr. Green puts at 1734, married Mary, daughter of Col. John Champe, whose sister Jane was the wife of Samuel Washington—brother of the General.

Byrd Willis, son of Lewis Willis, married Mary Lewis, daughter of George Lewis and granddaughter of Fielding Lewis, and Bettie Washington.

Fannie Willis, daughter of Byrd Willis and Mary Lewis, became the wife of Achille Murat, son of Caroline Bonaparte, and Napoleon's great marshal of that name.

Col. Henry Willis and his third wife, Mildred Washington, had also a daughter, Ann, who married Duff Green. Their youngest son, William, was a soldier at fifteen with the army at Valley Forge. After the war he removed to Kentucky, married the daughter of Markham Marshall, and was the father of General Duff Green who was the editor of the old Washington Telegraph in the days of General Jackson.

Willis Green, oldest son of Duff Green and Ann Willis, emigrated to Kentucky in 1779, to pursue the vocation of surveyor, traveling the old wilderness road by Cumberland Gap marked out by Daniel Boone. In 1783, he married the oldest daughter of John Reed and resided several years in the fort built by his wife's father. When Kentucky was divided into three counties he was clerk of Lincoln, which county he represented in a number of conventions held for the purpose of separating from Virginia.

Lewis Warner Green, the eloquent divine, president of Hampden Sidney College, and afterwards of Center College, Kentucky, was the youngest son of Willis Green and Miss Reed. His oldest daughter was the accomplished wife of Mr. Scott of Bloomington, Illinois, and his youngest daughter was the wife of A. E. Stevenson, Vice-President of the United States during Cleveland's second administration.

Ann Willis Green followed her sons to Kentucky, lived with them for a time in Reeds Fort, and died in 1820 at Moreland, then the home of her grandson, Judge John Green. Her tombstone still stands in the old burying ground in Reeds Fort, near Danville, Kentucky.

By the intermarriage of the granddaughters of Mildred Washington by her marriage with Roger Gregory, and those of Henry Willis with the brothers of the General, and of the grandsons and great-grandsons, with his nieces and grand-nieces, the larger portion of the descendants of her brother Augustine are also her descendants.

Col. Fielding Lewis was nearly related, by a common descent from Col. George Reade and Speaker Augustine Warner, with both of his wives, Catherine and Bettie Washington, being related in the same degree to both of them—second cousin. His son Lawrence Lewis married Eleanor Custis, granddaughter of Mrs. Martha Washington. The daughter of Lawrence Lewis and Eleanor Custis married Col. E. G. W. Butler, and their son, Col. Lawrence Butler, of St. Louis unites in his person the blood of the Warners, Lewises, Washingtons, Custises and Dandridges. Not less distinguished is that of the race whose name he bears. So many of the name were officers in the war of 1812, that a British officer, who accidentally trod upon the foot of one of them at a military ball in New Orleans, apologized saying: "The Butlers are so numerous I cannot miss them."

It has been definitely ascertained that the first wife of Henry Willis was Mildred Washington, daughter of Col. John

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Washington, who was the widow Brown at the time of her marriage to Col. Willis. "From whom Mr. Thomas M. Green informs us he descended." This last sentence in quotations, however, seems to be erroneous, as the name of Green is interwoven with the descendants of the third marriage. Mr. Green has, however, furnished unmistakable data in regard to the second wife of Col. Henry Willis. It transpires in recently discovered records that Mildred Willis, wife of Col. Henry Willis, and Mary Lewis, wife of "Charles Lewis of the Byrd," were residuary legatees in the will of John Howell; from which it would seem to follow necessarily that the second wife of Henry Willis was a daughter of John Howell, as it is a well known fact that the wife of Charles Lewis was Mary Howell, and hence it follows that the second wife of Henry Willis was Mildred Howell and not Mildred Washington.

JOHN LEWIS OF DONEGAL.

Although others of this name had preceded "Irish John" nearly one hundred years and were identified with the settlement and growth of the country and distinguished in colonial history, yet he was pre-eminently fitted for the niche which he filled in the development of frontier life and in shaping the destiny of a new country. Plunging, as it were, from the start into the midst of a dense and unexplored forest, where the foot of the white man had rarely ever trod and through which a savage foe roamed at will, it matters not how long he had been preceded by others of this or any other name in other sections of the state, he was emphatically the pioneer of Augusta county, which at that time embraced the greater part of Northwest Virginia.

Whatever may be said about the identity of the different branches of the Lewis family at some anterior date, there is a striking contrast in the surroundings of the Warner Hall family and the subject of our sketch, at the time the respective heads came to America. General Robert Lewis was an officer in the English army, and to say nothing of his English holdings, he brought with him a grant from the crown for 33,333 1-3 acres of land, while John Lewis of Donegal was clearly not a land-holder, but in consequence of having to slay his Irish landlord, was compelled to flee the country. Notwithstanding this contrast, true to the traditions of the name, he proved himself equal to his surroundings in his new home, too far removed from royalty to be any longer the victim of tyranny.

John Lewis and his wife, Margaret Lynn, and six children, came to Virginia, 1732 and settled in Augusta county where the town of Staunton now stands, of which he was the founder.

JOHN LEWIS OF AUGUSTA COUNTY.

Irish John Lewis, as he was best known was one of the first and most distinguished pioneers of the valley of Virginia. He was one of the first settlers of Augusta county and indeed founder of the town of Staunton. A marble slab in the cemetery at that place, beneath which rests his remains, tells of his parentage and birthplace, as well as the date of his death and his age. The inscription reads:

“John Lewis was the son of Andrew Lewis and Mary Calahan. Born in Donegal county, Ireland, 1678. Died in Augusta county, Virginia, February 1, 1762, in the 84th year of his age.”

He married Margaret Lynn, who, tradition says, was the daughter of a Scotch Laird, and to this marriage was born seven children, all of whom, except one, was born in Ireland:

Samuel Lewis, son of John Lewis and Margaret Lynn was born in Ireland, 1716.

Thomas, born in Ireland, 1718, married Jane Strother.

General Andrew Lewis, born in Ireland, 1720, married Elizabeth Givens.

Col. Wm. Lewis, born in Ireland, 1724, married Ann Montgomery.

Margaret, born in 1726, died unmarried.

Ann, born in Ireland, 1728, died unmarried.

Col. Charles Lewis, born in Virginia, 1736, married Sarah Murray.

It is not known, as matter of record, that there was any connection between Irish John Lewis and the other Virginia families of that name, but the members always claimed relationship, and Robert Lewis of Belvoir mentions large business transactions with Mr. John Lewis of Augusta, in his will.

After the departure of John Lewis from Ireland, on account of having slain his Irish landlord, he is said to have sojourned for a few years in Portugal before coming to America, coming first to Pennsylvania, where he remained but a short time, and in 1732 he came to Virginia. An unbroken forest lay out before our frontiersman, predatory bands of Indians roamed the woods without hindrance, and the shrieks of a savage foe, as from time to time they rang out upon the air, was all that there was to break the monotony of the surroundings. His house was a military fortress of the backwoods, an arsenal supplied with the means of defense against a merciless foe, with portholes on every side from which to meet the attacks of the enemy. And thus it is that Irish John Lewis and his five sons planted a colony of their own in the Western wilderness, carved out of the forest both fame and fortune for themselves and posterity, and established beyond the Blueridge a distinct branch of the Lewis family.

Distinct and disconnected as this may seem to have been at first, however, as will be seen from the pages further on, the intermarriages between their posterity and the posterity of the other branches have been so numerous that they have, to a great extent, merged into each other.

2. Samuel Lewis oldest son of John Lewis and Margaret Lynn, born 1716, died unmarried. He was a captain in the old French War. His brothers, Andrew, William, and Charles were members of his company, and all three were wounded at Brad-dock's defeat.

2. Thomas Lewis, second son of John Lewis and Margaret Lynn, was born 1718. He married Jane, daughter of William Strother of Stafford county, Virginia, in 1749, and had thirteen children: First John, born 1749, died single; second Margaret Ann, born 1751, married first, a Mr. McClanahan, second Wm. Bowyer; third Agatha, born 1753, married first, Captain John Frogg, and second, John Stuart; fourth Jane, born 1755, married Thomas Hughes; fifth Andrew, sixth Thomas, both died young; seventh Mary, born 1762, married John McElhany; eight Eliz-abeth, born 1765, married Thomas M. Gilmer, and was the moth-er of George Rockingham Gilmer who was twice governor of Georgia, and many years a member of Congress from that state; ninth Ann, born 1767, married first, A. M. Douthat, second, Mr. French; tenth Frances, born 1769, married Layton Yancy; eleven Charles, born 1772, married Miss Yancy; twelve Sophia, born 1775, married John Cathrae; thirteen Wm. Benjamin, born 1778, married Miss M. Hite.

Thomas Lewis was surveyor of Augusta county, Virginia. Was a member of the House of Burgesses, was a member of the Virginia convention of 1776, and was one of the commissioners of Confederation of 1777 to treat with the Indian tribes who had been defeated at the battle of Point Pleasant.

Of the foregoing sons of Thomas Lewis, all except the two youngest, were officers in the Revolutionary army. John, Andrew and Thomas, Jr., were with Washington through his most important campaigns and are frequently mentioned in his reports, and John and Thomas were at the surrender of Cornwallis. Captain McClanahan, first husband of Margaret Lewis and Captain Frogg, first husband of Agatha Lewis, were both killed at the battle of Point Pleasant.

General Andrew Lewis, third son of John Lewis and Margaret Lynn, was born in Ireland 1720 and came with his parents to America in 1732.

It will be seen from the foregoing dates that Andrew Lewis entered upon frontier life at the age of twelve and for more than forty years was engaged in a ceaseless struggle, a warfare that was as incessant and of longer duration than the "War of the Roses." The first twenty years of the active life of Andrew Lewis was mainly spent in defending his father's home, his mother and sisters from the predatory attack of the savages, and extending the same aid to other frontier settlements; and then in the service of his country, still under the English dominion, in the numerous Indian wars, and the old French war; and lastly as an officer in the patriot army, in the war for Independence.

It is not claimed that there was any formidable contest in the Continental Congress for commander in chief of the American armies, nor would any one underrate either the military ability or prestige of General Washington, but it is an historical fact that many of the members (John Adams at their head), were favorable to General Lewis for that position. The long military service of Lewis, culminating as it had done in the great victory of Point Pleasant over the combined tribes of northwestern Indians, led on by British influence in 1774, marked him as a leader eminently fit to take charge of the armies; but there was no discount on the record of Washington, and with the political influence of the East Virginia Lewises, Mr. Jefferson and the Lees, with all of whom he was allied by blood or marriage, it was not difficult to forecast in advance and plainly see upon whom the lot would fall. On the other hand, General Lewis was nearing sixty and already broken down in health, while Washington was only a little the rise of forty and in the full vigor of manhood.

From Lippencott's "Gilmers Georgians," and the "History of Augusta County, Virginia, by J. L. Peyton, the following extracts are taken:

"General Andrew Lewis was engaged in all of the Indian wars down to the Revolution, participated in the war of 1755 between France and Great Britain, was an officer at the battle of Fort Du Quesne, or Braddock's defeat, and was the commanding general of the Virginia troops at the battle of Point Pleasant on the 10th of October, 1774. In 1774 he was a member of Virginia Assembly, and was a member of the Committee, together with Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee, George Washington, and Thomas Jefferson, appointed to prepare a plan of defense. An Indian war being apprehended, Governor Dunmore appointed General Andrew Lewis of Botetourt county, then a member of the assembly, to the command of the Southern Division of the forces raised in Botetourt, Augusta, and the adjoining counties east of the Blue Ridge. The troops rendezvoused at Camp Union, now Lewisburg, in Greenbriar county, Virginia.

"On the 11th of September, 1774, General Lewis with eleven hundred men took up his line of march through the wilderness, and after a march of one hundred and fifty miles, on the 30th of September, they reached Point Pleasant at the junction of the great Kanawha and the Ohio, where on the 10th of October the battle was fought and the victory won.

"His first important service after the commencement of the Revolution was to drive the Scotch Governor Dunmore, and his Tory adherents from the State of Virginia.

"General Washington, with whom Lewis had been at Fort Necessity, and under whom he had served in various capacities, had formed a very high estimate of his ability and character, and in a letter under date of October 15, 1778, in respect to his services, remarks: 'If Congress is not convinced of the impropriety of a certain irregular promotion, they are the only set of men that require additional proof of the error of their measure.'

General Lewis' services, after driving Dunmore from the State, were confined principally to the defense of the country bordering on the Chesapeake Bay. His iron constitution, however, having given way to the strain of long military services, having been constantly at the front and in the saddle for more than forty years, he resigned his commission in 1778, and set out for home, but died on his way before reaching it, in Bedford county, Virginia.

"In the beautiful valley of the Roanoke river, then Botetourt, but now Roanoke county, Virginia, a few miles west of where the town of Salem now stands, was the home of General Andrew Lewis, and there his remains still rest, marked by a simple marble slab."

He resided at the "Old Sweet," which property he owned, and which was one of the most celebrated watering places of the mountains of Virginia.

Of the children of Colonel Wm. Lewis, we will mention briefly, John, William I., and Elizabeth Montgomery. For a more complete history of this family, whose name is legion, the reader is referred to Peyton's history of Augusta county, Virginia.

3 John Lewis entered the Continental Army, at the age of eighteen as lieutenant and came out with the rank of major. He passed the winter at Valley Forge with Washington in 1777, between whom a warm personal friendship existed; and Governor Gilmer says that he threw down and out-jumped General Jackson until the future hero of New Orleans had the greatest admiration for him.

Ann Montgomery Lewis, daughter of Major John Lewis and Mary Preston, married the Honorable John Howe Peyton of Augusta county, Virginia, 1821, and left issue.

3 Colonel Wm. I. Lewis, son of Colonel Wm. Lewis and Ann Montgomery, born 1766, died 1828. He married Elizabeth Cabell of Nelson county, Virginia, but left no issue. Colonel Lewis was a man remarkable for his talents and acquirements, fond of literary pursuits and a student of history, and being possessed of ample fortune, he had every means at his command for gratifying his bent of mind. His residence, seven miles east of Lynchburg, Virginia, on James river, was situated on the top of Mt. Athos overlooking that stream, at the foot of which, and in the bend of the river lay one of the most princely estates in eastern Virginia. He and his wife are buried on the top of this mountain five hundred feet above the river. He was elected to Congress one term, 1815-1817, and was defeated for governor by one vote, at a time when the governors were elected by the Legislature. Colonel Lewis bequeathed his entire estate to his niece, Ann Trent, who married Judge John Robertson of Richmond, Virginia.

3 Elizabeth Montgomery Lewis, daughter of Colonel William Lewis of Sweet Springs and Ann Montgomery, his wife, born 1777, married Colonel John Trent of Cumberland county, Virginia, and had three children: Eliza Trent, Ann Trent, and John Trent, M. D.

4 Ann Trent married Judge John Robertson of Richmond, Virginia, and, as before stated, became the heiress of her uncle, Wm. I. Lewis, and succeeded to the Mt. Athos property.

Judge Robertson was perhaps one of the most unique characters of his age and generation. A lineal descendant of the Princess Pocahontas, he possessed to a wonderful degree all of the peculiarities for which her descendants are remarkable, gifted, brilliant and eccentric. He was also a man of learning and a lawyer of rare attainments who ranked among the brightest lights of the profession. He was elected to Congress one term, but he was a man of too much independence of thought to be confined within party lines, and he never pursued politics. He was appointed judge of the chancery court of Richmond when that court was first created by the Legislature in the early forties, which position he held until that court was abolished by the Constitution of 1851. It was the writer's rare good fortune to have been thrown much with Judge Robertson when quite young, as his vacations were always spent at his Mt. Athos home which adjoined my mother's plantation. When Mr. Lincoln was elected in 1860 his anticipations in regard to the future of parties and the country were prophetic. In a series of letters written for the Richmond Enquirer in November and December of that year he foreshadowed coming events with almost mathematical precision. He declared that after March 4, 1861, and so long as the Black Republican party was in power, their platform would be the Constitution of the United States. And in reference to the campaign speech of Wm. H. Seward, delivered at Rochester, New York, in which Seward declared that slavery "Must and shall be abolished," he said: "Slavery, like all things else human, will have an end, but if that end is brought about in the way indicated by Mr. Seward, it will be when the Potomac becomes a sea of blood and its departed waves give way for the passage of the enemies of God and man." Judge Robertson spent the remainder of his life after the war an unreconstructed rebel, constantly refusing to avail himself of any of the supposed benefits of amnesty, holding that as he had done nothing for which pardon should be asked, it would be inconsistent to accept forgiveness. His exact age at the time of his death is not known, but it is certain that he was over eighty. He died in 1870.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

The children of Ann Lewis Trent by her marriage with Judge Robertson were:

5 ¹Powhattan, married and has issue. Resides in Culpepper county, Virginia.

5 ²Elizabeth, married a gentleman by the name of Barksdale of Richmond, he belonged to the numerous family of that name who were engaged in the manufacture of flour and owned the most extensive mills of Richmond. They left issue.

5 ⁴Ann, and ⁵Gay, the two youngest, both died young.

2 Colonel Charles Lewis, youngest son of Irish John Lewis, was killed at the battle of Point Pleasant, October 10, 1774. He was a favorite in the army and one of the most skillful officers in border warfare. He married Miss Murray of Bath county, Virginia, and left issue.

DU BREUIL.

Among the many hundred names who protested against the errors and crimes of Rome, and alligned themselves under the banner of Protestantism, none were more conspicuous than that of du Breuil; and of those who shared the fortunes of "Harry of Navarre" and followed the black plume in the thickest of the conflict, none were more constant in their devotion, or more daring in their deeds; but unlike Harry none of them ever swerved from that devotion, either from fear of assassination or in the hope of wearing a crown.

A Frenchman never does anything by halves, and when he once entered the Protestant ranks, he espoused the cause with his whole soul. Never in the history of the world were such religious persecutions known as those waged against the French Huguenots, but in spite of all the powers of Rome, French Protestantism went steadily on, and when at last its followers were compelled to flee for their lives, France lost her best population; but French Protestantism was scattered throughout the civilized world.

Such having been the history of the French Huguenots in their native France, with more or less severity for more than a century, it is not strange that patriotism should have been one of their leading characteristics, and that they should have been the champions of human liberty wherever they went. The du Breuils were no exception to the rule.

The historian has been compelled to deal with this subject from a general standpoint. It has been impossible for him to even refer to the parts taken by individual participants; every Huguenot was himself a hero, and furnished abundant material for a volume. Biographers have commemorated the deeds of a few of the leaders, but it has been reserved for the genealogists, whose province it is to deal with individuals, to commemorate the heroism of the rank and file. By way of illustration we will mention the hairbreadth escape, after relentless pursuits, of one of those devoted heroes. Many, however, did not succeed in escaping, but were captured and suffered long terms of imprisonment, or were put to death. This is only a sample. They were pursued as felons, hunted as beasts of prey, and tortured, mentally and physically, as only a relentless priesthood could do.

From Bishop Meade's "Old Churches and Families" we make the following extract, from notes written at the base of the ancestral tree of the Dupuy family, volume 1, page 468:

"Bartholomew Dupuy, born 1653, entered the army at 18, and was promoted to an office at an early age. He was assigned to duty in the household of the king, in which capacity he was entrusted with orders bearing the signature of his sovereign.

"One of these papers was the means of saving this officer from arrest, and most probably from death. But a short time before the revocation of the edict of Nantes he married a countess, Susannah Lavillon, and retired to his villa for a short respite from his military duties. Very soon after his retirement they were called upon by one of the king's messengers who informed them of the revocation, and further that he had been sent by the king from motives of esteem, to save him and his wife from the impending fate, and urged their renunciation of the Protestant faith. Dupuy asked for a few hours for consideration. In the meantime he disguised his wife in the livery of a page, and mounting two horses started at midnight for the frontier of the kingdom. They traveled in this way 'fourteen or eighteen days' and although stopped almost daily, they always escaped by exhibiting the king's signature. Upon reaching the German border they sang the praise of God in the fourteenth Psalm, and offered up prayers and thanksgiving to their great deliverer for their escape from a cruel death. They remained in Germany fourteen years, then stayed two years in England, from whence they came to America in 1700, and settled in Manakintown, on James river, having been preceded by the du Breuils and other Huguenot settlers, ten years previously.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

So far as is known this was the only family of du Breuils among the Huguenot settlers; indeed the proofs are conclusive, as the name of du Breuil is extinct, and the name of Dibrell, which took its place, is confined to the descendants of the only son of Dr. Christopher du Brueil of France, but more recently of Manakintown.

DR. CHRISTOPHER DU BREUIL.

(Pronounced "du Bray.")

Of this great ancestor of the Dibrell family, very little is known. It is known, however, from the records, that he was among the Manakintown settlers, and hence, among the Huguenot refugees. Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell in his manuscript says of Dr. du Breuil: "Among the Manakintown settlers was Christopher du Breuil, a physician, who died in the year 1729. Nothing more is known of him than that it was said that he was eminent in his profession. Beyond him it is impossible to trace our genealogy on the paternal line. We will therefore consider him the vine from which so many branches of the Dibrell family have sprung." After the death of Dr. du Breuil his widow married a Huguenot named Labairaira (pronounced Lubarier), by whom she had one or more sons and probably daughters, of whom, however, so little is known that an intelligent account cannot be given.

From the library of universal knowledge the following extract is taken:

"Both Charles V and Francis I proceeded at once to execute the articles of the peace of Cressy relating to the extirpation of heresy in their respective dominions. Charles ordered certain doctors of the University of Louvaine to draw up a confession of faith which he required all of his subjects in the Netherlands to accept under the penalty of death. To show that he was in earnest he caused Peter du Breuil, a Calvinistic preacher, to be burned to death in the market place, February, 1545."

GENEALOGIES OF THE

From the "Dictionnaire Historique et Heraldique de la Noblesse Francaise," by D. Demailhac—Paris, 1895—first volume, page 583, we find that as early as 1413 Jean du Breuil was mentioned as one of the large land holders of France, and that in 1545 the same reference is made to Antoine du Breuil, with description, respectively, of their Arms which will be found described hereafter.

The birth of Dr. du Breuil occurred about 1680, after three generations had passed through the storms of civil and religious strife which had shaken France from center to circumference; many in the meantime had followed Harry of Navarre on bloody fields of carnage, and some had witnessed the massacre of St. Bartholomew. It is not strange, therefore, that from such an ancestry a race of patriots should have descended, or that men and women who had sprung from the loins of such heroes should make their mark in whatever sphere their lots chanced to be cast.

From the records of the church of the French refugees at Manakintown we learn that "Jeane Antoine du Breuil, son of Christoffe du Breuil and Marianne his wife, was born May 15, 1728, and on the first of August following, was baptized by Mr. Masons, was presented by Antoine Benin, and Elizabeth Dutoi was grandmother." The foregoing extract is signed by Jeane Chastain, clerk, and is taken from the historical collections, volume V.

From the foregoing sketch two deductions necessarily follow: First, as Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell's manuscript says that Antoine Dibrell was born a month after the death of his father, and the record says that he was born 1728, it follows that Dr. Christopher du Breuil died in 1728 instead of 1729; second, if Elizabeth Dutoi was Antoine's grandmother, then the maiden name of Dr. du Breuil's wife, "Marianne," was Dutoi, but if grandmother should read "godmother," then the deduction would fail; but it must be remembered, that in the baptism of infants the Roman Catholic Church instituted the office of godfather and godmother, and that with the exception of the Church of England, which was a very slight remove from the mother church.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

this office was abandoned by all the Protestant churches, and it is not to be presumed that the French Huguenots, who had been the special victims of Romish persecutions, would perpetuate a Romish custom which all of the other Protestant churches, except the established church of England, had abandoned, and the conclusion is almost inevitable that grandmother is here used in the sense of consanguinity, and not in place of godmother, as I find it transcribed the same way in three instances by different persons, and it seems hardly probable that a mistake was made in transcribing it.

But the inquiry may be made, What has become of the Dutoi family? They have gone into the wastebasket, so to speak, just as the du Breuils did, with the difference that it is not known what other name was adopted in its stead. The truth is that these exiles were in a transition state from French to English, or American, and comparatively few of them retained their original name. Outraged, disgusted and heartsick, they sought to forget their native land and the very names by which they had been known. Some adopted their equivalent in an English translation; thus L'Oiseai became Bird; Le Blanc, White; Le Noir, Black; Le Roy, King; while others were changed to suit the sound, and still others dreadfully vulgarized. Thus, Conde became Cundy; Couquerell, Cockerell; Drouet became Drewet; De Aeth, Death; Huyghens, Huggins or Higgins; and Braufoy, Broffy. And doubtless, Dutoi, gave way to some other name the connection of which has been lost sight of.

There is a tradition that the maiden name of Marianne du Breuil, was Le Grande, and this name has been perpetuated in some of the Dibrell families, but this is a mere tradition, without foundation.

MANAKINTOWN SETTLEMENT.

A short sketch of this settlement, where Dr. du Breuil is first found, will not be amiss at this time:

"All the countries of Europe had opened their arms, so to speak, to these fleeing exiles and nothing less could have been expected from Virginia than the warmest hospitality.

"In 1690 so many Huguenots had settled on the south bank of James river, in Henrico county, about twenty miles from where Richmond now stands (Henrico then embraced both sides of the river at that point), and which was known as Manakin-town, from the tribe of Indians which had occupied that section, that the assembly passed an act giving them a large tract of land along the river as their possession, exempting it from all taxes, state and county, for seven years, and then extending the privilege indefinitely; and here they rested for a time worshiping with an entire freedom of conscience, without restraint or dictation from any source, until such time as they grew so much in numbers that it became necessary for them to spread out and seek their fortunes in different parts of the country.

"The names of the families still remaining in Virginia, who derive their descent from these Huguenots are, Marye, Fontaine, Dupuy, Harris, Sublett, Watkins, Markham, Sully, Chastain, Duval, Bondurant, Flournoy, Potter, Michaux, Pemberton, Mumford, Hatcher, Jaquiline, Bernard, Barrond, Latane, Moncure, Agie, Amouet, Chadouin, Dibrell, Moxie, Pasteur, Perrou, Thweatt, Manry, Boisseau, Fouché, Lanier, Leneve. There are doubtless others who might be added." (Meade's "Old Churches and Families," volume I, page 468.)

DIBRELL FAMILY.

Dibrell, originally French, and spelled du Breuil, was among the oldest and most prominent Huguenot families. In Virginia, however, it became thoroughly anglicized, and for more than a hundred and fifty years, and for six successive generations, it has been spelled Dibrell. As was referred to under the head of du Breuil, this is one of the instances of the general change of names which resulted from the conditions surrounding the French Huguenots in America. The purely English rendition of the name by the first Anthony Dibrell has stripped it of all complications and made it purely American.

As before stated, Dr. Christopher du Breuil, which name became changed to Dibrell, was the original head of the family in America. It is generally accepted that he was born in France and with his parents fled from that country towards the close of the seventeenth century, in consequence of the relentless war which had been waged by the government and the Romish church against all Protestants.

The du Breuils like the Dupuys and the other names mentioned in the Manakintown settlement, did not come directly to America, but refugeeed first to Holland, then to England, and afterwards to America; and it is a notable fact that only one of the name was known among the Manakintown settlers.

There are no records to show that Dr. du Breuil left any other child than Anthony, who was the great ancestor of the Dibrell family in America.

We learn from the records of the church of the French refugees at Manakintown, known in English church history as Parish of King William, that Jean Antoine du Breuil, son of Christoffe du Breuil and Marianne his wife, was born May 15, 1728, and baptized first of August following. This is none other than Anthony Dibrell, whose name has become changed, as we have seen, from du Breuil to Dibrell, as almost all the names of the Manakintown settlers had undergone radical changes, owing to their changed condition in the colonies.

ANTHONY DIBRELL.

The father of Anthony Dibrell having died previous to his birth, and his mother having married the second time and died soon thereafter, Anthony was left to be raised by strange hands.

It is not known what the financial condition of Anthony Dibrell was when his parents died, but it is known, when he started out in his early manhood, he was on his own resources without money. There is one fact, however, that stands forth most prominently and speaks for itself; whatever the early opportunities of Anthony Dibrell may have been, he not only proved himself equal to the battle of life, but from his first appearance upon the arena he was acknowledged the full peer of his fellows, and established his claim, in spite of adverse fate, to a lineage that placed him in the front rank of the best names of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Left an orphan when so young that he had no distinct recollection of either of his parents, raised by an unlettered Frenchman (by the name of Benning), and turned loose upon the world penniless, he married before he was thirty years old, in one of the wealthiest and most aristocratic families of Virginia.

The father-in-law of J. M. McAllister, Charles Lee Dibrell, in his manuscript so frequently referred to, gives the following items of the early life of Anthony Dibrell: "About one month after the death of Christopher du Brueil, Anthony, his only child, was born. It is supposed that Dr. du Breuil died poor, and left his wife without the means of educating their son. After his death, how long it is not known, his widow married a Huguenot named Labaire (pronounced Lubarier) by whom she had a son or sons, and probably daughters, of whom too little is remembered to justify any remarks about them. Shortly after or before the marriage of the mother of Anthony to Labaire, he then a small boy, was given up to a man named Benning who treated him with great cruelty and raised him in profound ignorance. Having finished his term of apprenticeship with Benning, he turned his attention to procuring an education and having equipped himself for the battle of life, started out to measure lances with others of his generation."

Mr. Charles Lee Dibrell further says of Anthony Dibrell: "In person my grandfather was about five feet seven inches in height, weight about 140 pounds, dark complexion, dark eyes and hair, aquiline nose, and prominent forehead. My recollection of him is distinct, although I was little more than eight years old when he died."

In 1756, at about the age of twenty-eight, Anthony Dibrell married Miss Elizabeth Lee, at the house of John Fearn, in Buckingham county, Virginia. Her sister, Leeanna, having become the wife of John Fearn twelve years previously. At this point in the history of the Dibrell family it becomes necessary, in order to make the complete history intelligent, to introduce a sketch of the Lee family.

As the du Breuils preceded the Dibrell family, and as a reference to their history was necessary to an introduction to the Dibrell history, reference to the history of the Lee family at this point is necessary to a clear understanding of Dibrell history.

LEE FAMILY.

The best authenticated English history informs us that Launcelot Lee entered England with William the Conqueror in 1066. He was originally from Loudon, France, and was the founder of the Lee family in England from which the Virginia family is said to have descended. After the battle of Hastings, when the estates of the native English nobility were divided among the followers of William, a fine estate in Essex was bestowed upon him. Lionel Lee, a lineal descendant of Launcelot, who was Earl of Litchfield, raised a company of gentlemen cavaliers, at the head of which he accompanied Richard Coeur de Leon in the third crusade in 1192. For gallant conduct at the siege of Acre, he was made Earl of Litchfield, and another estate was bestowed upon the family called Ditchley. The armor worn by Lionel Lee was placed in the horse armory in the tower of London (see Guilliam's complete Heraldry). Richard Lee, a descendant of his, accompanied the unfortunate Earl of Surrey in his expedition against the Scotch border in 1542. Two of the family were knights companion of the garter, and their banners surmounted by the Lee Arms, were placed in St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle. The Arms consisted of a shield, band scimiter, battled and embattled; crest a cloist visor, surmounted by a squirrel holding a nut; the motto, "Non incantus future" (see memoirs of 1776, by Henry Lee).

It is true that Dr. Edmund Jennings Lee, author of "Lee of Virginia," does not embrace this part of Lee history in his work. Dr. Lee is eminent authority, but it is nevertheless true that he discards much authentic history because it is not confirmed by family records which have come into his possession, although it is an established fact that the history in question is based upon the most reliable authority.

5 CHARLES LEWIS.

- 5 Charles Lewis, of Buckeye Land, second son of "Charles of Byrd," born May 14, 1722, died May 14, 1782; married Mary, daughter of Isham Randolph of Dungeness. There is very little known of his descendants, as many of them went west at a very early day, and all of them have evidently scattered. His wife, Mary Randolph, was a sister of President Jefferson's mother, and his oldest son married a sister of Mr. Jefferson, Lucy Jefferson, who was his first cousin. As shown by his will on record in Albemarle county, Virginia, he had five children: Charles Lilburn Lewis, Isham Lewis, Ann Jefferson Lewis, Mary Lewis, and Mildred Lewis. He also mentions a grandson, Howell Lewis.
- 6 Charles Lilburn Lewis married Lucy Jefferson and emigrated to Kentucky. They left descendants.
- 6 Mary Lewis married Colonel Charles Lewis, her cousin, and son of Colonel Robert of Belvoir. The other daughters married Bennet Henderson and Charles Hudson, whom he names in his will as two of his executors, and as his sons-in-law.
- 7 Howell Lewis, whom Charles Lewis mentions as his grandson, is evidently the son of Colonel Charles, who had previously died, and his daughter Mary.
- 7 Randolph Lewis, son of Charles Lilburn Lewis and Lucy Jefferson, married his cousin Mary, daughter of Robert Lewis of "the Byrd" and his wife Jane Woodson. Issue: Lilburn Lewis, Tucker Woodson Lewis and Randolph Lewis, went west; Howell Lewis married a sister of Hancock Lee of Richmond, Virginia; Warner Lewis died young, unmarried; Mary Lewis married Charles Palmer of Richmond, Virginia; Susan Harrison Lewis married Douthat of Botetourt

5 ELIZABETH LEWIS.

- 5 Elizabeth Lewis, oldest daughter and third child of Charles Lewis and Mary Howell, born April 23, 1724, married May 3, 1744, William Kennon of Chesterfield county, Virginia, son of Wm. Kennon and Ann Eppes, grandson of Richard Kennon and Elizabeth Washam. Their son John Kennon married in 1779 Elizabeth Woodson, daughter of John Woodson and Elizabeth Hughes. Their daughter Elizabeth Kennon married in 1809, D. L. White, son of David L. White and Mary Lyne.
- 8 Pleasant Woodson White, son of D. L. and Mary (Lyne) White, married in 1848, Emily Gibson, daughter of Edward R. and Jeanette (Tilton) Gibson. Emily White died in 1902. Woodson Tilton White, their son, born July 26, 1849, now a resident of Waco, Texas.

6 Howell Lewis was the fourth son of "Charles of the Byrd," born 1731 in Goochland county, Virginia. He married a daughter of Captain Henry Willis, of Fredericksburg, Virginia. The name of the wife of Howell Lewis has been a matter of dispute among genealogists for years. It was known among many of her descendants that in household circles she was known as Mary, and her grandson, John Adison Cobb, who grew up in his grandfather's household, was raised and educated by him, and who was necessarily familiar with his grandmother's name, handed it down to posterity as "Mary," and named one of his daughters "Mary Willis" in perpetuation of her memory, but the records of Spotsylvania having disclosed the fact that Henry Willis had a daughter Mary, who married Hancock Lee, in 1816, put the genealogists to guessing, and they turned their attention to finding another name for the wife of Howell Lewis. Byrd Willis, grandson of Henry Willis, had left it on record that the wife of Howell Lewis, who was his aunt, was named "Elizabeth." Mr. Thos. M. Green of Danville, Kentucky, and Miss Minor, author of "Meriwether Genealogy," insisted that her name was Mildred, and Miss Hinton of North Carolina who had found a newspaper clipping in her grandfather's Bible, which referred to her demise under the name of Isabella, furnished Mrs. Watson, author of a "Royal Lineage," with that name, and Mrs. Watson, having given it to the secretary of Virginia Historical Society, it was claimed by that authority that Isabella, to the exclusion of all others, was the name of Howell Lewis' wife. There can be no doubt that in the numerous marriages of Henry Willis, he gave this daughter the name of Mary Isabella, notwithstanding the fact that his first born, who married Hancock Lee, was named Mary, nor will this appear at all strange or unusual, when it is considered that the wife of Hancock Lee was the child of his first wife, and the wife of Howell Lewis the child of his third wife and about twenty years apart.

In a deed from Howell Lewis to John Johnson, book H, page 283, Granville county, North Carolina, the wife of Howell Lewis is referred to as Isabella. In 1769, two years after the date of the foregoing deed, Howell Lewis and Mary are subscribing witnesses to a deed to land sold to John Cobbs, who was about to marry their daughter Mildred. So that it is seen that she appears on the records both as Isabella and Mary, and that she is also known to indisputable tradition under both names, and therefore no other conclusion can be reached than that she was named Mary Isabella, and this is accepted by the author as a solution. They had issue as follows:

6² Willis Lewis.

6³ Isabella Lewis married Jeffries.

6⁴ Ann Lewis married Morton.

6⁵ Frances Lewis married Bugg.

6⁶ Jane Lewis married David Hinton, Wake county, North Carolina, where they still reside with their great-granddaughter, Mary Hilliard Hinton, at "the Oaks."

6 ⁷Mildred Lewis married John Cobbs, born in Goochland; lived in Louisa county, Virginia, afterwards in Albemarle; removed to Granville county, North Carolina, and lastly established himself in Georgia.

6 ⁸Mary Lewis married a Kennon.

6 ⁹Elizabeth Lewis married William Ridley, Granville county, North Carolina.

6 ¹⁰Howell Lewis, born April 2, 1759, married in 1780 Betsy Coleman, daughter of Robert Coleman of Goochland county, Virginia.

Of the descendants of the children of Howell Lewis very little is known. There are many of his name in Granville county, North Carolina, but their line of descent could not be ascertained.

7 Elizabeth Ridley, daughter of Howell Lewis, left issue: Dr. Robert Ridley of Atlanta, Georgia, whose first wife was a daughter of the "great Ben Hill," is one of her descendants.

6 Willis Lewis appears on the rolls of the North Carolina State troops with the rank of captain, in the Revolutionary Army; beyond this nothing is known of him or his descendants.

6 Mildred Lewis has long been recognized as the oldest child of Howell Lewis, though this is disputed by some genealogists. She was married September 6, 1769, when her father was only thirty-seven years old, and it is hardly possible in the nature of things, that there could have been any older children. Mildred Lewis, was married to John Cobbs September 6, 1769, in Granville county, North Carolina. The records show that John Cobbs purchased land in Granville that year, of Wm. Moore, and in 1784, or fifteen years after his marriage, we find him described on the tax books of Goochland county, Virginia, as John Cobbs, of Georgia.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

The sons of John Cobbs, as well as those of Thomas Cobbs, left off the "s" and spelled the name "Cobb," which accounts for the Cobb family of Georgia and Alabama. This change was made previous to 1800, as Howell Cobb entered the army under appointment from General Washington under the name of Cobb. A curious and interesting coincidence, in connection with it, is presented in the will of Howell Lewis, written in 1812 and probated in 1814, in which he makes bequests to the children of "my deceased daughter, Mildred Cobbs;" and the sons of John Cobbs and Mildred Lewis, who had changed their name to Cobb, became beneficiaries under that will under the name of Cobbs. Of course their identity was unmistakable, but the name of Cobbs, even in this line, is established up to a time that takes in General Howell Cobb of Georgia, who was born previous to the settlement of the estate of Howell Lewis. Issue of John and Mildred Lewis Cobbs as follows:

- 7 ¹Howell Cobbs, born 1771, married Martha Jacquiline Roots.
- 7 ²John Addison Cobbs, born 1773, married Sarah Robinson Roots.
- 7 ³Mildred Lewis Cobbs.
- 7 ⁴Mary Willis Cobbs.
- 7 ⁵Susanna Cobbs.
- 7 ⁶Henry Willis Cobbs.
- 7 Howell Cobbs was the oldest of the children of John Cobbs and Mildred Lewis. He was appointed, during General Washington's administration, an officer in the United States Army, but after his marriage he resigned and settled on his plantation in Georgia. He represented his district in Congress from 1807 to 1812, at which time he resigned his seat in Congress to re-enter the army. He served as captain during the War of 1812, after which he again resigned his commission. He left no issue.
- 7 John Addison Cobbs, second son of John Cobbs and Mildred Lewis, is very little known to history, but the prestige of his family and all of his surroundings point unmistakably to the fact that he was a man of mark in his day. He left issue as follows:

- 8 ¹Howell Cobb, born 1815, married Miss Lamar of Georgia.
- 8 ²Thomas R. R. Cobb, married Miss Lumpkin, daughter of Chief Justice Lumpkin of the Supreme Court of Georgia.
- 8 ³Mary Willis Cobb married first —— Erwin, and second Dr. J. M. Johnson.
- 8 ⁴Mildred Lewis Cobb married Colonel Lucien Glenn.
- 8 ⁵Sarah Martha Cobb married Major John C. Whitner.
- 8 Howell Cobb, son of John Addison Cobb and Sarah Robinson Roots, belongs to history. He was born at "Cherry Hill," Georgia, in 1815. He entered Congress in 1843, was re-elected successively until 1851, when he was elected governor of Georgia. He was made speaker of the House in 1849, and in 1857 Mr. Buchanan appointed him secretary of the treasury, from which position he resigned to share the fortunes of the Southern Confederacy. He left issue as follows: Judge Howell Cobb of the Athens Circuit; Judge Andrew Cobb of the Supreme Court of Georgia; John B. Cobb of Americus, Georgia, and others, a daughter who married Tinsley Rucker.
- 10 Thomas R. R. Cobb, son of Judge Howell Cobb, who married Miss Barker of Atlanta, was a brilliant young lawyer, who easily took the lead in his profession, but consumption claimed him as a victim. He died before he was thirty.
- 9 John B. Cobb married first Mary Lamar, and married second Alice Cutler. They left issue, one of whom, a daughter, married Wm. B. Lowe, Jr., of Atlanta.
- 8 Thos. R. R. Cobb also belongs to history. He was never in political life. He was strictly a lawyer and wedded to his profession. When the war between the states broke out, however, he went to the front and followed the fortunes of war, as brigadier-general, and was killed at the battle of Fredericksburg, December 12, 1862. He left several daughters.

ters, no sons. They married respectively, Harry Jackson, son of General Henry R. Jackson, an Athens gentleman by the name of Hull, and Hoke Smith, who was secretary of the interior in Cleveland's second administration.

- 10 Dr. Marion Hull, a distinguished physician of Atlanta, is a grandson of General Thomas R. R. Cobb.
- 8 Mildred Lewis Cobb, daughter of John Addison Cobb, who married Colonel Lucien Glenn, died in 1900, at an advanced age. Colonel Glenn was a distinguished lawyer. They left issue:

He died very suddenly while yet in the prime of life, about 1900. He had been mayor of the city and solicitor general of the judicial circuit. He married Miss Garrard of Columbus, Georgia. They left issue, one son and two daughters. The family reside for the present in the city of New York, where their daughter, Miss Isa, has for some time been a leader in society. I see from a letter from her that she signs herself "Isa Urquhart Glenn, president general of the Order of the Crown," etc., from which it seems that she is at the head of that branch of "Colonial Dames" who claim "Royal Descent," certainly the most exclusive, if not the most worthy or meritorious, of any of the historical societies.

JOHN LEWIS OF WARNER HALL.

4 John Lewis of Warner Hall, the third of the name in regular succession, was the oldest son of Councilor John Lewis and Elizabeth Warner, born 1692, baptized same year; married Frances Fielding, and as the oldest son inherited Warner Hall and the historic Bell farm, both entailed estates. There is no record evidence in regard to this John Lewis, except church registries and such inferential proof as has been gathered from the records of other members of the Lewis family. He remained in Gloucester, the records of which county having been almost totally destroyed, not even his will could be obtained. It is known from church records that he married Frances Fielding and that they left five children:

Mr. Abraham, several years after the death of Anna Broadus, married Miss Christian of Buckingham county, Virginia, a most worthy and estimable lady, and it proved a fortunate marriage. She is indeed a mother to his orphan daughter. His death was very sudden and indeed tragic. COL. CHARLES LEWIS OF CEDAR CREEK.

5 Charles was the youngest son of John Lewis and Frances Fielding, born, according to the register of Abington Parish, in Caroline county, Virginia, 1729. He was brother of Warner and Fielding Lewis and Nephew of "Charles of Byrd," and Robert of Bellvoir. He married Lucy Taliaferro, daughter of John Taliaferro and Mary Catlett of Snow Creek near Fredericksburg. They had three children: Dr. John Taliaferro Lewis, Charles Augustine Lewis, and Mary Warner Lewis.

6 Dr. John Taliaferro Lewis, oldest son of "Charles of Cedar Creek," was a graduate of Edinburgh College, Scotland. He settled at "Mulberry Green," in Culpepper county, Virginia, where he practiced his profession, successfully and profitably but died in the prime of life. He married first, Hannah Green of Essex county, Virginia, and married second, Susannah Warring, also of Essex. Dr. John Taliaferro Lewis, by his marriage with Hannah Green had only one son, no daughter; Augustine Lightfoot Lewis, who married his cousin, Mary Warner Lewis, daughter of Charles Augustine Lewis of Caroline county, Virginia. By second marriage with Susannah Warring, he had several children. We have only the record, however, of four:

7 ¹Lucy, oldest child of Dr. John Taliaferro Lewis, by his second marriage, was born September 5, 1783. She married Col. John Thom of Culpepper county, Virginia. They left several children, one of whom, Lucy Lewis Thom married Col. William Taylor of Louisiana, a cousin of President Zachary Taylor.

7 ²John Lewis, second child of Dr. John Taliaferro Lewis and Susannah Warring, was born July 18, 1785. He married his cousin, Frances Tasker, daughter of Spencer Ball, Esq., and his wife Bettie Landon, daughter of Robert Carter. John and Frances Tasker Lewis left three sons: John Taliaferro Lewis, Robert Motrum Lewis, and Frank Warring Lewis, all of whom reside in Prince William County, Virginia. They also left a daughter who married Dr. Bowen.

7 ³Warner Lewis third child of Dr. Taliaferro and Susannah (Warring) Lewis, was born December 13, 1786 and resided at Lewis Level, Essex county, Virginia. He was of the "Old County Court," was high sheriff of Essex, and vestryman of South Farnham Parish, in 1820. In 1810 he married his cousin, Susannah Latane, daughter of Wm. Latane, Esq., of Langle, Essex county, Virginia. This Wm. Latane was grandson of the Rev. Lewis Latane, a French Huguenot who fled from France upon the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, first to England, then emigrated to Virginia and took charge of South Farnham Parish in 1700.

- 8 Thomas Warring Lewis, son of Warner and Susannah (Latane) Lewis, was born August 15, 1815. He married August 11, 1842, Ann Ursula, only daughter of Henry Warring Latane of Essex county, Virginia. On the second of June, 1892, Mr. Thomas Warring Lewis, in a letter to Mr. A. St. M. Cliflin of Chicago, gave the lineage of his ancestor, "Charles Lewis of Cedar Creek," which we have copied in these pages, and concluded by saying: "I have seven sons and five daughters who are sources of joy to me in my old age." There is no record, however, of his children or their descendants.
- 6 Mary Warner Lewis, only daughter of "Col. Charles Lewis of Cedar Creek," married Phillip Lightfoot of "Sandy Point," on James River. They resided at Cedar Creek. He lived but a short time and left only one son, Phillip Lightfoot, Caroline county, Virginia.
- 7 Phillip Lightfoot, son of Phillip Lightfoot and Mary Warner Lewis and grandson of "Charles of Cedar Creek," married Sally, daughter of William Bomard, Esq., of Mansfield, near Fredericksburg, Virginia.
- 6 Mary Warner Lewis married second Dr. John Bankhead of Caroline county, Virginia, who was a graduate of Edinburgh, and a nephew of President Monroe. They had two sons: Charles Lewis Bankhead and Dr. Wm. Bankhead.
- 7 Charles Lewis Bankhead married Cary Randolph, granddaughter of Mr. Jefferson. They left many descendants who moved to Missouri years ago.
- 7 Dr. Wm. Bankhead married Dorothea Minor, daughter of Garrett Minor of Fredericksburg, Virginia. They have many descendants in Virginia.
- 6 Charles Augustine Lewis, second son of "Charles of Cedar Creek," was educated at William and Mary. He was a member of the "Old County Court" of Caroline, and in the language of Mr. Thomas Warring Lewis, was the peer of any of his associates. He married Catherine Battaile of Caroline county, Virginia and left six children as follows:

7 ¹Mary Warner, named for her aunt, married her cousin, Charles Augustine Lightfoot Lewis, and lived at Maringo, Spottsylvania county, Virginia.

7 ²Charles Augustine Lewis was a graduate of the University of Virginia, married Elizabeth Goodwin of Blenheim, Caroline county, Virginia and left an only child, Elizabeth Meriwether, who married Professor R. Mas sie of Virginia. He commanded a cavalry company from Caroline in the War of 1812, and saw hard service at Camp Holly, near Norfolk, Virginia.

7 ³Arthur Lewis, a captain in the United States army, died without issue.

7 ⁴Lawrence Battaile Lewis married and removed to Mis souri years ago.

7 ⁵Bettie Battaile Lewis died single.

7 ⁶Rebecca Lewis married her cousin, John Taliferro Lewis of Prince William, and died in Mississippi.

FIRST ZACHARY LEWIS.

This head of the Lewis name in Virginia was not the first that came, but when he did come he came to stay. It may be said of him, as of many other emigrants to Virginia at that period, that he most emphatically "had his hat in his hand" and was prepared for the mission upon which he came. It was about 1692 that Zachary Lewis landed on the "Old Virginia Shore." The first record evidence of his presence in Virginia was a land grant for 500 acres of land in King and Queen county in 1694. His birth is believed to have been about 1650. The name of his wife is unknown, nor is it known whether he married in England, or after he came to Virginia. That he had a number of children there is abundant proof, but little is known of their history beyond that of the second Zachary. It is known that he had a son John who married Sarah Iverson, but little is known definitely of the descendants of this marriage. The records show many families in which the name of Zachary has been perpetuated, and there is no lack of evidence that the first Zachary Lewis left many representatives. On the records of Albemarle county, Virginia, may be found the will of "John Lewis Planter," about whom other genealogists know nothing. He is contemporaneous with six or eight others of the same name, whose identity is known, yet his line of descent has never been traced. The name of Zachary, however, is perpetuated with his descendants and we have unhesitatingly placed him in the Zachary Lewis line. There are doubtless many of the descendants of John Lewis and Sarah Iverson who have been entirely lost sight of.

This name is recognized as a distinct head of one of the branches of the Lewis family, in Virginia.

Whatever may have been said of the identity of the Lewis name, whether in France, or subsequently in England, it is nevertheless true, in spite of the intermarriages between the different lines after coming to Virginia, the distinctness between the respective lines continue to be marked.

The head of this family, as has been seen, first appears on the Virginia records during the last quarter of the seventeenth century, and on the land books the first grant of land to Zachary Lewis is for 500 acres of land in King and Queen county, in 1694, he was probably born about 1650, and believed to have come to Virginia in 1692. He first settled in Middlesex county, in the vicinity of Dragon Swamp, where he laid the foundation of his future fortunes and like other pioneers of this historic family, proceeded to establish his own line, which, having borne his name for more than 200 years, will always be known as the Zachary Lewis line; indeed, it is more than probable that this distinction was observed in England previous to their establishment in Virginia.

It has been said, and is borne out by the facts, that Irish John Lewis of Augusta, in his sons and grandsons, furnished more warriors, officers of rank and distinction, for their country's defence, than any other name and it may be said with equal truth that Zachary and other heads of the Lewis families in eastern Virginia, while furnishing their full quota of soldiers and officers to the army, at the same time led in the professions, and were not behind in the ranks of statecraft; and in this they are still conspicuous.

It is not known, and perhaps will never be ascertained, how many children the first Zachary Lewis had. The Rev. Mr. Hayden mentions only two: Zachary, born 1702, and John, date of birth not given; but it is nevertheless true that there were cotemporaneous with these sons, other Lewises, in whose families is perpetuated the name of Zachary, and as Mrs. Mary Starling Payne used to say: "Nothing less than the most unbounded filial devotion could ever induce anyone to give his son such a name." Owen Lewis, the birth and baptism of whose children appear on the church registry, and who was himself born 1690, was cotemporaneous with the other known sons of the first Zachary Lewis, and his descendants are brought down with the name of Zachary perpetuated in the succeeding generation.

The Rev. Mr. Hayden in his "Virginia Genealogies" devotes a chapter to "The Lewis family," and with the exception of some merely incidental remarks, confines himself entirely to the Zachary Lewis line; but he only gives a limited account of this line, and hence in justice to this branch of the Lewis family, I shall seek to give, as far as possible, a more complete genealogy. In doing this, however, it will be necessary for me to reproduce much that Mr. Hayden has already given, but with some additions and corrections. In dealing with this branch of the family, I shall present them under three general heads:

First Zachary Lewis, emigrant, born about 1650, who came to Virginia 1692. Name of wife unknown.

Second Zachary Lewis, born in Virginia 1702, married Mary Waller 1725.

Third John Lewis, born about 1704, married Sarah Iverson.

SECOND ZACHARY LEWIS.

Born 1702, married Mary Waller, January 3, 1725; and died 1765. His will is probated February, 1765. Mary Waller was born 1699, baptized by the Rev. John Munroe, October 17th of that year, and died March 23, 1781. She was the daughter of Col. John Waller and his wife Dorothy King. The best established traditions, as well as the court records for generations previous to this, go to show that the Lewises of this line were a wealthy family, and this number was no exception to the rule. As a result of a large and lucrative law practice, Mr. Lewis amassed a fortune and left his children wealthy. As an attorney he was a recognized leader, being retained in the most important cases and receiving the largest fees. In his will he names four sons: John, Zachary, Waller and Benjamin; daughters, Mary Meriwether, Betsy Littlepage, Lucy Ford, and Dorothea Smith, and makes his four sons executors; but from the church registers and other records we find the name of Ann Lewis, born November 30, 1726, died August 8, 1784, married Chancellor George Wythe who was one of the most distinguished lawyers and jurists of his age. They were married about 1746.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Chancellor Wythe was born in the county of Elizabeth City in 1726 and died June 8, 1806. He studied law with Mr. Dewey of Prince George county and came to the bar at Williamsburg after 1756. In 1758 he was burgess, at which time Thomas Jefferson came under his instruction, and they were ever afterwards warm friends. In 1764 Mr. Wythe was a member of the Commission of the House which presented resolutions of Remonstrance to the House of Commons. In 1774 he joined the Continental forces against Lord Dunmore. In 1776 he was elected to the Continental Congress and was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

In 1778 Chancellor Wythe was appointed one of the three judges of the High Court of Chancery, and when that court was reorganized in 1788 he was made sole Chancellor, which position he continued to hold the remainder of his life.

An incident in the life of Chancellor Wythe which has never been published is worthy of notice here, as it gives an insight, not only to his own character, but to his fine judgment of the character of others. It was related to the writer by Robert L. Cobbs, an intimate friend and relative of General White, who was surgeon on his staff through the war of 1812, and afterwards read law in his office. As was the custom with Virginia planters at that time, Mr. White, a wealthy Virginia planter, and special friend of Chancellor Wythe, had delivered his entire crop of tobacco to Richmond, and commissioned his son William to attend to the sale for him. The sale having been made, and the money collected, young White fell into the hand of sharpers and was swindled out of the last dollar. Mortified and chagrined at the turn of affairs, he determined never to return home until he could carry with him the full amount of his father's losses. He sought Chancellor Wythe, laid his plans before him, detailing in the meantime his misfortune, requested the loan of enough money to carry him to Nashville, then a frontier town in Tennessee. Having been furnished with the needed amount he set out, a youth of seventeen, on his journey to the "Far West." For several years Mr. White knew nothing of his son except such information as was given him by Chancelor Wythe, and even then he knew nothing of his whereabouts, was only assured that he was determined to reinstate himself in his father's confidence. Confident of the integrity of young White, Chancelor Wythe gave the father such assurances that his confidence in his son was unshaken and he was content to await results. In an incredibly short time the amount with interest, which had been advanced by Chancelor Wythe was returned, and all of Mr. White's losses made good by his son. This youth turned out to be General William White who had command of one of the divisions of General Jackson's army during the war of 1812, and commanded the left wing at New Orleans on the 8th of January, 1815. He had become a distinguished lawyer before the war, and after the close of the war he resigned his commission in the army and resumed the practice in Nashville, Tennessee.

Chancellor Wythe did not live to see White in the zenith of his fame, as he died in 1806, while White, at that time, had just entered upon his brightest career, but he lived to see him prove himself a man, in the redemption of the most sacred pledges of his early life.

Chancelor Wythe married a second time, Elizabeth Talifero of Williamsburg, but we have no account of any children by either marriage. He removed to Richmond in 1789 where he spent the remainder of his life.

3 MARY LEWIS.

3 Mary Lewis, second daughter of Zachary Lewis and Mary Waller, was born January 30, 1728, married Frank Meriwether, son of Col. David Meriwether and his wife Ann Holmes, born 1717. They removed to South Carolina, and had issue: Zachary Lewis, Nicholas Lewis, and Mary Lewis.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

3. JOHN LEWIS.

The third child, in order of age, of Zachary Lewis and Mary Waller, was born October 18, 1729, baptized by the Rev. Rodham Kenner, November 23, 1729, died September 12, 1780. Will dated May 31, 1766. Codicil added 1776. Admitted to record October 19, 1780. He married Ann Lewis, daughter of Robert Lewis of Belvoir and his wife Jane Meriwether, and reference to his descendants will be found under the head of Robert Lewis of Belvoir. The Rev. Mr. Hayden says that John Lewis married, first, Sarah Iverson, but this is altogether improbable. John Lewis, son of the first Zachary, and uncle of this John, married Sarah Iverson, and this fact no doubt confused Mr. Hayden's authorities. All of the circumstances preclude the idea of a previous marriage. Equally erroneous is Mr. Hayden's assertion that John Lewis married Mildred Lewis, as the records and a letter preserved by his descendants positively prove that he married Ann Lewis, a sister of Mildred.

Mr. Lewis had only three sons, John Zachary, Robert and Nicholas. Charles Lewis who married Susan R. Waller and died in Lynchburg, Virginia, 1822, was not a son of this John Lewis. Nicholas Lewis, his son, married Ann Meriwether. Their children were: Eliza, James, Hunter, Susan and Laura Lewis.

While Mr. Lewis does not mention any daughters, the records show, as explained on another page, that he had two daughters: Mary, who married David Wood Meriwether, and Jane who married Zachary Meriwether. (See Records of Spotsylvania.)

3. COLONEL ZACHARY LEWIS.

The second son of Zachary Lewis and Mary Waller was born May 6, 1731, died July 31, 1803. Will dated February 20,

GENEALOGIES OF THE

1803, and probated in Spotsylvania county. Married May 8, 1771, Ann Overton Terrell of Louisa county, Virginia, daughter of Richmond Terrell. The records show that Col. Lewis was made captain of the Spotsylvania foot company February, 1758, and was also an officer in the Revolutionary army. He left children as follows:

- 4 ¹Ann Overton Lewis, born April 23, 1772, married July 28, 1795, James McClure Scott.
- 4 ²Richmond, born March 14, 1774, died July 31, 1831; married first, October 28, 1802, Elizabeth Travers Daniel, second, September 3, 1830, Margaret B. Richardson.
- 4 ³Cadwalader Lewis, born November 25, 1776, died February 4, 1796.
- 4 ⁴Mary Waller Lewis, born April 10, 1779; married John Hill, 1797.
- 4 ⁵Huldah Fountain Lewis, born February 4, 1781, died October 25, 1863; married September 23, 1802, Waller Holladay.
- 4 ⁶John Lewis, born February 25, 1784, died August 27, 1858; married November 21, 1808, Jean Wood Daniel.
- 4 ⁷Eliza Lewis, born May 27, 1786, died September 4, 1816; married Walter Raleigh Daniel.
- 4 ⁸William Lewis, born August 20, 1788, died same day.
- 4 ⁹Addison Murdock Lewis, born September 26, 1789, died August 27, 1857; married first, December, 1810, Sarah Billingsby, second, March 2, 1821, Sarah Ann Minor.

3. WALLER LEWIS.

The third son of Zachary Lewis and Mary Waller appears on the records of Spotsylvania county as one of the executors of his brother John's will, and his will is on record in the same county. Mr. Hayden gives his birth September 11, 1739. It is more than probable that this is a traditional approximation, as Waller Lewis was married previous to September 1, 1757, at which time the will of Robert of Belvoir was written, which would have made him, at that time not quite eighteen, and it is not known how long previous to this time he had been married; from which it follows almost necessarily that Waller Lewis was born at least two or three years previous to the date given by Mr. Hayden. Not until very recently has it been possible to break through the crust, so to speak, which has hidden the history and family of Waller Lewis from posterity; and even now it has not been possible to obtain anything like a complete record.

Waller Lewis, M. D., married Sarah, daughter of Robert Lewis, previous to September 1, 1757. They had seven children, as will be seen by reference to the family line of Robert Lewis of Belvoir, under the head of his daughter, Sarah, who married Waller Lewis, but only the line of one of their children has been wholly rescued from oblivion, that of Elizabeth, born 1772, who married John Woolfolk in 1791 and removed to Kentucky 1811; and this has been done by the untiring zeal and persistent energy of the wife of one of her descendants.

3. BENJAMIN LEWIS.

The youngest son of Zachary Lewis and Mary Waller was born in King and Queen county, Virginia, June 16, 1744. He married Martha Bickerton, of Hanover county, Virginia, but the date of his marriage is unknown. He left five children:

4 ¹Benjamin Lewis, M. D., died unmarried.

4 ⁴Alice Lewis married a Mr. Jewett.

GENEALOGIES OF THE

4⁵ Elizabeth Lewis married George Greenhaw, and left several children, one of whom (Samuel), married Mary Johnston, whose daughter married Rev. Frances Marsh Baker, rector of Grace Church, Richmond, Virginia.

4. RICHMOND LEWIS, M. D.

The oldest son of Col. Zachary Lewis and his wife Ann Overton Terrell, was born March 14, 1774, in Spotsylvania county, Virginia, died July 31, 1831; married Elizabeth Travers Daniel, daughter of Travers and Frances Monuers Daniel. He married second, Margaret B. Richardson. He first located at Urbana, Middlesex county, Virginia, and in 1800 at Fredericksburg. He was surgeon, United States army during the war of 1812.

4. ANN OVERTON LEWIS.

Oldest daughter of Col. Zachary Lewis and his wife, Ann Overton Terrell, was born in Spotsylvania county, Virginia, April 23, 1772, baptized by Rev. Robert Barret, June 7, 1772; married July 28, 1795, James McClure Scott, M. D.

Dr. Scott was from Pennsylvania and, as informed by one of his grandsons, was the only one of his family who ever came South. There is no account of any children by this marriage, and the records show that Ann Overton Lewis died shortly after marriage.

Dr. Scott married a second time, Mildred Thomson, daughter of Waddy Thomson and his wife Mary Lewis Cobbs, daughter of Col. Robert Lewis of Belvoir, Albemarle county, Virginia, and had two sons: John Thomson Scott and James McClure Scott, both of whom married back into the Zachary Lewis family, daughters of Dr. Richmond Lewis, and nieces of their father's first wife.

The marriages in this family go to show somewhat the extent to which the different branches of the Lewis name have merged. Two sons of Zachary Lewis, Waller and John "The honest lawyer," married daughters of Robert Lewis of Belvoir, while another daughter of Robert, Mildred Lewis, married a great-grandson of John Lewis of Henrico, and these are only a few of the many instances of similar intermarriages between the different branches of this name.

John Lewis of Llangollen was no exception to his family, but was simply another variety of genius. A ripe scholar and a man of letters, and although Mr. Hayden says that he failed to find his name among the Alumni of any of the colleges that he examined, that is no proof that he was not an alumnus of some one that he did not examine. Certain it is that as a scholar his rank was equal to the standard of the best universities. A lawyer by profession, but all of his tastes turned to literature and he employed his time principally as an educator.

3. ELIZABETH (BETTIE) LEWIS.

Daughter of Zachary Lewis and Mary Waller, born October 9, 1732, married first, 1760, Col. James Littlepage, of Hanover county, and second, March 5, 1774, Major Lewis Holaday of Spottsylvania county, Virginia. By her first marriage with Col. Littlepage she had two children:

- 4¹General Lewis Littlepage, born December 9, 1762, died July 19, 1802; he never married.
- 4²Mary Littlepage, born 1764, married Robert Shelbe Coleman. By her second marriage with Major Holaday she had two children.
- 4³Ann Holaday, born April 18, 1775; died January 26, 1846, married Hugh Corrans Boggs.
- 4⁴Waller Holaday, born August 17, 1776, died August 27, 1863, married September 23, 1803, Huldah Fountain Lewis.

4 GENERAL LEWIS LITTLEPAGE.

Lewis Littlepage is known to history with this title, which was doubtless conferred by one or more of the European Countries, as he was in the service of France, Spain and Poland. His was strictly a European career. His history reads like a romance and belongs not only to the country, but to the civilized world, and, for lack of space, will not be reproduced here; only brief references will be made to it:

At the age of 17, delicate, precocious, and of an unnatural mental development, Lewis Littlepage, by permission of his guardian, left America, on what was at first intended as a European tour, but he entered at once actively into European politics, and as above stated, was at different times in the service of France, Spain and Poland, and did not permanently return to America until a short time before his death. Lewis Littlepage died July 19, 1802, in Fredericksburg, Virginia, and was buried by the Masonic Fraternity with the following inscription on his tomb: "Here lies the body of Lewis Littlepage, who was born in the county of Hanover, in the State of Virginia, December 19, 1762, and departed this life July 19, 1802, aged 39 years and 7 months. Honored for many years with the esteem and confidence of the unfortunate Stanislaus Augustus, King of Poland. He held under that monarch until he lost his throne, the most distinguished offices among which was that of Ambassador to Russia. He was by him created the Knight of St. Stanislaus, chamberlain and confidential secretary in his cabinet, and acted as his special envoy in the most important negotiations. Of talents, military as well as civil, he served with credit, as an officer of high rank, in different armies. In private life he was charitable, generous and just, and in the various public offices which he filled, he acted with uniform magnanimity, fidelity and honor."

As has been said of John Lewis of Llangollen, Rev. Addison Murdock Lewis was no exception to his family, but his genius was of an exceptional kind. While his uncle John Lewis of Spotsylvania was gifted with the rare faculty of combining great legal ability with stern and rigid honesty, and his brother, John of Llangollen, excelled in scholarship and literature, and his cousin Lewis Littlepage filled with distinction the most difficult positions in European politics, the Rev. Murdock Lewis threw the weight of all of his great gifts, and bent all of his energies, to the building up of the Master's cause, during a period of nearly half a century. He was a Baptist minister, and in the years between 1810 and 1820, he traveled through Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, preaching and organizing churches. In 1828 he removed to Kentucky and took charge of a church and a school for girls at Georgetown. In 1833 he settled on a farm in Franklin county, taking charge of Buck Run Baptist church. In 1839 he removed his family to Howard county, Missouri. In 1855 he resided in Glasgow. He died in Huntsville, Randolph county, Missouri, August 27, 1857, having been forty-eight years in the ministry.

3 LUCY LEWIS.

- 3 Lucy Lewis, daughter of Zachary Lewis second and Mary Waller, born December 5, 1735, married a Mr. Ford of Amelia county, Virginia. They left several children and as a Waller Ford was visiting Mr. Holladay of Virginia who was from Kentucky, it is probable they moved to Kentucky after marriage.

3 DOROTHY LEWIS.

PLANTER JOHN LEWIS.

In will book 4, pages 42 to 45, Albemarle county, Virginia, will be found a will, written July, 1786, codicil 1792, and June, 1794, probated January 6, 1800, beginning with the significant language: "I, John Lewis, Planter, etc." In Albemarle and adjoining counties at that time there were forty or fifty of that name, and the most of them were planters. There were very few people of any means in Virginia at that time who were not planters, but there were many by the name of John Lewis who were also doctors and lawyers and some few were preachers; and one of the name was known as "the honest lawyer," but this old ancestor chose to designate himself in a way that could not be misunderstood, as no one had ever selected this designation.

This member of the Lewis family seems to have effectually escaped the attention of the genealogists, and even the most intelligent and best posted of his descendants seem to have known nothing of him from a genealogical standpoint. As a genealogist I claim him by right of discovery, never having seen any reference to him by any other genealogist, or found any trace to him in any family records. I found him on the records of Albemarle county and run down the descendants of his daughter, Sarah Cobbs, and his son, Owen Lewis, to the present generation, before these descendants knew, or had any idea of what line of the Lewis family they had descended from.

There is no record trace of the father of Planter John Lewis, but all of the circumstances point very clearly to the conclusion that he belonged to the Zachary Lewis line, and that he was a son of the first Zachary Lewis, and brother of the second Zachary who married Mary Waller. The Reverend Mr. Hayden gives the names of only two of the sons of the first Zachary: Zachary, born 1702, and John, birth not given; but there is no doubt that there were others, and perhaps younger sons.

LEWIS AND KINDRED FAMILIES.

Owen Lewis appears on the church register of the Theological Seminary, Fairfax county, Virginia, cotemporaneously with the second Zachary, and as the name comes down in the same line with that of Zachary, he was no doubt an older brother, the birth of his oldest child being given March 19, 1714, and Planter John Lewis has a son Owen, and Zachary is perpetuated in his family.

The will of Planter John Lewis names two sons Owen and John; and six daughters, all married: Elizabeth Davis, Ann Tindell, Sarah Cobbs, Mary Nevill, Susan Wingfield, and Lucy Davenport. The names of the six married daughters of Planter John Lewis have gone to make up some of the most prominent families of Virginia, many of whom have played a conspicuous part in the stirring events of the past century.

4 Sarah, who married Edmund Cobbs, was the ancestress of Bishop Nicholas Hamner Cobbs of the Diocese of Alabama, and others of the same family, distinguished in other professions, will be mentioned more prominently under the head of the Cobbs family.

Of John Lewis, son of "Planter John," nothing is known further than what has been obtained from the records of Albemarle county. From these records we find that he was born 1749 and died 1804. His will was admitted to probate February 6, 1804. Owen Lewis and Zachary Lewis, brother and nephew, and John Staples are named as executors, and provision is made for wife and three children: Sally Ming, a married daughter; Elizabeth Anderson Lewis; and John Waddy Lewis.

4 Owen Lewis, second son of "Planter John" Lewis, is the only member of that family, numerous as it is, whose descendants I have been able to trace, except Sarah Cobbs, whose line will be taken up under the head of the Cobbs family, as before stated, and traced more fully. Deed book 6, page 204, Albemarle county, Virginia, shows Owen Lewis to have been born 1752; and will book 4, page 281, shows that he died 1812. He married Miss Sallie Perkins about 1775. In the settlement of the estate July 6, 1812, the children of Owen Lewis are named
